Cold to Stay In D. C. Area; U. S. Urged To Save Oil

High of 36 Today, Overnight Low Of 24 Forecast; One Death Listed

Winter's worst cold wave gave the Eastern half of the Nation the blue shivers yesterday, bringing a Government request for 15 per cent reduction in fuel oil, heating gas and gasoline.

Slight respite was seen from temperatures which dipped to 13 degrees in Washington early yesterday and accounted for one death by freezing.

An early-morning low of 20 degrees is forecast today, with a mercury rise to about 36 degrees under partly cloudy skies during the day. Late afternoon will bring strong northwest winds, but the low reading tonight is expected to be 24 degrees, the Weather Bureau said.

More of Same Tomorrow

Tomorrow will be partly cloudy and cold, with temperatures below freezing, the forecast said.

Seeking a quick answer to fuel supply shortages, Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug told an emergency conference of fuel coordinators from the District and 20 other States that voluntary consumer curtailment is necessary.

J. Thomas Kennedy, District superintendent of weights and measurts, said last night no fuel oil emergency exists in Washington, but that the "kerosene situation is acute and for oil burner distillates, it is tight."

"We'll have to conserve now to have fuel for the rest of the winter," he warned.

Coldest Since 1927

The low reading here yesterday morning was the coldest January 15 since 1927. Temperatures as low as 6 degrees were recorded unofficially in outlying areas.

As the city stirred to life in the shivering cold yesterday morning, the frozen body of 65-year-old Johnnie Morris, a trash collector, was found in the cab of a Merchants Candy and Tobacco Company truck at 4th and Morse sts. ne.

Of no fixed address, the man had been sleeping in the trucks, police said. His body was found by a company employe, Henry Frazier, when he came to work.

Elsewhere, at least two deaths were attributed to the biting cold—one in New York and one in West Virginia.

Florida Bundles Up

The chill nipped well below the southern frost belt, left suntanned Florida vacationers bundling up against Miami's low of 33.3 degrees. The record there is 27 degrees in 1917.

Fuel shortages and lack of heating facilities in the customarily warmer southern States increased suffering, but damage to the multi-million dollar citrus crop in Florida was regarded thus far as "inconsequential." The air was dry and frosts were light.

Nearer the Capital area, Cumberland, Md., had a record low—one degree above zero. Oakland, in Garrett County, had 13 below; Frederick had four above and Frostburg, 11 below.

Virginia's lowest temperatures hit the four southwest counties—Wise, Dickenson, Bland and Russell—all with five degrees below zero.

In some parts of Minnesota, the temperature dropped as low as 25

Va. Bill Offered To Outlaw Reds

A bill to outlaw communism and a joint resolution branding Henry A. Wallace's organization as Communist-supported were among actions setting off the second session of the Virginia House of Delegates at Richmond yesterday.

A bill to increase maximum unemployment compensation benefits from the present $15 to $20 weekly, with a tax reduction formula to save employers an estimated six million dollars annually, was placed in the State senate hopper. (Story on Page 18.

Another Career Appointment

Burke, D. C. Postmaster, Given No. 2 Job in Department

VINCENT BURKE
Moves Up

Vincent C. Burke, Washington postmaster, yesterday was nominated by President Truman to be First Assistant Postmaster General, a position second only to that of the Postmaster General.

When the President made the announcement at his press conference he was reminded that the appointment of Burke and the recent naming of Jesse M. Donaldson as Postmaster General gives the postal service a "professional service."

Mr. Truman admitted this was so and remarked that Burke has a record of 41 years of continuous service in the postal ranks.

Like Donaldson, whose old position he succeeds to, Burke is a career postal man. His appointment continues the new policy of naming career men to top positions in the Post Office Department rather than politicians.

Mr. Truman also commented that in leaving his lifetime Civil Service position as Washington postmaster for the job of No. 2 man in the Post Office Department, Burke will be taking a lesser salary. His salary as postmaster here has been $11,400 a year.

The elevation of Burke to the position rather than a politician was predicted recently by Jerry Kluttz, author of Federal Diary which appears in The Washington Post.

A Democrat, Burke was born in Louisville, Ky., January 27, 1890. He was appointed a clerk in the postoffice at Louisville on January 19, 1907. He remained there until January 5, 1914, when he was appointed to the Cincinnati office of the Post Office Inspection Service.

Four years later, on March 31, 1918, he returned to the Louisville postoffice, this time as a cashier. He returned to the Inspection Service on July 10, 1922, and spent the next 11 years on assignments throughout the country.

During this period as a postal inspector, Burke made frequent trips to Washington. James A. Farley, then the new Postmaster General, recognized him as a man of ability and on May 4, 1933, appointed him Deputy First Assistant Postmaster General.

Firemen Given Immunity in Murphy Trial

Commissioners Order Protection for All Witnesses but Chief

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Immunity against retaliation was granted firemen witnesses yesterday in the trial of their chief, Clement Murphy.

Ordered by the District Commissioners, the ruling protects witnesses in the trial from "disciplinary action, reprisals, or retaliation."

It does not apply to Murphy himself.

The blanket immunity has no known local precedent, but is somewhat similar to protection given those who appear before some congressional committees.

Murphy's chief counsel, Martin F. O'Donoghue, unsuccessfully sought to refuse the immunity for his own witnesses on the grounds that it "branded" them. "There are responsible men coming here, they don't want immunity," he declared.

Ruling Called Undignified

He also objected to the language in the order, which he termed "undignified for the Commissioners to use." This remark was stricken from the record.

The Commissioners' order was requested by the prosecution to enable prosecution witnesses to testify on previously unreported acts of inefficiency in the department, if there were any such acts, without fear of resulting disciplinary action.

As Murphy's trial continued through its fourth day of testimony-taking yesterday, Attorney William J. Rowan, counsel for Murphy's chief attacker, Capt. Joseph D. Conroy, officially entered the proceedings—in a highly limited capacity.

Rowan Can Aid Witnesses

The civilian trial board, headed by Austin F. Canfield, granted permission for Rowan to appear as personal counsel for prosecution witnesses. He will have no part in the regular trial proceedings.

Rowan is also attorney for Local 36, International Association of Firefighters, which is headed by Conroy, who touched off the present charges against Murphy.

When the trial opened, Rowan

Police Board To Rule Today In Clegg Case

Illegal Detention Charge Withdrawn Against Two

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A three-man trial board took under consideration at 3 p. m. yesterday charges lodged against three policemen for the alleged illegal arrest, detention, and mistreatment of Julius Willie Clegg last August.

Inspector Clement Cox, chairman, announced three hours later that the board would continue deliberations and would announce a decision at 9:15 a. m. this morning.

In the final minutes of the four-day hearings, the Corporation Counsel's Office withdrew one of the charges—illegal detention—preferred against Special Investigator David S. Ennis and Sergt. Alex K. Kapsol of the headquarters sex squad. Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch told the board the hearing evidence did not justify that particular charge.

Assault Charge Pressed

Prosecutor Gasch, however, pressed an assault charge against the two officers, alleged to have struck Clegg while interrogating him the evening of August 2.

The prosecutor in his final argument also urged a verdict of illegal arrest and imprisonment against Pvt. John G. Gibboney of the First Precinct.

Private Gibboney arrested Clegg, a Negro war veteran, at 6 a. m. August 2 at 13th and E sts. nw., on suspicion of molesting a white woman. The woman failed to identify Clegg as a molester, but Clegg was held for 34 hours, allegedly incommunicado, on the charge of "investigation."

Clegg, 26, of 1106 21st st. ne., testified that at the time of the arrest he was returning to his job

Mrs. Hobbs' Admits Brother Asked $1000 Loan of Laughlin

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A brother of Mrs. Esther Pickard Hobbs, former sweetheart of Attorney James J. Laughlin, wired the lawyer for $1000 in January, 1947, the month Mrs. Hobbs told Laughlin of her pregnancy.

Laughlin termed the telegram "a demand" in his cross-examination of the young woman yesterday in District Court.

This interpretation was disrupted by Mrs. Hobbs, who said it was merely a "request" for a loan because "you (Laughlin) had said you'd help him . . . to let you know if he needed it."

The lawyer, who, together with Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., is standing trial for abortion performed on Mrs. Hobbs, had previously declared he was victim of "blackmail."

Later, Mrs. Hobbs testified that before the illegal operation in Washington, of which the men are accused, Laughlin had tried to arrange an abortion by a doctor in Baltimore.

This latter charge boomeranged on Laughlin who himself had opened up that line of questioning in attempting to show that he wanted to arrange for an out-of-town haven where the child could be born.

"Isn't it a fact," Laughlin asked, "that I told you even though I was not responsible . . . that because of my friendship

3 Justices Retire From Racial Case

Rutledge, Jackson Own Property in Covenanted Areas; Reed Also Steps Out

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Six Supreme Court justices—a bare quorum—set yesterday to rule on the legal force of the covenants that bar Negroes, Jews and others from hundreds of neighborhoods.

As the hearing began, the other three judges—Rutledge, Reed and Jackson—drew their robes about them and quietly stepped off the bench.

There was no reason given for their withdrawing from the great case, and there was none called for. The law leaves it up to a justice himself whether or not he shall sit in any case. Tradition is that if a justice feels he can give a fair hearing he sits, and if he doubts that he can he does not.

Justice Rutledge's home at 4928 Indian ln. nw. is subject to rigid covenants, which cover that whole Spring Valley neighborhood. The covenant—which is to be found in the Land Records of the District—says no property in the area shall be used or owned by Negroes, Jews, Persians, Armenians or Syrians.

In Force for Some Time

Justice Jackson's old home near Jamestown, N. Y., also is subject to a racial restrictive covenant.

Both covenants have been in force for some years. Neither Rutledge nor Jackson had anything to do with imposing them; they were on the properties when the justices bought them.

Justice Reed had not taken part in any phase of the covenant preme Court yesterday. The justice last night told The Washingcases that were before the Suton Post any statement that was to be made about his taking part in the case would come when the court gave its decision, but not before.

The covenants are an artificial prop to property rights estimated at many millions of dollars. Those who defend them say the Constitution secures these property rights. They say, too, that they have the right to choose their neighbors, and to make their choice stick by making contracts about their own land.

Those attacking the covenants say they violate the Constitutional rights of the Negroes, Jews and others who have bought homes that were subject to them, and—when their new neighbors objected—were ordered by the courts to move out. They are asking the courts to say the covenants are against the Constitution and public policy, and that the courts must not enforce them.

Up to Conservatives

The withdrawal of the three justices yesterday left this issue up to three of the so-called conservative majority of the court — Frankfurter, Burton and Chief Justice Vinson — and to three of the "liberal" minority—Murphy, Black and Douglas.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman opened the four-hour debate with a declaration that the United States Government regards the covenants as invasions of the Constitutional rights of citizens, violations of Federal law and offenses against the public policy of the Nation.

The solicitor general took up all four of the cases before the court. One came from St. Louis, the Missouri Supreme Court having ordered J. D. Shelley and his wife

Taft Wants Budget Cut Three Billion

Republican Leader Would Include Sharp Reduction In Marshall Plan

Senator Robert A. Taft last night called for a three-billion-dollar net cut in the President's budget, including a deep slash in Marshall Plan funds.

The Senate Republican "boss," running for the GOP presidential nomination, suggested a billion dollars could be cut from European recovery and military operation outlays in the next fiscal year.

In a speech released here, for delivery before the Rhode Iesland Republican Club in Providence, R. I., he proposed by implication a far greater reduction in the overall plan.

Basis for Cut Outlined

"If the total of the Marshall Plan expenditures is held to five billion dollars, including food for occupied areas in Europe, apparently not more than 3.8 billion would be spent in fiscal 1949 for ERP and occupied countries in Europe," he said.

"This is the basis for a one-billion-dollar saving in the 1949 budget for European relief."

The President asked appropriation of 6.8 billion for the first 15 months of operating the Marshall Plan, but said only four billions would be spent next year. He asked 822 million dollars for food in occupied territories.

Taft's total for these two items of only five billion dollars thus implied a 2.6 billion cut in the President's proposals.

Marshall's Position Assailed

In his second reply within a week to a Presidential message, Taft struck out at Secretary of State Marshall as well. He said Marshall's position, that the recovery program should not be cut, is "utterly indefensible."

Taft charged the amount asked by Marshall is "based on the vaguest of estimates" and supported by "a propaganda carefully organized out of the State Department."

He said a gross reduction of four billion can be made in the budget if foreign aid estimates "are not regarded as sacrosanct", but added:

"Undoubtedly, there will be some supplemental requests and it may not be possible to make a net cut greater than three billion dollars."

His three billion figure squares with the proposed budget cut being discussed by other prominent members of his party but Taft was the first to declare for a specific Marshall Plan slash.

He said the President in addition included funds for "almost every domestic spending project" and many of these should be reduced.

Powerful Air Arm Favored

And he called for a complete "recasting" of the military budget to eliminate funds for universal military training and build up our air arm to a strength "clearly superior to that of any other country."

Summing up, he told the Rhode Island Republicans:

"I estimate that we can continue our generous policy of extending to Europe as much aid as can really be effective to assist them in restoring a stable economy. I estimate that we can recast our military budget to make it effective for national security and defense. And I believe we can still save net about three billion dollars.

"On this basis there will be a

Very Free Speech Guaranteed

NLRB Examiner Decides It's Ladylike to Cuss in Picket Line

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A picket—even a lady picket—is within the law when she calls a strike-breaker — even a lady strike-breaker —"a "dirty scab," "dirty bastard" or "dirty S. O. B."

This was the judicial opinion of a National Labor Relations Board trial examiner, announced yesterday. The Taft-Hartley Act, he said, guarantees the right of free speech, even when it becomes very free indeed.

The examiner, Charles W. Whittemore, was called to rule on these impolite goings-on in connection with a strike at the Sunset Line & Twine Co. at Petaluma, Calif.

About 100 employes were involved, most of them women and, to judge from the record, very few of them ladies of the old school. Although they made fishing lines they belonged to the CIO union of longshoremen, a category of workers who have never been noted for slavish observance of Victorian forms of speech.

Some six of the employes returned to work after the strike was called. A number of strikers did a number of things, including name-calling, to show their dim view of the strike-breakers.

But none of their acts, Whittemore concluded, "coerced" the strikers. Dealing with the question of the ugly names, he was obliged to consider a new legal question, not yet decided by previous cases under the Taft-Hartley Act.

That law says that the expression of any views shall not be considered an unfair labor practice, providing the expression "contains no threat of reprisal or force or promise of benefit."

Now clearly, Whittemore concluded, the terms "dirty scabs" etc. etc. were expressions of views.

Equally clearly, they were not complimentary. Indeed, the examiner admitted, "the spectacle of women hurling epithets at other women on the public street is hardly edifying."

But, he went on, "The examiner does not presume that he is asked to appraise the relative niceties of picket-line parlance . . . a court long ago said, 'the nomenclature of the strike is not the language of the parlor.'"

So, he concluded, the question boiled down to whether the comments of one line-and-twine worker to another line-and-twine worker included the coercive elements banned by the law.

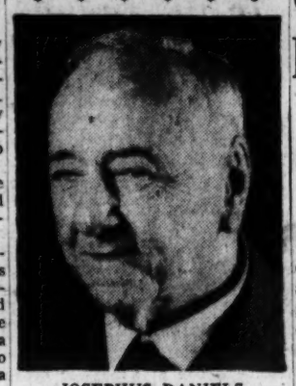
Said Whittemore: "The terms used by the girls in this case—'scabs, bastards,' and 'S. B.'s'—although unrestrained, contain no apparent 'threat of reprisal or force,' and clearly no 'promise of benefit.'"

Clearly.

Was Navy Head and Envoy

Josephus Daniels, Editor And Public Servant, Is Dead

(See Obituary and Comment on Page B-2)



JOSEPHUS DANIELS
Passes

Josephus Daniels, who did many things, but first of all was a newspaperman, died at 1:20 p. m. yesterday at Raleigh, N. C. He was 85.

He was Secretary of the Navy during World War I. He was Ambassador to Mexico from 1933 to 1941.

He once called himself the "managing editor of the Navy" and "foreign correspondent in Mexico."

The venerable newspaperman-statesman, whose first love was the Raleigh, N. C., News and Observer, of which he was editor and publisher, died of pneumonia. He was forced to bed January 4 by a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. He had been in a coma since last Saturday.

At Mr. Daniels' bedside in his home when he died were his four sons, Josephus, jr., Jonathan and Frank, executives of the family newspaper, and Dr. Worth B. Daniels of 1516 28th st. nw.

President Truman, upon learning of Mr. Daniels' death, expressed "very profound grief on the news of the death of a great American."

Mr. Truman's press secretary, Charles G. Ross, said the President had sent a personal message of condolence to Mr. Daniels' son, Jonathan, a former White House secretary.

Deep regret was expressed in Mexico City by Mexican President Miguel Aleman and high Mexican government officials. During Mr. Daniels' last illness, President Aleman received regular reports by telephone from Raleigh, N. C., on his condition.

While Ambassador to Mexico, Mr. Daniels maintained a cordial friendship with young Miguel Aleman and attended his inauguration as governor of Vera Cruz State during the Cardenas administration. Despite his poor health, Mr. Daniels returned to Mexico City in 1946 to attend Senor Aleman's inauguration as president.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Edenton st. Methodist Church in Raleigh of which Mr. Daniels had been a member for many years. Burial will be in the family plot at Raleigh where his wife, who died in 1943, is buried.

Draft Called Alternative to Aiding Europe

Forrestal and Royall Say Defense Budget Would Go Up Sharply

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Vastly greater defense expenditures, and perhaps a return to conscription, were pictured to Congress yesterday as grim alternatives to passing a European recovery program.

Defense Secretary Forrestal told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that "if this were not going through I would feel constrained to come to Congress and ask for a very substantial increase in our expenditures—on the order of 25 or 50 per cent." The present defense budget approximates 11 billion dollars.

At the same time Army Secretary Royall, testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the Army and Air Force would ask for an additional $2,500,000,000 in the absence of a recovery program, and probably would have to return to use "some method of selective service to bring Army manpower up to the necessary strength.

Called Alternative

In other words, asked Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), the alternative is a European recovery program "or else going back to the draft?"

Royall replied that this was the "logical conclusion" unless increased pay or some other method could be found to make voluntary enlistment more attractive.

The testimony of the two defense officials followed warnings by Secretary Marshall last week that failure to promote European economic recovery would throw western Europe into a "dictatorship of police states."

The two committees, however,

2 Hurt in GSI Strike Violence

Two persons were hurt and three arrested yesterday when violence flared in the 11-day-old GSI cafeteria strike.

2 Bills Seek Postal Saving Interest Cut

Moves to Drop Rate From 2 to 1 Per Cent Opposed by Agency

Two bills now before Congress would cost 4,200,000 postal savings depositors something like 24 million dollars a year in curtailed interest if enacted into law.

Both bills provide for reducing the interest on postal savings from 2 per cent a year to 1 per cent. One, introduced by Senator Buck (R., Del.), was reported favorably last July by the Senate Civil Service Committee. The other, introduced in the House, January 7, by Representative Twyman (R., Ill.), was referred to its Civil Service Committee, where hearings have not yet been scheduled.

The four million depositors throughout the Nation last December 31 held certificates for savings of $3,411,000,000. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, they had been paid $47,722,114.78 interest at 2 per cent.

Among them were 75,000 depositors in the District, who had entrusted $27,459,116 of their savings to the Government. District Postmaster Vincent C. Burke said interest paid these depositors could not be calculated with accuracy apart from the national figure.

In a letter to the Senate Civil Service Committee last summer, then Acting Secretary of the Treasury A. L. M. Wiggins supported the Buck measure. He wrote that the Postal Saving interest rate of 2 per cent was "out of line" with that paid by private banks and that the current rate "involves a substantial Government subsidy in the form of an unnecessarily high interest charge on the public debt."

The Postoffice Department, through Postmaster General J. M. Donaldson, opposed halving the interest rate because it felt the result would be a reduction in gross revenue because investors would choose some other form of security such as the Series B Bond. These bonds, Donaldson wrote, increased in value 33 1/3 per cent in 10 years, while a postal saving deposit in the same time earned 20 per cent at the present rate of interest.

Buck's bill provides simply for a reduction in interest rate to 1 per cent. The House measure introduced by Twyman provides for a reduction to 1 per cent, with the Postal Savings trustees empowered by unanimous vote to increase the rate by fourths to 2 per cent.

Thomas Cotton Speculation Being Probed by Senate Unit

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Speculation in cotton by a former chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), was under investigation by a special Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday.

The operations of Thomas and of Mrs. Edith Thomas, identified as his wife, as well as those of a number of Thomas' friends, will be investigated at a public hearing of the subcommittee soon, Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) said.

The revelation of the probe into Thomas' dealings came shortly after it was revealed that Edwin W. Pauley has delayed his resignation as special assistant to Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall until after January 23.

Pauley, under fire as a bigtime market speculator, will face Harold E. Stassen, Republican presidential aspirant, who first named Pauley as a market speculator, on that day.

Last night Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, told the Economic Club of New York, that the present search for Government insiders who have profited recently in commodity market operations, was making it difficult for the Government to employ first-class men.

Ruhr Strike Feared Part Of Planned Red Series

General Walkout Discussed as 25,000 Leave Jobs; Leader Says Riots Threaten

Duesseldorf, Germany, Jan. 15 (AP).—A warning of widespread strikes and even hunger riots in the Ruhr was voiced by the chief labor union official of the British zone tonight as British and American chiefs centered attention on a reported Communist scheme for sabotage of the Marshall Plan.

Communist labor leaders were reported advocating a 24-hour general strike as a protest against food shortages.

Hans Boeckler, chief of the German Federation of Trade Unions in the British zone, told reporters he knew nothing about plans for a general walkout but said there would be widespread strikes and disorders when the people are hungry enough. He said he foresaw the possibility of raids on stores, bakeries and the countryside.

25,000 Already Out

He declared coal loading might cease tomorrow unless the food situation was eased, but said his organization would not sponsor a strike and that strikes would not take place because workers wanted to obstruct the Marshall Plan.

A meeting of British administrators and German leaders, including Boeckler, broke up without a solution. The British told the gathering the food crisis "is your problem."

Despite Boeckler's statement, it was reported unofficially that 100,000 Ruhr workers, not including coal miners, would walk out tomorrow in Muehlheim, Duisburg and Dinslaken. In Oberhausen, 25,000 already are on strike.

The number of workers in the so-called "hunger area"—the Ruhr, Cologne and Aachen—generally is estimated at about four millions, of whom about three millions are in the Ruhr.

Report on 'Protocol M5

The Oberhausen workers, mostly in the metal, chemical and building trades, walked out this morning in a food shortage protest despite an appeal by the Federation of Trade Unions to stay on the job. No miners were involved.

Publication of "Protocol M"—a purported Communist plan for German strikers by March 15 to wreck the "so-called Marshall Plan" and assigning a "key position" in the fight to German Communists and labor unions—fell right into the middle of the trade union discussions.

British officials said they believed the food situation, which is the present occasion for strikes, had

Airborne Lifeboat Responding to U. S. Ship's SOS

Westover Field, Mass., Jan. 15 (AP).—An air transport command Flying Fortress, equipped with an airborne lifeboat slung beneath its fuselage, took off from Bermuda today to aid the freighter Adrian Victory, which radioed an SOS after its cargo shifted and the vessel listed badly.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—The Argentine merchantman Estrella Australia reported this afternoon she had arrived within sight of the American freighter Adrian Victory, in distress 345 miles southeast of Cape Henry after her phosphate cargo shifted.

The Coast Guard cutter Mendota sped through seas whipped by 28-mile northwest winds toward the stricken freighter.

Carrying a crew of 53, the 7606-ton Adrian Victory asked two vessels to stand by. One is the SS. Trail Blazer, which replied to the S O S, but did not give her position. The other is believed to be the Estrella Australia.

The Adrian Victory sailed from Port Tampa January 9 for Bremen.

Mexico City, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—A boatload of survivors of the sunken Honduran motorship Carolina have been rescued off the Yucatan Coast and taken to the port of Progreso, according to dispatches today. The number of survivors was not mentioned in the dispatches. The Carolina sank several days ago off the Port of Palmas, Yucatan.

16 Nations Put Off Conference on Aid

Will See How Wind Blows in Congress, French and British Envoys Tell Lovett

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The sixteen Marshall Plan countries of Europe will delay holding another conference on recovery problems until they see more clearly what Congress is going to do.

In spite of Congressional demands for speedier and more effective European cooperation, the delay was agreed upon yesterday in a talk at the State Department between Undersecretary Lovett and the British and French Ambassadors.

Senators Lodge (R., Mass.) and Connally (D., Tex.) and members of both parties in the House of Representatives publicly urged the Europeans during the past week to go ahead without waiting for Congress.

Nevertheless French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, coming out of Lovett's office, told reporters that "it would be premature to have a full and formal meeting as long as there has been no concrete development in Washington."

Experts to Exchange Views

"In the meantime," he said, "the experts of the sixteen countries will have exchanges of views—first, to review what has already been done for mutual help and more intimate cooperation, and second, to outline what should be done toward setting up a permanent organization of the sixteen countries."

In the review of "mutual help" since last summer's Paris conference, the Ambassador said the experts would cover proposals for lower tariffs, customs union, and the development of water power resources. They would have no formal meeting, he indicated, but informal contact and traveling to meet their opposite numbers in various capitals, and perhaps committee meetings as well.

Three in "Full Agreement"

The Ambassador said "we are in full agreement, as we have always been"—apparently to offset a newspaper report from London that a "veto" from Lovett had led the Europeans to abandon plans for a new conference in February. Lovett was said to have been annoyed by this report, and by its suggestion that the State Department had been holding the Europeans back.

As far as could be learned yesterday, the State Department only once this month expressed any opinion on the wisdom of holding another 16-nation conference soon. This was in reply to an inquiry cabled from the American Embassy in London on January 5, which said the Europeans were anxious to know how much American help they could count on, and which asked for instructions.

The reply was that, of course, such information was not yet available, and that if the Europeans needed definite assurance before holding another conference it would be better to postpone the meeting.

On Wednesday, at his regular press conference, Lovett was asked whether the State Department had given its view to any of the European countries about holding a new conference. At first he said no, but quickly corrected himself.

He said the Europeans already had "working parties" of one sort or another dealing with recovery problems, and that press reports indicated a formal conference was under discussion. As far as the conference itself was concerned, he said, the United States assumed the Europeans would await some general indication of the general form of any possible program, so they could talk about something concrete.

This was cabled to London, and may have been interpreted as a "veto" by Lovett. In any case, American officials strenuously denied the truth of any such interpretation yesterday, and insisted that they expected a European conference at the proper time, and as soon as possible.

There has been a clash of views, within Congress, within the Administration and in foreign capitals, over the wisdom of summoning a new 16-nation conference now.

Those who favor it say, first of all, that nothing would make a greater appeal to Congress during its debate on the Marshall Plan than concrete proof of Europe's determination to go ahead. They argue that such a conference could do many useful and important things even before Congress acted—among them setting up a permanent organization, and cooperating in ways that would not require American financing or supplies.

The opponents of calling a conference insist, however, that nothing impressive can be done until the Europeans know what supplies they will get from the United States and what conditions may be imposed in the enabling act. There is fear that an empty demonstration by the 16 would look to Congress like so much window-dressing, and would hurt the prospects of the recovery program.

Now the issue has been decided for the time being, although more of it is sure to be heard in Congress during coming committee hearings and floor debates.

World Bank Head Urges Rations to Set Up Agency

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (AP).—John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank, urged tonight that the 16 Marshall Plan countries in western Europe create a special agency to insure effective use of aid from the United States.

That was one of a number of major proposals advanced by the World Bank chief for putting the European recovery aid program on a "sound" footing and making it "in reality a rehabilitation plan for the world economy as a whole."

The agency, as he proposed it, would play an important part in the supervisory work.

Its creation, he said:

"Would tend to disarm partisan opposition to the Marshall Plan within the European countries, . . . increase the prospects that decisions would be made on a broad-gauge economic basis, . . . help to enlist the full cooperation of European governments and nationals and exert a strong coordinating and integrating influence."

McCloy said the agency should have "an international staff, owing allegiance to no national government and headed by a European director of recognized independence, courage and ability . . . not merely the mouthpiece of the American agency or the European committee which appointed him."

The agency, he said, should not only "supervise the use of funds and supplies" but "make the initial recommendations with respect to programs and allocations, based on a continuous evaluation of the performance of the participating governments in carrying out their undertakings and in making effective use of the aid furnished to them."

McCloy said an "independent analysis" made by the "international technical staff" of his 46-nation bank gave support to President Truman's proposals for $6,800,000,000 in the Marshall Plan's first 15 months and $17,000,000,000 over a four-year period.

The conclusion, he said, was that "the Administration proposals do not constitute an extravagant estimate—indeed . . . they provide a rather tight fit."

Among the proposals, put forth by McCloy in a speech prepared for the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, were recommendations that:

1. Efforts be concentrated on "stimulating the basic productive resources of the particular nations or area to be aided rather than, at the outset at least, investing huge sums to uncover entirely new resources or to develop new productive enterprises."

2. As a condition of receiving aid, the recipient nations take measures to stabilize their money, "drastic anti-inflation measures, elimination of inefficient business and labor practices, reduction of trade barriers" with all possible speed.

3. The program provide "constant incentive and pressure" to carry out those measures because "many of them will be unpopular, some will injure strong and articulate vested interests, and all will be misrepresented by partisan opponents of the program."

4. Assistance in the form of "new money" from the United States be "carefully supervised." "Those who give and those who receive should know for what the aid was given and how it was distributed."

Relief Funds Use for Food Campaign Hit

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Undersecretary of State Willard L. Thorp told a House committee yesterday he considered it "unusual" but legal for the Administration to use $500,000 voted for foreign aid to finance its food-saving campaign last fall.

Testifying before a subcommittee of the House Executive Expenditures Committee, Thorp said he had received a letter from President Truman directing transfer of the money and there was nothing to do but comply. Anyway, he added, the Comptroller General countersigned the voucher for the amount transferred.

Chairman Chenowith (R., Col.) of the subcommittee charged the Administration had used relief funds to "carry out certain domestic programs which haven't been approved by Congress." There was no reason, he added, why the same thing couldn't happen to funds voted for the Marshall Plan.

"We want to know," Chenowith said, "how we may protect the State Department from further encroachment like this."

Half of Funds Unspent

Col. Rolland M. Stone, lent by the War Department to be the Citizens Food Committee's certifying officer, told the subcommittee he already had notified the Treasury Department the committee was ready to return $250,000 of the original fund. He submitted a financial statement showing expenditures by the Citizens Food Committee and the Cabinet Food Committee totaling $219,934.37 as of last December 29. Of the unobligated balance, he said, $250,000 had been reported available to the Treasury and $30,065.63 was being retained temporarily to meet unexpected contingencies.

Other witnesses told the subcommittee the decision to finance the food drive with foreign aid funds was made at a White House meeting last October 6 attended by representatives of the State and Agriculture Department and the Budget Bureau. Thorp said, and his special assistant Dallas Dort concurred, that the meeting decided no other funds could be made available but was uncertain of the legality of such transfer.

Warren To Be Called

Several witnesses said the Comptroller General's office was consulted and, through E. L. Fisher, one of it s attorneys, gave an oral opinion the transfer would be legal. Arthur Focke, Budget Bureau attorney, said he consulted Fisher but could remember no details of their conversation.

William Sheppard of the Budget Bureau told the subcommittee the legal division of the State Department gave no opinion on legality of the move and the Attorney General was not consulted.

Chenoweth told reporters Comptroller General Warren would be called before the committee, possibly next week, to explain what authority there was for the transfer. It was expected representatives of the General Accounting Office would be called.

"Under a ruling like this," Chenowith said, "the President presumably could divert all foreign relief money ot domestic programs not considered by Congress."

Judd Surprised at Use

Representative Manasco (D., Ala.) said he saw no point in questioning Thorp, who heads up economic affairs in the State Department. If anything were to be challenged in the transfer, he said, Congress should question the Comptroller General's ruling that it was legal.

Representative Judd (R., Minn.), a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said he helped write the foreign aid bill and was sure there was "no thought" by members of Congress that any part would be used to carry on a food conservation program.

Colonel Stoebe, in presenting the food committee's financial statement, said its final report was not paid for out of public funds. He understood, he added, that it had been paid for by Charles Luckman, food committee chairman and president of Lever Brothers.

Higher Spending and Draft Called Alternatives to Aid

did not resent the new warnings. On the Senate side Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) complimented Royall on his candor, and said he was sure the Secretary was not trying to "wave any red flag or put us under any pressure" by his statement.

"He is simply underscoring the fact that the United States has a terrifically intimate self-interest in pursuit of a stabilized western Europe," Vandenberg told his committee.

Later the Senator told reporters that neither Royall nor Forrestal had asked Congress to pass the Administration's produced program in all its details when they pictured the alternatives. He said neither official had adopted a "take it or leave it" attitude.

The House committee, which had heard Royall previously, was similarly receptive to Forrestal's argument yesterday, and seemed similarly impressed.

The Defense Secretary said it was "by no means certain" that western Europe could save itself from economic collapse and political disintegration without help from the United States. He described western Europe as "a great workshop" and warned:

"Should this workshop be integrated, with all its industrial and military potential, into a coalition of totalitarian states, it is possible that we in time would find ourselves isolated in a hostile world. That situation would, in my opinion, be a threat to the peace of the world, to our economic and political position, and, in fact, to the very existence of the United

Later in his prepared statement he said that "we need to maintain substantial military power, but I would rate the need for the restoration of the European community as equally strong."

He said it would be "fallacious" to try to substitute strong national defense for European recovery, and would produce nothing but "an armed armistice." He estimated such a decision might cost the United States as much in a single year as the proposed 17-billion-dollar cost of the entire 4½-year Marshall Plan.

"How much would it cost us," asked Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.), "to arm ourselves if all Europe should fall to communism?"

"It is beyond computation," Forrestal answered. "It is not unreasonable to say that it could lead to an economic and political result here which might achieve the ends to which that philosophy is directed."

Representative Donald L. Jackson (R., Calif.) asked what would be the effect on American security if a hostile power established "a beach-head" on the Mediterranean.

"Any act of war in the Mediterranean and the Middle East has definite significance to us," the Secretary replied. "The free transit of trade through the Mediterranean I consider vital to our national security." Answering answering another question, he said it would be "very difficult" for the United States, and would affect the whole recovery of the world, if the supply of Middle Eastern oil were cut off.

Members of tht House Committee asked Forrestal whether he agreed with the proposed method of administering the recovery program, with a single administrator subject to State Department control in matters of foreign policy.

He answered that he had not given close study to the proposed setup, although "whatever is done should be consonant with the policy of the country as expressed by the Secretary of State."

"I can't envisage this being successful," he said, "if you start with a man between whom and the Secretary of State there isn't complete, mutual cooperation and sympathy. In matters of foreign policy the decision of the Secretary of State has to be determining, but any attempt by either man to assert authority arbitrarily would be wrong. "It is difficult to separate this job into compartments."

In the afternoon Forrestal repeated his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, drawing from Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) the remark that "we have to remain armed to the teeth, even as far back as the wisdom teeth."

Chairman Vandenberg announced that President John J. McCloy of the World Bank would testify today, and that Bernard M. Baruch would begin the list of private witnesses Monday.

Marshall Gives Warning on Aid Program

Pittsburgh, Jan. 15 (AP).—Secretary of State Marshall said tonight that radical alteration of the Administration's foreign aid program might imperil the chances of European recovery.

He acknowledged there might be flaws of omission or phrasing in the aid bill submitted by President Truman and said Congress doubtless would improve the measure in some particulars.

But he stressed that the principal terms of the four-year program, with its $6,800,000,000 initial outlay, were drafted with utmost care "to meet many vital considerations affecting the national interest."

Gives Long-Range View

"Radical alteration of the basic structure would, I fear, jeopardize the prospect that the measure would successfully accomplish the purpose for which it was designed," Marshall told the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

He said in a prepared speech that the recovery enterprise involved the course of history "in our time and for many years to come," so that its present scrutiny by Congress merited fullest publicity to keep the national informed.

Stressing economic factors, Marshall told his audience of businessmen that:

1. The aid proposed from the United States will be marginal but "absolutely necessary" to enable Europeans to make real progress toward a pay-as-you-go basis.

2. It will cost businessmen money in Federal taxes, but the alternative is the prospect of burdens which would make the sacrifice "trivial" by comparison.

3. The largest part of helping Europe, measured in terms of American commodities, already has been done. Exports proposed for the first 15 months of the program are less than the total for the past 15 months.

4. Refusal of American aid would bring trade effects felt in Latin-America and Canada and "throughout the entire world" as well as largely closing the door to American trade in Europe.

"We are required," Marshall said, "to make a decision as to which is the wiser course: Whether to make a capital investment in European recovery involving a sum that, though large, is well within our means, with a good prospect of realizing long-term gain; or whether to spend our abundant capital for the satisfaction of our immediate wants, in the hope that the day of reckoning can be indefinitely deferred."

Under the circumstances, he said, "the prudent course" is "prompt and effective action to assure solvency and stability in Europe."

"There is no doubt that if the countries of Europe should be forced to meet their present problems without further assistance from this country, the result could only be a radical increase in the restrictions and controls in force throughout that area affecting international trade and investment," the Secretary said.

"And more important, perhaps, than the actual restrictions themselves would be the deterioration in the atmosphere in which international business would have to be conducted. If the businessmen of this country are again to enjoy the former facilities for residing, traveling and doing business among the European peoples, then it is essential that the Europeans retain their confidence in this country and in the soundness of liberal institutions in general."

Marshall declared that a European economic collapse would bring "consequences of a most serious nature" for the United States.

"The situation we then would face would necessarily impose on us such burdens in the way of taxes, discomforts, sacrifices and impairments of the rights and privileges we now enjoy as to make those that now confront us seem trivial by comparison," he asserted.

Marshall said the Soviet bloc turned down cooperation for recovery under the United States aid program, even though this country set no conditions.

The Soviet government, he said, evidently "directed the eastern European countries subject to its influence or control" to refrain from attending last summer's 16-nation Paris conference.

State Dept. Study Group Is Selected

Herbert Hoover last night picked three of his former associates in Washington to make a study of the State Department and other foreign affairs activities for the Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Federal Government.

Harvey H. Bundy of Boston and James Grafton Rogers of Georgetown, Colo., Assistant Secretaries of State when Hoover was President, were named to make the survey. Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State under Hoover, will act as adviser.

Hoover is chairman of a 12-member commission named by Congress and President Truman last fall to conduct a 15-month $750,000 survey to find ways to make the executive branch more efficient and economical. He has been here several days setting up new study groups to aid the commission.

Agricultural Committee Named

He also appointed committees to consider the Government's far-flung agricultural activities, field offices and personnel.

Bundy is a 59-year-old lawyer, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., and a former secretary to the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. His first association with Hoover was as assistant counsel of the U. S. Food Administration in the First World War.

He served as Assistant Secretary of State in 1931-33, and in the early days of World War II was a special assistant to the Secretary of War.

Rogers, a native of Denver, is 65. He is a lawyer, educator and author. He is a former dean of the University of Colorado law school and served as Assistant Secretary of State in 1931-33, before going to the Office of Strategic Services, where he was deputy director in 1942-44.

Stimson, 80-year-old New Yorker, not only was Hoover's Secretary of State, but was Secretary of War under the late Presidents Taft and Franklin D. Roosevelt and for a while under President Truman.

Hoover named the following to make the agriculture agency study:

Dean W. H. Martin of Rutgers College, New Jersey; Dean H. P. Rusk, Illinois State College of Agriculture; Dr. D. Howard Doane, founder and former president of the Doane Agriculture Service, St. Louis; F. W. Peck, managing director of the Farm Foundation, Chicago; Prof. John Gaus, Harvard, and Dean W. A. Schoenfeld, Oregon State College, Corvallis, Oreg.

This group held its first meeting here Tuesday.

The task of investigating the Government's field offices, other than those of National Defense, Post Office and Maritime Commission, was assigned to the management engineering firm of Klein & Saks, Washington, D. C.

Other Groups Set Up

John A. Stevenson, president, Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., Philadelphia, will act as chairman of a policy committee on a study of Federal personnel.

Hoover said further appointments will be announced. He previously had named study groups on fiscal, budgetary and accounting methods and control; public works; Veterans' Administration; revolving funds; Federal-State relationships; Federal supply problem except that of national defense; lending agencies; post office, and transportation.

Hoover himself is undertaking, with the aid of Don K. Price, associate director of the Public Administration Clearing House, and with the cooperation of the Budget Bureau, a study of the presidency and its relation to departments and agencies.

Criminal Ward Inmate Escapes From Spring Grove

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—An inmate in the section for violent criminals escaped today from Spring Grove State Hospital in the north suburbs after locking two attendants in his cell.

He was identified as John A. Hickman, who began serving a 9-year burglary sentence in the Maryland Penitentiary in 1943 and twice has been removed for treatment to Spring Grove.

An alarm was sent to 14 Mid-Atlantic States.

Attendants Curtis Bradshaw and Walter Martin reported when they unlocked Hickman's cell to clean it he threatened them with a piece of broken glass and forced them into the room.

Their cries quickly attracted guards, but in the confusion Hickman dropped down a coal chute in the boiler room and escaped through a window.

Disabled Italian Veterans Clash With Police in Rome

Rome, Jan. 15 (AP).—Disabled veterans were injured by the police. The veterans were protesting what they termed the government's lack of interest in their plight.

Some of them carried placards reading: "We, too, are hungry." A delegation of the veterans later was received by the government.

Approximately 1500 persons participated in the Milan demonstration. It was organized to express sympathy with 15 soldiers jailed in Verona for protesting a government decision to keep them in the army for their full period of service. The government has decided that conscripts of the class of 1925 will remain under arms until after next April's election.

Italian war veterans clashed with police in Rome today and Communists led a demonstration in Milan.

In Leghorn, the Communist-controlled Chamber of Labor paralyzed the city with a general strike. The strike was called to protest what the chamber described as the government's "lack of interest" in unemployment problems.

During the disorder in Rome club-swinging policemen moved on the veterans as they marched on Viminale Palace, the Italian government building. Scuffling and fighting ensued.

Trade Efforts Pushed With Reds, Clay Says

Berlin, Jan. 15 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor, said today that despite zonal boundary handicaps and Soviet opposition to the Marshall Plan, the combined British-American zones of western Germany are intensifying efforts to increase trade with the Russian zone and eastern European countries.

Clay's monthly report said that although the bizonal area was to be featured in the American-financed European recovery program, the restoration of a self-supporting economy there "must involve the establishment of satisfactory trade relations with eastern as well as western Europe.

The report said special efforts would be made to obtain foodstuffs from the agricultural Russian zone and eastern nations.

The report said that trade with both the Soviet and French zones had increased during the past year, but was still "far below requirements, chiefly because of boundary handicaps."

Taft Calls for Budget Slash

surplus even on the President's estimate of receipts of 7.8 billion dollars. This will permit the application of 2½ billion to the public debt and still justify a most substantial tax cut."

Knutson Figure Not Indorsed

Taft failed, however, to indorse the 5.6-billion tax cut figure proposed in the Knutson bill. As the House Ways and Means Committee called Treasury Secretary John Snyder to testify on the latter measure today, some Republican members of the group suggested Knutson's figure was "too high."

Representative Tom Jenkins (R., Ohio), fro example, told The Post he would like to see a lesser tax cut, leaving a margin for debt reduction and other contingencies. He said he wanted to retain all the Knutson tax cut "categories," however.

The Ways and Means Committee tax showdown will probably come Tuesday, after hearings are closed on the Knutson bill. Republicans at that time are expected to pigeonhole the President's proposal for a 75 per cent corporate excess profits tax, to finance $40 tax cuts for individuals.

Democrats Plan Revival

Democrats will try to revive it on the House floor, in a motion to recommit the Knutson bill. To pick up more votes they may tie split income tax privileges for married couples to the President's plan, with the tacit consent of the Administration leadership.

Taft told his Providence audience last night "there never was a justification" for the President vetoing the GOP's last two four billion dollar tax reduction bills. He said Mr. Truman "isn't satified even with present taxes," but now wants a payroll tax to finance compulsory health insurance.

Resuming his attack on Universal Military training, first launched on his Far Western tour, Taft said an increase in the Air Force would be "less expensive and 10 times as important."

Taft said he believed in a highly trained reserve on a volunteer basis but charged U. M. T. would provide "some 10 or 12 million partially trained men for mass movement which is most unlikely to occur in any war we can foresee."

He lashed out also at Mr. Truman's call for "every type of public works," saying public works should be planned, but actual construction delayed until business begins to fall off.

Ruhr Facing Strike Threat

confused the Communists who were reported to have been ordered in "Proctocol M" to complete their preparations by March 1 for general labor action about March 15.

These officials said they believed the Communists, in trying to "cash in" on the current food situation might not have time to make all the preparations they had planned by March.

Non-Communist trade union leaders were represented as being wary in their strike deliberations, fearing they would be drawn into a Communist plan.

Plan Known in Advance

Today, British intelligence agents in the Ruhr said they knew the plan, promising support from the Communist international information bureau—the Cominform—had been circulated among western German Communists. British Foreign Office officials in London said they believed the document was "genuine." American officials in Washington said they had learned about it two months ago.

Dr. Kurt Schumacher, one-armed leader of the German Social Democrats, said he had learned the Cominform's program called for the "center of gravity" of its action to be at Dortmund, strategic rail center of western Germany, where disrupted traffic would break into the movement of supplies for British and American military forces.

Although the Russian-licensed press in Berlin dismissed stories of the plan as "nonsense," there was speculation at Frankfurt in the American zone that "Protocol M" and Communist influences might come up in the bizonal German Economic Council when it meets Wednesday to discuss proposals for strengthening and broadening German economic administration.

Canada to Reimpose Ceilings On Meat and Butter Prices

Ottawa, Jan. 15 (AP).—The Canadian government, beset by complaints over surging living costs, announced tonight it is reimposing price ceilings on meat and butter.

At the same time it said Parliament will be asked to extend the government's authority to control rents until March 31, 1949.

Finance Minister Douglas Abbott also said prices of certain types of fertilizers, which have increased sharply recently, will be reduced by government action, including a rollback of the price of basic chemical ingredients.

Abbott added that the wartime Prices and Trade Board is considering prosecution of those "who appear to have been selling at prices that are higher than is reasonable and just."

The price of butter is to be fixed within a couple of days on a basis of 67 cents a pound wholesale at Montreal. It is now selling in Ottawa at 73 cents.

Abbott said it will take a couple of weeks to establish a ceiling on meats.

Price ceilings on sugar and molasses, oils and fats, certain canned fruits and vegetables, primary iron, steel and tin will be continued until circumstances justify their removal.

Bolton Outlines Congress Tasks

Problems facing the new session of Congress were outlined last night by Representative Frances P. Bolton (R.) of Ohio before members of the D. C. League of Republican Women's evening political study group. The occasion was the group's dinner meeting held in the Parrot Restaurant.

The speaker also gave her impressions of the European Recovery Program based on a recent trip to Europe and the Middle East.

New Anglo-Iraq Treaty Is Signed

British Pledge Aid of Military Forces In Exchange for Use of Two Air Bases

London, Jan. 15.—The new Anglo-Iraqian treaty of alliance was signed at Portsmouts today. Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, who signed the 20-year pact for Great Britain, said it signalized a new series of such treaties between Britain and the Arabic world.

Under the terms of the treaty, British forces of all arms, if war threatens, shall be permitted to enter Iraq. Further, it is stipulated that British personnel shall keep the two air bases at Habbaniya and Shaiba in Iraq permanently in a state of operational efficiency.

Bevin

Under the new treaty, Britain still undertakes to provide Iraq with "arms, ammunition, ships and airplanes of modern pattern such as are in current use by the forces of His Britannic Majesty." Military equipment of the two countries is to be of the same type.

The treaty grants Britain the right to base operational units of the Royal Air Force at Habbaniya and Shaiba "until such time as pecae treaties have entered into force with all ex-enemy countries.' It stipulates that "the peace treaties are to be deemed to be full; in force when the Allied forces are withdrawn from territories of all ex-enemy states."

Britain has somewhat similar treaties with Transjordan and Egypt.

Saiyid Saleh Jabr, Prime Minister of Iraq, signed the treaty for his country. He said:

"This new treaty puts the traditional friendship of our two peoples on a new firm and solid basis. . . . I am full of hope that this treaty will start a new era of good relations not only for Iraq and Britain, but for the whole Arab world as well."

'Premium' Checks Hit Trouble Here

Miami, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Uncashed checks for United States dollars are being sold at a premium in South America, but were reported today to be causing trouble and confusion for Latin-American travelers arriving in Miami.

Alfred Canel, manager of the Dade County (Miami) International Center, said a black market exists in unchased checks in virtually every South American country except Venezuela. Latin Americans contemplating a trip to the United States buy them, believing they can be easily cashed once they arrive in Miami.

Canel reported that most of the checks are good. The hitch comes when banks here accept the checks for collection only, requiring the newly arrived traveler to wait for periods of as much as two weeks before being paid in American dollars.

Since every country except Venezuela has embargoed United States dollars to conserve them for their own international exchange, the visitor finds himself in the United States with no money until the black market checks are cleared by banks and paid.

Siamese King Murdered, Inquiry Finds

Bangkok, Siam, Jan. 15 (AP).—King Ananda Mahidol, whose body was found in the royal palace last June 9 with a bullet wound between the eyes, was murdered, the Siamese government radio announced tonight.

The death of the 20-year-old monarch touched off a lengthy inquiry and a flood of conflicting rumors of accident, suicide or assassination.

Tonight's broadcast said the 45-caliber gun found beside his body was not the weapon with which Ananda had bee shot.

Police will ask in court for continued detention of all suspects in the case, the announcement said. The identity of those held has not been disclosed but most are palace attendants.

Ananda was succeeded by his brother, Phumiphon Adulet, now 19. The new King subsequently went to Lausanna, Switzerland, to continue his education.

On November 9, a bloodless coup engineered by Pibul Songgram, the wartime Premier-Dictator of Siam, overthrew the government of Premier Thamrong Nawasuwat.

A spokesman for the new regime said on November 17 that the coup had forestalled a conspiracy to assassinate King Phumiphon and set up a republic.

Indian Malcontents Shout 'Let Gandhi Die!'

New Delhi, India, Jan. 15 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, too weak to walk tonight after three days fasting, was aware that some militant malcontents had shouted in the streets and outside his house, "Let Gandhi die."

A large crowd of refugees from the Punjab, embittered by their treatment at the hands of Moslems, broke up a peace procession from a Sikh temple to Birla Palace—where Gandhi is staying.

Last night another group of 50 refugees shouted the same slogan before his quarters. They scattered when Jawaharlal Nehru, Prime Minister of India, emerged angrily and called, "Kill me first!"

Doctors disclosed in a bulletin after 53½ hours of Gandhi's fifteenth fast, that he was losing weight and had to be carried from his bathroom in an armchair.

Although the crowds of refugees from the Punjab have cried out against Gandhi, there was no evidence that this was the general reaction of the vast majority of Indians.

India to Resume Pakistan Payments

New Delhi, India, Jan. 15 (U.P.)—The Indian cabinet decided tonight to resume payments to Pakistan under the empire partition agreement as a major gesture of peace.

As a further gesture the cabinet decided to hold a plebiscite in the disputed Indian-held state of Junagadh to decide whether its people want to join India or Pakistan.

The cabinet said it hoped that its action would lead Gandhi to end his fast.

The decision means India will resume payment at once of a total of 165 million dollars due Pakistan under a division of assets of former British India.

Blomberg's Wife Sues Over Book

Hamburg, Germany, Jan. 15 (AP).—Counsel for Mrs. Werner von Blomberg admitted in a civil court today that she was caught in a police raid with the former Nazi War Minister at a Berlin hotel before they married.

Mrs. Von Blomberg

The widow is seeking to prevent publication of a book, "To the Bitter End," which charges Von Blomberg was dismissed by Hitler in 1938 following disclosure that the War Office typist he married was a registered prostitute. Von Blomberg died in 1946.

The author, Hans Gisevius, a one-time Gestapo officer, says Hitler suffered a nervous breakdown when he saw files showing Von Blomberg's bride to be a prostitute registered in seven German cities.

Mrs. von Blomberg's counsel denied the prostitution charge. The opposing lawyer declared he would produce evidence that she once ran an officers' brothel in her Berlin home, that she sold pornographic pictures of herself, and that her mother had been convicted of promoting prostitution.

Mrs. von Blomberg was not in court.

Wright Resigns As Head of CAA

President Truman announced yesterday that T. P. Wright has submitted his resignation as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

He said he has not accepted the resignation but has it under consideration.

Wright, he said, does not want to leave the Government right away.

India Urges U. N. To Halt Kashmir War

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 15 (U.P.)—India implored the United Nations Security Council to halt "the small war" raging in the princely state of Kashmir.

N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar of India, Minister without portfolio, told the council India had appealed to the UN to put a halt to Moslem raids on Kashmir instead of reverting to armed force and a possible war with Pakistan.

To our friends and customers . .

Immediately after the break which occurred early last Wednesday in the natural gas line supplying metropolitan Washington, the stand-by facilities of our system were placed in operation and brought to full capacity as rapidly as possible. You were advised by radio and newspaper of the situation and our attendant problem. Later in the afternoon, when it became apparent that the local gas supply was becoming critical, you were asked to conserve gas by curtailing the use of your gas appliances. Your immediate response was most gratifying. We maintained full service.

To all of you—the people with the radio stations—the people with the newspapers—and the people who are our customers—we extend our sincere thanks and appreciation.

71 Die as Fighting Sweeps Holy Land

British Forces Halt Battle in South After Arabs Attack Jewish Towns

Jerusalem, Jan. 15 (AP). — At least 71 persons were reported slain today in fierce Arab-Jewish fighting in southern Palestine and in the teeming streets of the northern port of Haifa.

British planes, tanks and artillery halted the battle in the craggy southern area of the Holy Land where 50 persons—20 Arabs and 30 Jews—were estimated by police to have lost their lives in the last 24 hours. The battle there developed when 400 Arabs surrounded four Jewish settlements in the vicinity of Hebron.

Guns, grenades and knives were used at Haifa where it was reported 10 Arabs were killed and 25 wounded and five Jews killed and 12 wounded.

Port Area Isolated

The lower town around the port area was completely isolated from the mountainside residential and business sections. Harbor activity halted. Oil refineries slowed because workers were unable to get to their jobs over streets intermittently swept by gunfire.

All public transportation in Haifa stopped and stores were locked.

The unofficial tabulation of deaths in Palestine since the United Nations voted for partition November 29 now stood at 801.

During the fighting in southern Palestine a plane, which British military officials said they believed was Jewish-piloted, fired on an RAF reconnaissance aircraft over KFAR Etzion. This marked the first time the RAF had encountered aerial opposition during current Arab-Jewish hostilities.

The military officials said the British plane spotted a strange aircraft dropping a message over a cluster of Jewish settlements in the craggy area. The British plane did not return the fire, officials said.

Jewish sources said the Arab attackers in the Nebron area were believed to be "recruits" from Syria and Iraq, and that most of them wore uniforms and steel helmets. Damascus dispatches said hundreds of Arabs have been slipping across the unguarded Palestine border to join in the fight.

Although the British army said the shooting ceased after British troops brought up tanks and self-propelled guns, official sources said "large concentrations" of Arabs remained in the Hebron hills surrounding the settlements. The Jews in Kfar Etzion and Revadim were said to be still protected by mine fields.

Arabs said their warriors were being led by Fahri Marra, who escaped from Acre prison last May.

Scattered Fighting Elsewhere

Scattered fighting occurred elsewhere in the Holy Land.

The old walled city of Jerusalem was quiet during the day, and the army took another convoy of food to the 1500 Jews besieged there.

A senior British officer said about 500 members of the three Jewish underground organizations are within the besieged Old City of Jerusalem, operating under a single command.

About 1500 Jews are holding out there.

Hagana, largest of the three underground units, is prepared to lose 1000 men if necessary to hold the quarter, believing that it is a matter of prestige and that it will win support for the Jewish cause in the United States, the officer said. Operating with Hagana are members of Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Gang, he added.

Normally the Jewish population is about 4000. The population of the Arab quarters is about 34,000.

Children play in the streets of the Jewish quarter beneath British gunposts perched on rooftops.

Streets Cut Off

Bricked up archways, scarred by bullets, cut off streets leading from the Jewish to the Arab quarters.

Security in the Jewish quarter is a difficult problem. The attacks may come from above or below ground. An officer said that "any agile man could go across the entire city on the roofs."

Underneath, the city is honeycombed with what once were Solomon's quarries. Many Arabs and Jews know ways to cross the city underground.

Syrian Chief Defers Action On Pipeline

Damascus, Syria, Jan. 15 (AP).—President Shukri Al Kuwatly said today that Arab League policy would determine wether Syria would grant a right of way for the Trans-Arabian pipeline.

The pipeline, a joint project of the Texas Co., Standard Oil of California and Standard Oil of New York, has been surveyed to cross Syria to a terminal on the Lebanese coast.

Work was halted on the line in all countries except Saudi Arabia because of Arab hostility over United States support of the United Nations decision to partition Palestine.

Syria's parliament has not yet received a transit agreement for action.

"The oil line agreement, like all other proposed foreign economic concessions, will depend upon Arab League policy," Kuwatly said.

Kuwatly said the United States vote for partition was "contrary to the four freedoms and to democracy, which we know the American public have and love." He said President Roosevelt wrote him a letter in which "I was assured the United States would not do anything to hurt the Arabs."

"No other project could hurt us so much as partition of Palestine and the establishment of a Jewish state," he said.

League Proposes Occupation Of Palestine by Arab Troops

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 15 (AP).—The Arab League has recommended that the Arab nations occupy all Palestine with their regular armies when British troops leave the Holy Land, Assad Dagher, chief of the league's press section, told a news conference today.

Until now Arab League sources had indicated the Arab fight against partition would be conducted by a volunteer "peoples army" operating along guerilla lines.

[In Damascus, Syrian President Shukri Al Kuwatly said his country would be guided by Arab League decisions concerning Palestine, such as the use of regular troops in the campaign against partition. There have been forays into Palestine recently, apparently by irregulars.—Editors note.]

Assad declared the league would consider it an "unfriendly act" if an international police force landed in Palestine before the British withdrawal and added that in such a case the league council would "take steps to meet this emergency." Britain has said she will terminate her mandate in Palestin May 15 and has fixed August 1 as the deadline for evacuation of her troops.

(Authoritative sources in London said the Palestine government has recommended that Britain surrender the Holy Land mandate six weeks earlier than the planned date. London dispatches said British troops probably would be withdrawn then to the Bay of Acre. Informants explained that British administrators in Jerusalem fear the whole machinery of civil government in Palestine may collapse completely well before May 15 because of continuing Arab-Jewish strife).

Assad said the league, composed of seven Arab nations, does not recognize the existence of the Jewish state projected by the United Nations partition decision of November 29.

Asked whether the plan to occupy all of Palestine with regular Arab armies represented the decision of each individual Arab country or the recommendation of the Arab League, Assad said: "The Arab League recommends and each state is not forced to take the recommendation."

He declared nothing will dissuade the Arabs from fighting to the end against partition of the Holy Land and said: "The Arab governments have notified the big powers of the Arab governments' and peoples' determination to defend their rights even against the big powers' armies."

He expressed the hope that an international police force would not be sent to Palestine because he said it would "lead to many problems in the Middle East and endanger international peace."

The arming of Palestine Arabs will be completed within two months, he said. Asked whether the Jews would wait while the Arabs armed, he replied: "We are ready to lose a number of our fighters at the beginning, but we will win the last round."

He said Egypt had established a camp at Huckstep, wartime United States base near Cairo, to train volunteers for Palestine.

Trans-Jordan, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon, Egypt and Yemen are members of the league, in addition to Syria.

General Gerow Takes Second Army Command

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow assumed command of the Second Army here today.

Formerly commandant of the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., Gerow took over his new command at ceremonies that included presentation of Troop E, Third Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron, as honor company of the post for the first quarter of 1948.

He succeeds Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, now chief of plans and operations in Washington.

Mrs. Lamarre to Sue Meyer This Month

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 15 (U.P.)—Attorneys for Mrs. Mildred Lamarre, pretty former secretary to Maj. Gen. Bennett H. Meyers, said today her slander suit against Meyers would be filed in New York courts some time this month.

Meyers is scheduled to go on trial in Washington February 16 on perjury charges. He testified he organized Aviation Electric Co. at Vandalia, Ohio, for B. H. Lamarre, husband of Mrs. Lamarre, because he had a love affair with Mrs. Lamarre.

Army Trial Reform Is Voted by House

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Extensive reforms in Army court-martial procedure and general administration of military justice were voted yesterday by the House.

Legislation was passed and sent to the Senate which provides greater safeguards to the rights of soldier defendants and more equal treatment of officers and enlisted men.

Sponsors of the bill said it would correct long-standing abuses and help prevent miscarriages of justice in the tourmoil of a future war.

Major provisions would:

Permit enlisted men to sit as members of courts-martial when an enlisted defendant asks for trial by a mixed court of officers and men.

Remove some of the "influence" a military commander has over a court-martial he orders, by taking officers of the Judge Advocate General's Department partially out of the "line of command."

Make officers as well as enlisted men subject to trial by special courts for minor offenses.

Drafted by a House subcommittee headed by Representative Elston (R., Ohio), the measure applies to the newly separated Air Force as well as the Army. Similar liberalization of Navy court-martial procedure is still under consideration by the House Armed Services Committee.

Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. D.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee said yesterday his group would start hearings soon on the Army-Air Force bill and hopes it passes this session. Members of the House group expect to put through the Navy measure also.

The Army bill is based on a detailed study of military justice made by a committee of leading jurists and civilian lawyers in 1946. As passed by the House yesterday it bears the general indorsement of Army chiefs save on one main point—removal of judge advocates from the command chain.

At present, officers are subject to trial only by general courts-martial. Commanders often have overlooked charges against officers involving relatively minor offenses because of the severe penalties a general court might impose. The change will make them subject to the lesser punishments of special courts.

Other provisos would:

1. Require that both the trial judge advocate (prosecutor) and defense counsel at general courts be attorneys.

2. Establish a more extensive review of convictions. A new judicial council of three generals must review the case in addition to the present board of review, and questions of fact as well as law must be examined.

3. Establish a lesser punishment than dismissal for officers found drunk in time of war—making them more likely to be tried for such an offense. Higher fines also could be levied against officers under the bill.

4. Make lesser penalties than death or life imprisonment for murder and rape, as now.

5. Ban the Army from confining accused men with prisoners of war or otherwise punishing them at probationary barracks while awaiting trial.

6. Require officers sitting on courts to be instructed that a prisoner is assumed innocent until proven guilty.

Indonesian, Dutch Accord Is Held Near

Batavia, Java, Jan. 15 (AP).—Eleven weeks of negotiations by the U. N. Good Offices Committee appeared near a successful conclusion today with reliable reports a military agreement implementing the United Nations cease fire order would be signed probably Saturday by the Netherlands government and the Indonesian republic.

Reliable sources said the Republic had accepted the committee's truce proposal, along with amendments proposed by the Dutch, and that the Dutch had agreed to some republican amendments.

Aneta, Dutch news agency, quoted an Indonesian Republic radio broadcast tonight as saying Masjumi, the strong Islamic Nationalist Party, had withdrawn its two members from the Indonesian government. It was recalled that the party in the past refused to go along with negotiations with the Dutch and prevented successful conclusion of the talks.

Hungarian Named Nazi Chief

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Former Prime Minister Ferenc Nagy of Hungary has identified a Hungarian refugee here as a prominent Nazi official in Hungary, Chairman John McDowell (R., Pa.) of a House Un-American Activities subcommittee disclosed last night.

The subcommittee, studying Fascist activities, is trying to unravel the mystery of how the refugee, Ferenc Vajtha, came to be admitted to the United States on a diplomatic passport.

McDowell said he telephoned Nagy at his home in nearby Herndon, Va., where he has lived since he fled from Hungary last June as a refugee from the Communists.

Denies Being Nazi

Vajtha, a tall, dark-haired 34-year-old Hungarian, was summoned before the subcommittee in closed session yesterday and denied that he was a Nazi. He said he was anti-Communist and anti-Nazi.

McDowell said he asked the former Hungarian premier, who will be called as a witness, several quetions about Vajtha, and received these answers:

1. Was the Arrow and Cross, the political party whose newspaper Vajtha said he edited, a part of the Nazi system?

A. It was one of Nazi direction.

2. Was Ference Vajtha an anti-Nazi?

A. Being a Nazi himself, of course not. He was a propagandizer for the Nazis.

3. Was his reputation in Hungary, outside of public life, good or bad?

A. Very bad.

4. Was Vajtha well known in Hungary?

A. Of course. He was the show window for the Nazis. He was the editor of the Nazi newspaper.

Apples are good so many ways. They're especially good nutritionally for the kiddies these winter days. A rich source of Vitamin C to help ward off winter colds, substantial amounts of carbohydrates and easily digested fruit sugars. Truly one of our most versatile foods as they can be used in so many ways to vary and add sparkle to our daily menus. Pack an apple in school lunches, serve apples in salads, pies, cobblers, sauce, fry 'em, bake 'em. No matter how you present them your family will welcome them with relish. Safeway's low prices put apples in the thrifty food class.

D. C. Boy Held After Flight In Stolen Car

A 16-year-old District youth, driving a stolen car, yesterday led Falls Church police on a 95-mile-an-hour chase through the town before he wrecked the car at Tyson's Corner.

Held by Fairfax Police for investigation of the stolen car, the adolescent also was booked at Falls Church for reckless driving. He was uninjured in the crash.

The chase began after a Falls Church resident in the 500 block of Little Falls rd. phoned police she was suspicious of a District car porked overnight in front of her house.

Shortly before noon, Falls Church Policeman Henry Trumble arrived at the house in a squad car to investigate just as the 16-year-old jumped in the car and drove it away.

Trumble pursued the car down Little Falls rd., Lincoln ave., and West st. to W. Broad st., when the youth turned right.

Once on West Broad st., the policeman said his speedometer occasionally touched 95 as he followed the other car on the half-finished street.

Police said the car had been stolen Wednesday from Frederick Richmond, of 6500 7th st. nw.

degrees belod. New York's famed sports resort—Lake Placid—had 20 degrees below.

Los Angeles, Calif., still basked in its midwinter heatwave—80 degress—and Pacific Coast readings remained generally normal.

Park Police had some good news and some bad for ice skaters.

The ponds at Kenilworth Gardens on Douglas st. ne., two blocks off Kenilworth ave., were opened for skating and drew early crowds yesterday.

Skaters Must Wait

At least two more days of "this kind of weather" will be needed to put a strong ice cover on the Reflecting Pool. The pool had 1½ inches of ice yesterday morning, but failed to thicken it during the day because of the warm sun. At least 2½ inches of ice is necessary for skating, officials said.

The fuel coordinating committee and the industrial advisory committee will meet with Kennedy at 2 p. m. today to discuss the conservation program.

Krug's request for a 15 per cent saving was presented by Max Ball, director of the Department of the Interior's oil and gas division, who said President Truman also is preparing an order to Government establishments to practice rigorous conservation measures.

For the immediate emergency, Interior Department heads asked the public to adopt the following measures:

1. Keep room temperatures at 68 degrees or less during waking and working hours, and 60 or less at all other times. Heat no unoccupied rooms or unused space except to prevent damage.

2. Do no more motoring than necessary. Drive at reduced speeds. Use regular instead of high-test gasoline. Whenever possible use public transportation instead of private cars.

3. Waste no hot water. Install insulation, weather stripping and storm sash where possible. Keep shades down and blinds closed when outside light is not needed.

4. Install no equipment for burning oil, gas or bottled gas. Plants which can should convert to coal immediately.

Road-Building Bids Asked in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—The Virginia Highway Department took the first step in its 1948 construction program today by calling for bids on 10 road-building projects in Virginia.

Bids will be received in Richmond January 29 on projects in the counties of Elizabeth City, Fairfax, Patrick, Washington, Frederick, Tazewell, Luray, Prince Edward, Spotsylvania and Gloucester.

There were no major jobs in the group and the estimated cost of all 10 was one million dollars.

GOLDEN FRUIT SALAD

Fresh, FRESH Blue Plate Mayonnaise makes it the star of your dinner

Blue Plate Mayonnaise
1 3-oz. package cream cheese
8 halves canned peaches
4 cooked prunes
Lettuce

Chop prunes fine and blend with cream cheese, adding enough prune juice to soften. Fill center of each peach half with cream cheese mixture, then put halves together to form whole peach. Serve on lettuce, topped with Blue Plate Mayonnaise. Be generous with it—Blue Plate Mayonnaise adds tempting flavor to every salad. It's seasoned to be just sweet enough—just tart enough. And made with the finest salad oil, blended vinegars, selected eggs and spices.

Firemen Granted Immunity in Trial

unsuccessfully attempted to enter the case as a "friend of the court" in an effort to broaden the charges against the fire chief.

Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher, who has conducted the prosecution through nine counts of the specifications, yesterday won a legal victory on the charge of inefficiency allegedly caused by Murphy's program of rotating personnel.

Defense contends this program of transferring men is an aid to efficiency.

Defense Admits Lowered Morale

Over strenuous objection by defense, Maher won permission to ask prosecution witnesses their opinion of the effect on morale caused by firemen's discussion of the other charges pending against Murphy.

The charges include counts of abusive language and intoxication.

O'Donoghue declared this would be indulging in "rumors and idle gossip" about alleged incidents he said he could completely disprove.

"I am sure every charge and every specification has been discussed in every fire house," he said, adding he would agree to stipulate that they were discussed and that they did lower morale. The proposal to stipulate this, and thus not required individual testimony, was refused.

Battalion Chief Harold F. Harding, who returned to the stand yesterday, testified he heard some of the charges discussed, and in his opinion this "tended to lower morale."

Under cross-examination by O'Donoghue, Harding said he could recall no specific acts of inefficiency, or fire companies, officers or men involved.

O'Donoghue brought out that Murphy, acting as chief, had established a pumper school for training firemen here, and instituted use of a pumper operator's manual. These, he said, contributed greatly to the efficiency of the department, and quoted from several fire prctection agencies, including the National Board of Fire Underwriters, to support such action.

Harding, however, said that merit of the pumper school was "debatable," and stated the manual "adds to the confusion of the men . . ."

Before the trial resumed until 9:30 today, Maher said each witness he calls in the effort to show that Murphy's personnel rotation system is inefficient, will be asked to give opinions on effects on morale caused by Murphy's alleged actions. That is, the charges stated in the other nine counts.

20 at Baltimore Flee Clothing Plant Blaze

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—A fireman was cut by flying glass as a spectacular blaze swept through a four-story building on the west edge of the downtown business section today and forced 20 employes of four clothing firms to flee.

A fire truck responding to one of the three alarms collided with an automobile at a street intersection, but no one was hurt.

Firemen said the blaze apparently started in the basement, swept up an elevator shaft and mushroomed out through the upper floors.

Seaman Faces Hearing Today in Shooting

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—A 33-year-old Warwick County seaman is in the Norfolk Jail awaiting a hearing before United States Commissioner Harry A. Brinkley tomorrow on a manslaughter charge growing out of the fatal shooting of Rufus Babb, 22, of Norfolk, aboard a merchant ship.

The seaman, John Dusek, was removed from the SS. Charles A. Keffer last night by the FBI.

3 Justices Step Out Of Covenants Case

Homes of Jackson, Rutledge in Restricted Districts; Reed Also Disqualifies Himself

to move out of a home they bought there, because it was subject to a covenant. The second came from Detroit, the Michigan Supreme Court having issued a like order against Orsel McGhee and his wife. And the other cases came from Washington, the United States Court of Appeals here having ordered a number of families to get out of homes they bought in the 100 Block of Bryant st. nw.

The Government—the solicitor general said—believes the covenants menace both privileges of citizenship and our democratic institution. He put the issue this way: can limits on the use of real estate based on race or color or creed be squared with the letter and the spirit of the Constitution, the laws and the public policy?

"The executive branch of the Government," he answered, "says the judicial branch of Government, State and Federal, has no authority to enforce such covenants, and should no longer be permitted by this court to do so."

For 50 years, said Perlman, the Negroes of the country have been streaming into the cities to live, and the covenants have forced them into homes that are crowded, dirty and inadequate. That has brought into being the ugly picture of crime, filth and disease that was shown in the report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

Negroes Crowded Into Areas

Even worse, Perlman went on, is the result of the clamping of covenants on the edges of Negro areas, cutting off their growth. Even in normal times this would be deplorable, but in the present severe housing shorting their impact is especially disastrous. When these covenants are backed up by courts, the Government is hampered in doing its duty toward public health, housing, home finance and in the conduct of foreign affairs.

"The Government believes that the time has come to destroy these evils," the solicitor general declared.

Perlman said he did not claim all discriminations based on race could—or ought—to be stopped by the Supreme Court. Why, he said, if a man owns land and will not sell it to another because of his race or color, that is the man's own business and—as long as he is not backed up by an act of the Government—there is no question of constitutional right. The court said this in the Civil Rights Cases 65 years ago when it held that the Fourteenth Amendment required the States to treat all citizens alike, but does not require private persons to do so.

Called Violation of Constitution

But when the courts back up the covenants, Perlman said, then the State has acted and the Amendment is violated. He urged the court to put a stop to it, to send race covenants "to the limbo of other things as dead as slavery."

Perlman spoke for an hour, and the justices asked him only three questions. This was very far from the usual thing in the Supreme Court where many a lawyer has found himself so roundly heckled from the bench that he could not finish the statement of facts leading up to discussion of the law. All afternoon the judges listened, and asked hardly a dozen questions of the eight who spoke.

Attorney George L. Vaughn—a tall, portly Negro from St. Louis—seemed awed and nervous as he began to give the Nation's highest court aspects of the Missouri case. He saw the covenants and the law that has put the teeth into them as hangovers from the day when his grandfather was a Louisiana slave. In that day, Vaughn told the justices, the law of Louisiana made it a crime to teach any free Negro to read and write. And the law of Missouri forbade any free Negro to come into the State.

"Let Me Sit by the Fire"

The Negro who today asks for the same rights as anybody else to live where he wants to, Vaughn said, has in his hand a receipt for three centuries of unpaid toll. As the Negro knocks at the Nation's door, Vaughn said in closing, he cries:

"Let me come in and sit by the fire. I helped build the house."

Herman Willer of St. Louis spoke next, upon the legal angles of the St. Louis case. He pointed out that the courts of Canada refused to inforce covenants against Jews. Willer found a hard irony in the fact that such a decision was reached in Canada—where there is no Constitution and no Bill of Rights—while American courts—which are subject to both—were inforcing anti-racial covenants.

Willer said the Nation's treaties—like the United Nations Charter and the Act of Chapultepec—have set up a public policy of equal treatment for all, and have made the covenants void.

First to defend the covenants was Gerald L. Seegers of St. Louis. He told the court that al our people havea right to choose their neighbors, that it is they whose civil rights would be trampled, if the justices should throw out the covenants that make their choice effective.

Frankfurter asked Seegers about the rights of citizens to take and hold property that were voiced in 1823 by Supreme Court Justice Washington—a nephew of our first President. Seegers said he was not familiar with this old opinion.

Seegers saw the issue before the court was not one of abstract right and wrong, but of law and legal rights. Maybe a State Leglislature could outlaw covenants, he said, but none has done so. And public policy is for each State to settle for itself.

The Government and the petitioneers, Seegers added, want the Supreme Court to change the public policy of Missouri. And that, he declared, the Supreme Court has no right to do. Therefore, he concluded, the Missouri Supreme Court ruling in favor of the covenants ought to be upheld.

Bishop Turns Sod for Seminary's New Dorms

The Washington Post

Ground-Breaking Ceremonies Mark 5-Building Program

Ground-breaking ceremonies at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, yesterday marked the initial step in construction of a five-building unit at the 125-year-old school.

The Rt. Rev. Frederick D. Goodwin, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Virginia, conducted the ceremonies. He introduced Dean Alexander C. Zabriskie of the seminary, who turned the first symbolic spadeful of sod. The bishop dug the second shovelful of earth.

Cost of the first dormitory unit has been estimated at $89,000. Additional buildings and renovations at the school will bring constructions costs to $660,000 for which a Nation-wide campaign is being conducted. About $330,000 has been raised to date.

The new dormitory is expected to be ready for occupancy next fall, seminary officials said yesterday. The complete unit, they explained, will house 50 men and will double the housing capacity of the school.

In Washington, a committee of Episcopal laymen, heated by Coleman Jennings, former president of the Community Chest of Washington, is working on a $75,000 subscription fund to erect one of the dormitory units. The hall will be named "Wilmer Hall" in memory of the Rev. Dr. William H. Wilmer, a principal figure in the establishment of the school.

8 Jet Fighters Fly From Miami In 2¼ Hours

Eight jet propelled Army fighter planes made a 970-mile nonstop flight from Miami, Fla., to Washington yesterday in two hours and 15 minutes.

The planes, belonging to the 336th squadron of the Fourth Fighter Group, landed at 1:05 p. m. at Andrews Field.

The flight was described by the Air Force as a squadron test. It was made under the command of Lt. Col. Nathan H. Abbott of Burlington, Vt.

The P-80 shooting stars are part of the group which flew to Miami for an air show on January 7.

An Eastern Airlines Constellation flew from Miami, Fla., to Newark, N. J., Wednesday in two hours, 41 minutes and 30 seconds, averaging 421 miles an hour. Company officials said they believed the flight set a record for the commercial run.

Negro Teacher Wins Reversal In Ala. Discrimination Suit

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 15 (AP).—A lower court decision upholding dismissal of a Negro school teacher who had filed a suit over alleged racial discrimination in pay was reversed by the Alabama Supreme Court today.

The teacher, Ruby Jackson Gainer, was fired by the Jefferson County (Birmingham) School Board last June. She charged her dismissal was the "direct result" of a suit in United States District Court seeking contempt proceedings against the board for failure to comply with an earlier injunction against salary discrimination.

When she appealed to Circuit Court, Judge J. Edgar Bowron first issued an alternative writ of mandamus directing the board to reinstate the teacher or show cause why it had not done so. Later, in his final decree, he held the board had not acted unjustly.

The Supreme Court held that the board did not properly reply to the original writ issued by Judge Bowron and it remanded the case to the Circuit Court for further proceedings.

Cotton Deals To Be Probed

ington," Anderson said, "was that around 200 Government employes were running a speculative pool in Chicago.

"Businessmen know that no grain firm would handle such a pool and I know the Government employes would not join it. But the charge is made with a straight face."

Loses Best Men to Business

Because the Government cannot compete with private business for high-class employes, Anderson added, he is constantly losing his best men to private business. That, added to investigation of their private business, he said, is resulting in the Government saying to its employes:

"You may me worth $15,000 but I'll pay you $10,000.

"On top of that, I'm suspicious of you. I think you're a liar and a cheat. Now do your best for me."

Anderson then answered charges against Government employes using "inside information" in profiting in commodity markets, by saying:

"You have heard all sorts of wild charges about 'inside information' in the commodity markets. If anybody bothered to study the situation, he would readily understand that there is no such thing as inside information.

The report that showed Mrs. Edith Thomas as "long" 300 bales of cotton on July 31, 1946, showed that Dyke Cullum of Silver Spring, Md., also "long" 500 bales. It showed, too, that M. H. Heflin of Washington held 400 bales of cotton that day. Heflin was identified as the publicity agent who directed Thomas' campaign for election in 1938. The same list showed Ralph Moore of Washington "long" in two accounts 1900 bales.

Moore, an intimate of Thomas and also of Senator W. Lee O'Daniel (D., Tex.) has been listed on a number of the lists of speculators in commodities released by the CEA.

Yesterday Thomas told the United Press that he had been speculating in the cotton market for years, and still is.

Thomas said that Dyke Cullum, a former acting postmaster at Silver Spring, Md., had been operating for him.

Admits Being in Market

Thomas also admitted that he was in the market at the present, but refused to divulge his holdings.

"I have been on the long side in cotton for many years," he said. "My dealings are open and above board. I have nothing to hide. From time to time I have turned money over to Dyke Cullum and asked him to invest in cotton for me."

Thomas said that cotton is the only commodity in which he is now dealing, and that Cullum is his only broker. He said that Mrs. Thomas was dealing through another operator.

"I have never done any trading through Ralph Moore, although I have known him for many years," Thomas said.

"There is nothing improper or wrong about speculating. Every time I have run for Congress I have invested money—speculating on whether I would be reelected."

Quit Speculating in 1939

He quit speculating in wheat, he said, in 1939, after losing a "lot of money."

Yesterday the Commodity Exchange Authority made public a new list of speculators in cotton—3996 names in all.

No new names of prominent Government officials were disclosed. But three, and probably four, relatives of Democratic Congressmen, were revealed.

Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) identified one of the speculators as a cousin. Thomas identified his wife on the list. Senator Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina said one speculator was a "close kin." Representative Albert Thomas (D. Tex.) said he believed one speculator was an aunt.

An intimate of Pauley's yesterday disclosed that along the line of an interview he had with The Washington Post on September 16, Pauley had planned to leave his post with the Army Department January 3.

Plans to Blast Stassen

But, it was explained, Pauley had delayed his resignation until after he faces Stassen on January 23. Pauley is preparing, it was said, to "blast Stassen to bits."

Pauley's resignation may be expected just after his appearance before the Senate Committee. But, it was stated, his leaving his Army post has been delayed by two reasons: (1) that he refuses to quit under fire, and (2) that the present market investigation has delayed his final preparation of his report of his activities for the Army, a report that is due now in Royall's office.

Anderson, at New York, pleaded for higher pay for top Government officials. He used as an example the Commodity Credit Corp.

"The CCC is not the biggest corporation in the world," Anderson said, "but from the standpoint of varied types of operation and magnitude combined, probably no private corporation can equal it. On the average from 1942 through 1945, it had slightly more total assets than General Motors, inventories twice as big and almost as big volume of sales.

Salary Schedules Cited

"I'm not pleading for the top-side General Motors salary schedule in CCC. That would sound fantastic. But I call your attention to the fact that a recent study of executive salaries in industry showed that more than 65 per cent of those in a large sample were higher than $50,000 in 1944.

"The Department of Agriculture has lost one sixth of its top-grade people through resignations in the last two years. There's something wrong with a Government salary scale for top administrative officials when business firms can regularly pay anywhere from half as much to four times as much.

"It means that business gets the pick of the administrative talent of the country and your Government business for which you pay taxes cannot compete."

Pastor Hits Ugly Aspect Of Washington

Dr. William S. Abernethy has challenged Washington church folks to see the ugly side of "the most beautiful city in the world."

From the pulpit of Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and "I sts nw., where he was pastor many years, Dr. Abernethy last Tuesday assured his auditors that he "loved" Washington for its beauty.

Abernethy

"But there is the other Washington, the city we don't see," he added. "It is the Washington of diseased, wretched, suffering, miserable people right here in our own beautiful city."

Addressing 1000 persons at the opening of the Washington Federation of Churches' fifth annual Christian School, Dr. Abernethy told how he and other ministers accompanied Major Ernest W. Brown, former superintendent of Metropolitan Police on a tour of "the other Washington" some years ago.

"We met in Major Brown's office just before midnight Saturday," he said. "We visited a place, just two blocks from here. In 15 minutes we saw an ugly side of Washington life. It was during prohibition but there was plenty of drinking. We visited another place that was under suspicion of selling liquor. We went to the jails, where police wagons were unloading their drunks."

He said we must begin to realize that "Washington is now in the big city class, with all of the problems besetting a city of this size."

Dr. Abernethy was introduced by Dr. Chesteen Smith, making his first public appearance as interim executive secretary of the Federation of Churches. The Rev. Edward H. Dowdy, associate pastor of First Baptist Church, dean of the Christian School, presided.

French Here Get New Pastor

The Rev. Pierre Toureille arrived here Monday to become pastor of the Washington French Congregation.

Rev. Toureille

Pastor Toureille served as a chaplain to 40,000 refugees and internees after the fall of France.

The French and Czechoslovakian governments decorated Pastor Toureille for his work in the French underground movement. For the last year he has been pastor of French Protestant Churches at Prague and Bratislava, Czechoslovakia.

He was educated at the University of Strasburg, France, and served pulpits in French Reformed Churches in Bordeaux and Beziers before becoming a French Army Chaplain when France entered the war in 1939. He is single and succeeds the Rev. Andre Liotard, now in France.

Mr. Toureille will be installed tomorrow at 4 p. m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, 16th and H sts. nw., meeting-place of the Washington French Congregation.

Kirwan Heads House Democratic Committee

Representative Kirwan of Ohio last night was elected chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee in the House.

He succeeds Representative Drewry of Virginia, who died last month.

Representative Bulwinkle of North Carolina was chosen first vice chairman, succeeding Kirwan.

The Gallup Poll

Majority Against Pay Boosts Now

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 15.—Although there is pressure from workers for a "third round" of wage increases, the general public is beginning to frown on wage boosts if they lead to increases in the price of goods.

That is shown when the issue of wage and price increases was put to the public in a Nation-wide poll, as follows:

"Some people say worker's wages should be increased again because of today's high prices. Other people say that if wages are raised, prices will go still higher. How do you stand on this—are you for or against increasing the wages of workers?"

The vote is:

For	31%
Against	53
Qualified	7
No opinion	9

The demand for wage boosts is being led by organized labor. One of the CIO "big three," the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, recently announced that it will demand substantial wage increases to offset the $13.03 a week in real income which it estimates that its workers have lost in the past two years because of higher prices. There has also been talk of new wage demands by the United Automobile Workers.

When today's poll results are analyzed according to occupation groups, it is clear that the classic economic argument about wage boosts leading to price boosts has gained the least acceptance among labor union members and among manual workers generally.

Among union members the weight of sentiment, numerically speaking, is on the side of wage boosts regardless of possible effect on prices.

	For	Against	Qual. & No opin.
Prof. & Bus.	23%	65%	12%
White Collar	31	50	19
Farmers	18	66	16
Manual workers	41	43	16
Union members	45	39	16

There is a close correlation between attitudes on this issue and extent of formal education of the voter. Among college-trained people the theory of the relationship between prices and wages has widest acceptance; among voters who have not gone beyond grade school, and who have thus probably not attended classes in economic theory, it has the least acceptance.

	For	Against	Qual. & No opin.
College	19%	70%	11%
High school	27	57	16
Grade or no school	38	45	17

However, the matter is not entirely related to degree of education. Economic status undoubtedly plays a vital role in determining people's attitudes toward this issue; a family which is having extreme difficulty living on a small wage will likely favor a wage boost irrespective of what may happen to prices. It is forced to think about tomorrow's bills, rather than about long-range economic theory.

In today's poll the voters expressing qualifications to their opinion said mainly; "depends on the individual case," and "let wages stay and reduce prices."

Resident Faces Eviction From OfficeBuilding

A six-year legal siege to evict the last resident of the Dupont Circle building was strengthened by a Municipal Court order yesterday.

Mrs. Parma

In her twelfth floor penthouse apartment atop the building at Connecticut ave. nw. and Dupont cir., the lone resident, white haired, aging Mrs. Pallas Parma was still smilingly courageous.

The last of 700 tenants who lived there before war and eviction orders shook them out to make room for sprawling Federal agencies, Mrs. Parma has withstood the siege, defending her attractive, comfortable quarters with the Rent Control Act.

Yesterday, Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn handed down a ruling which, unless new legal action is taken in her behalf, will force her to vacate.

The eviction was taken by the Ducirco Corp., a Wilmington, Del., concern which wants more office space in the building.

Last month, Judge Nadine Gallagher ruled in favor of Mrs. Parma, but granted the plaintiffs a new trial.

The case was another storm in the controversy which has raged over the building and its tenants intermittently since 1941. It has been marked by refusal of 40 of the tenants tto move even after lobby rugs and apartment house equipment had been removed.

At one time one of the tenants filed a $100,000 damage suit, a Louisiana Representative struck a protesting tenant during a hearing on Capitol Hill. Mrs. Parma stuck it out and once applied for a rent decrease because the usual apartment house services were now missing.

The building now is occupied—save for Mrs. Parma—by offices of UNRRA and the United Nations.

President Dead Set on Building His White House Balcony

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman is dead set on having a second-floor balcony at the White House so that he can relax on summer nights.

He said so yesterday, with some spirit, and likened the controversy over the $15,000 project to those caused by installation of the first White House bathtub—and gas light and cooking stoves.

The matter came up at Mr. Truman's press-radio conference in the afternoon.

"The Republican comment is," a reporter said, "that you are only a temporary tenant, and therefore . . ."

Mr. Truman broke in to say that no President has ever been anything else, and that he hoped that would continue to be the case as long as the Republic lasts.

The Chief Executive said he would make a statement on the back-porch controversy at a later date, and there was a hint in his voice that the whole story has not yet been told.

When he recalled that there was opposition to putting bath tubs in the White House, and also gas lights and cooking stoves, a reporter pointed out that these did not change the structural appearance of the mansion.

Oh, yes, they did, Mr. Truman insisted.

He said, amid laughter, that when Mrs. Millard Fillmore, wife of the thirteenth President, put in the first bath tubs, they almost lynched her.

And when cooking stoves were installed, he said, the White House cooks refused to use them.

Bert Andrews, correspondent of The New York Herald Tribune, touched off the discussion by asking the President if he was "going ahead with the balcony."

Mr. Truman said he was, the Herald-Tribune to the contrary. In an editorial, that newspaper had accused the President of having "a lamentable penchant for meddling with a historical structure which the Nation prefers to retain as it is."

Reporter Andrews told Mr. Truman that a lot of other papers take the same view.

The Chief Executive agreed and said you couldn't explain it to them because they didn't want to know.

Even while the press-radio conference was taking place, preliminary work was going ahead on the balcony, which is to be behind the pillars of the South Portico, and just outside of Mr. Truman's bedroom and study on the second floor.

Earlier yesterday, on Capitol Hill, Representative Frederick A. Muhlenberg, a Pennsylvania Republican, delivered a speech against the balcony project. Muhlenberg, who says he's the only architect in Congress, argued that the President and the First Lady are only temporary tenants and have no right to make structural changes to suit their personal desires.

"This building belongs to the American people," said Muhlenberg, and went on to charge that it was "illegel" for the President to use $15,000 on a back porch.

An official history of the White House says that the first bath tub was installed in the White House in 1850 during the Fillmore Administration. It was not replaced until the Cleveland Administration.

The same history recalls that when the Fillmores moved into the White House, cooking was done in a large fire place. Novel cooking ranges were installed, "despite the protests of the cook, who had served many years at the White House and could not master the drafts in the new contraption."

Electric light buttons were installed during Benjamin Harrison's term. They were supposed by many "to threaten instant and fatal shock."

Mayor Would Fire Tax Collector

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Charging "inefficiency and neglect" Mayor Thomas S. Post suggested today that City Tax Collector Charles F. Burke, jr., be removed from office.

The mayor made the statement in discussing the reported shortage of $8803.73 in the tax office. Reports of a special audit have been turned over to State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris for an investigation and the council deferred action on the mayor's proposal pending the outcome of the county probe.

The mayor also told the council that part of the "shortage," $2955.93, was reported between August 1, 1946 and December 1, 191956, a period when Mrs. Thelma Streett, assistant tax collector, was on leave of absence.

Gypsum Dealer Challenges Housing Probers To Find Way to Stop His 18 Per Cent Profit

Isadore Ginsberg, short, fat and unafraid, challenged a Congressional committee yesterday to find a way to stop him from making an 18 per cent profit by dealing in scarce gypsum products.

Maybe they can do that in Russia, Ginsberg said, but they can't do it here.

Ginsberg is the president of Transcontinental Lumber Co. His second appearance before the Joint Congressional Housing Investigating Committee yesterday had committee members holding their sides with laughter.

All except Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), the vice chairman.

McCarthy, a World War II Marine, called Ginsberg the "most vicious of the gray marketeers." He said he "ran across his trail almost everywhere I went" in the committee's recent hearings across the country.

Ginsberg, who is almost as round as he is high, said indignantly that he considered 16 to 18 per cent a fair profit. He told McCarthy he resented the reference to him as a "gray market operator in the sinister sense."

Drawing himself up to his abridged height, the New Yorker said:

"I want to say, sir, Ginsberg is as proud as McCarthy."

Waving his arms, Ginsberg challenged the committee to try to pass a law forcing him to stop his alleged "gray market" activities. He has told the committee he sells gypsum lath—an important building material—at $52.50 per 1000 square feet. Manufacturers said their factory prices ranged from $19 to $24.

"I don't believe you can possibly pass legislation to prevent me, and honest men like me, from making a fair profit," he expostulated. "Only in Russia could that be done."

McCarthy, conceding that there was nothing illegal in Ginsberg's activities, said he thought the dealer's "moral wrong" was so great that he had no apologies.

"I repeat that I hope men like Ginsberg will be forced out of business," the Wisconsin Senator added.

McCarthy had threatened Ginsberg with a contempt citation for refusing to reveal the sources of his supplies of gypsum and the names of his customers.

But yesterday the dealer mentioned the names of several suppliers and one customer, Sears Roebuck & Co., at Norfolk, Va.

"But we cut out Sears because we didn't consider it a favorable account," he told the committee. "Sears doesn't pay cash and we can get cash for our merchandise."

Andrew Jackson Higgins, New Orleans industrialist, testified that "instead of condemning gray marketeers," the committee should "go a little higher to the source." He said the manufacturers can control where their materials go.

At one point Higgins said he wondered why Ginsberg didn't go into the steel market and make "the same small margin of profit that he makes in building materials."

Ginsberg piped up:

Ex-Sergeant Finds X-Ray Campaign Eas

"The Army was never like this," exclaimed former Master Sergeant Henry Morrison yesterday.

For Morrison, 37, head porter at Garfinckel's Department Store, was now a veteran of push-button warfare—the District X-ray campaign against TB.

"They don't make you strip, there's no waiting and, best of all, there're no needles," he told the few porters at the store who had not yet been introduced to the mysteries of the portable X-ray machine, the gadget with the invisible bullets.

More than 750 employes of the store's 1100 workers reported for chest X-rays on the first of the two-day drive sponsored jointly by the United States Public Health Service, the District Health Department and the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association.

The Mayflower Hotel neared the 100 per cent mark yesterday at the close of the second day of its employe drive, Dalton Cook, personnel manager, reported.

On another front, Frank R. Jelleff, owner of Jelleff's Department Store, yesterday rounded up nine employes who were at home Monday and Tuesday, when the portable unit came by, and personally escorted them to the central unit, or "mop up" center, in front of the District Building.

Far Rise Aim Of A., B. & W.

The Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. has asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to charge 15 cents in cash, or 12½ cents in tokens, in its present 10-cent bus zone.

The A. B. & W. would also abolish the use of tokens in all other zones. The 8-for-a-dollar token now used in the 15-cent zone could be used only in the present 10 cents cash zone.

The line's 179 buses serve Alexandria, southern sections of Arlington County and some sections of Fairfax County.

The increased fares, which would be effective on February 14 under the proposal, would affect all riders in the 10-cent zone, which includes the National Airport, and all others now using tokens.

B. C. May, general manager of the line, said the company was forced to take this action because during the first 11 months of 1947, revenue had fallen $436,341 below the corresponding 1946 period, while operating expenses had increased $98,916.

The result, he declared, was that the company not only failed to earn anything on its investment during that period, but also had a cash loss of $30,000 during that period, plus an estimated $10,000 deficit in December. Most of the $40,000 estimated 1947 loss, he said, occurred in the last half of the year.

The company has another petition pending before the ICC for elimination of reduced fare tickets on rides between Washington and Government installations in Virginia, including the Pentagon. The A. B. & W. seeks to restore the straight 10-cent fare in effect prior to July, 1945.

Laughlin Tells Of Bid for Loan

with your parents that I would arrange for delivery outside the District?"

"No," the witness answered.

Laughlin then asked if he had not mentioned Philadelphia or Baltimore.

"You mentioned a doctor in Baltimore before you contacted Petrain," the witness answered, continuing that Laughlin had mentioned the doctor in connection with a possible abortion. She said Laughlin contacted "a man in Arlington" to act as go-between. She said Laughlin told her to wear a red rose so the doctor would recognize the case.

(Mrs. Irma Petrain is a nurse at whose home, at 2215 H st. nw., an abortion on Mrs. Hobbs is alleged to have been performed—Editor's note.)

"Did you and Hobbs (George W. Hobbs, whom the witness married last May 2) contact the doctor?" Laughlin inquired.

"No," replied Mrs. Hobbs.

Laughlin, facing his former girl friend as inquisitor rather than the dinner companion of earlier times, carried on his cross-examination in low, measured tones. Her answers were cool and curt. They addressed each other as "Mrs. Hobbs" and "Mr. Laughlin."

It was in the same dispassionate tones that the lawyer asked Mrs. Hobbs about her relations with men prior to her meeting him and secured the admission that she had been intimate with three.

On one occasion the witness described how she returned a ring to Laughlin when she found out he was the father of several children.

She said she "resumed the engagement" because she felt sorry for the attorney.

The closing periods of the lengthy session which concluded at 5:40 p. m. were taken up with defense attorneys pointing out some discrepancies in dates occurring in her statement to police as contrasted with court testimony. The trial will resume before Associate Justice Bolitha J. Laws today at 10 a. m.

Among prosecution witnesses expected to be called is Hubert Stottlemyer, who it had been testified, drove Mrs. Hobbs to Dr. Peckham's office as an initial step in the abortion.

Later, under redirect examination by Prosecutor Charles Murray, aided by Prosecutor Arthur McLaughlin, Mrs. Hobbs said she had told Laughlin of these intimacies when they were engaged and he demanded to know as his right. She denied she dated other men after she started to go with Laughlin in February, 1946.

Mrs. Hobbs, who was on the stand for 6½ hours yesterday following a 5-hour stint the preceding day, told of taking a job in Laughlin's office in 1946 for $30 a week. She said he offered her $50 when she told him she was quitting.

She denied further allegations by Laughlin that she had hounded him for money.

Laughlin and Wife at Hotel

"I never asked you for anything," Mrs. Hobbs declared.

Earlier, John J. Leathers, resident manager of the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, testified his records showed a "J. J. Laughlin and wife" had registered on November 29, 1946, and stayed there two nights.

Ruling Due Today On Clegg Charges

at The Washington Post after his lunch period on a night shift.

The police had set a trap for the accoster of two waitresses at Ceres, 1309 E st. nw. According to testimony, Clegg had crossed to the west side of 13th st. behind Mrs. Viola Haynes, 19, of 1706 F st. nw. The latter became frightened and ran.

No Crime Committed

Prosecutor Gasch pointed out that no crime—either felony or misdemeanor—had been committed by Clegg, when Private Gibboney came out from an areaway hiding place and arrested him. Miss Haynes on the witness stand had testified Clegg had neither spoken to her nor made any obscene motions. Both she and another waitress testified Clegg did not resemble the man who had accosted them the preceding week.

At the most, the prosecutor contended, the arresting officer had a suspicion that a minor crime, a misdemeanor—not a felony—was being committed. The police do not have a legal right to make an arrest without a warrant for a misdemeanor which the police do not see committed, Gasch pointed out.

Arrested and booked a little after 6 a. m. Saturday, August 2, Clegg was held in a precinct cell until 5 p. m. the following day, although the police had completed their routine investigation of the "simple" case by 8 p. m. Saturday, Gasch argued. The detention, Gasch insisted, was neither justifiable nor excusable, and Gibboney was responsible for both the arrest and detention.

Principle Cited

"I'm not gunning for anybody," the assistant corporation counsel said. "I'm concerned with principles."

He urged the board not to be influenced by defense allegations that the prosecution was the result of a "conspiracy" by The Washington Post against the police department.

"This is a government of law and order," Gasch declared. "The police, too, must be governed by law and order."

The prosecutor urged the board to look at the principles beyond the case of Clegg into the police practice of arresting persons for "investigation."

When "a man who has done nothing" is denied the privilege of getting in touch with his family and employment, then "that is a practice that should be overhauled," Gasch said. He pointed out that Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, had himself recognized the need for correction of the arrest for "investigation" procedure by issuing new instructions on the matter.

"We must all be concerned with the good name of the police department," Gasch told the board—made up of two police officials and a District civilian official—"but when the police are wrong, they should be set right."

Post Criticized

Defense Counsel Charles Ford, in his final argument, urged the board not to consider any recommendations in regard to police practice. He insisted the board was concerned only with the innocence or guilt of the three policemen and that changes in police policy were up to the District Commissioners.

Ford contended that any recommendation for revising police procedure by the Police Trial Board would give The Washington Post the opportunity of writing "two lines that the three policemen are not guilty and two pages that The Post has won what it had campaigned for."

"Don't be a stool of The Washington Post," Ford pleaded. "Today ends The Washington Post's attemots to rule the police department."

Defense counsel declared it was "significant" that prosecution in its summation of the case had dealt "lightly" with the assault charge against Detectives Kapsol and Ennis. He pointed out that only two witnesses—Clegg and a doctor who treated him August 7, five days after the arrest—had testified to a beating and marks on Clegg's face, whereas a number of policemen, and other witnesses, had testified to seeing no marks on Clegg's face between August 2 and 7.

Repeats "Conspiracy" Claim

Again and again Ford charged that the case against the three policemen was a "conspiracy" of The Washington Post, "conceived and continued in perjury" through Clegg.

Attorney Ford charged that Clegg was not window shopping and observing the fish in the window of Gude's, 1212 F st. nw., during the early morning lunch period, as Clegg had testified.

"Clegg wasn't fish-looking. He was sex-looking," shouted Ford.

It was "odd," Ford argued, that Clegg "made up his mind" to go down 13th st. at the very time Mrs. Haynes started down the street; at the very time Private Gibboney was looking for a Negro molesting suspect who fitted Clegg's description.

He praised Gibboney's arrest as a fine thing, and urged him to lock up suspects like Clegg "again and again." "Don't let any newspaper stop you," Ford cried to Private Gibboney.

Ford insisted there was ample cause for Gibboney to arrest Clegg under the circumstances, even though the waitress could not identify Clegg as her accoster.

"What kind of a character is it who chases women in the early morning when no one is around," Ford asked. Gibboney knew he was "playing with a sex maniac," the type who if "resented by girls" will then go the next step and "commit battery and rape," defense counsel contended.

On the question of detenttion, Ford argued that the latest court decisions ruled in favor of "excusable and justifiable" delay in bringing a prisoner before a magistrate.

"It's been a tragedy," Ford declared, "that one newspaper has been responsible for a despicable campaign against the police."

Accused Men on Stand

Detective Sergant Kapsol and Special Investigator Ennis took the stand yesterday to deny beating or abusing Clegg during a half hour interrogation in the sex squad room at police headquarters on the evening of August 2.

Previously, Lieut. Richard McCarthy, head of the sex squad, had testified that he was in the room during the interrogation and that Clegg was treated civilly. The police lieutenant said that Barton Hickman, a former Post reporter, had also been in the sex squad room for about 20 minutes of the interrogation and had noticed nothing unusal.

On August 7, Lieutenant McCarthy said, he asked Hickman to tell Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, chief of detectives, what he had seen in the sex squad room, and that Hickman replied: "My editor told me not to say anything more and to report to the office right away." That incident took place at 7 p. m., McCarthy said. He added that sometime after 10 p. m., Hickman came to headquarters and gave Truscott the statement.

Ex-Prizefighter Testifies

Ernest E. Byrd of 2712 Ontario rd. ne., a former prizefighter, testified yesterday he was being questioned by Investigator Ennis in the sex squad room at the same time Sergeant Kapsol was interrogating Clegg. Byrd said he did not see anyone strike or talk abusively to Clegg.

Under questioning by Counsel Ford, Byrd said he was approached August 6 by Robert Bruskin, a Washington Post reporter, and Roger Robb, attorney for The Washington Post and for Clegg, and asked to testify that Clegg had been beaten by the police. He was promised publicity for a ring comeback if he cooperated, Byrd said, and free counsel in his own trouble with the police.

According to police records, Byrd was being questioned at the time in connection with a sex complaint made by a woman. Charges against him were dropped later.

Byrd said he informed Reporter Bruskin and Attorney Robb that he had already engaged H. Clifford Allder—an associate of Ford—as counsel. Whereupon Robb commented, according to Byrd's testimony, that the court presumed a defendant to be guilty when he hired Allder or Ford to handle his case. Bruskin and Robb insisted on treating for the drinks they had during their conversation—in a cafe—and Bruskin said it would go on The Washington Post expense account, Byrd testified.

Robb also asked him, Byrd said, whether he were afraid of the police, and Byrd said he answered not half as much as of a newspaper which "tries to scandalize" anyone who does "the least thing."

Byrd's Story Denied

Bruskin and Robb, called to the stand in rebuttal to Byrd's testimony, emphatically denied the former prizefighter's testimony. Both said Byrd told them he had heard one detective—during the sex squad room quizzing of Clegg—say: "I'll shoot your eyes out if you come back again."

Byrd told Bruskin and Robb, they testified, that he was afraid of the police, and would not give them a written statement of what he heard and saw in the sex squad room.

In cross-examining Robb and Bruskin, Defense Counsel Ford told the board he was seeking to develop that each had an interest in the case: Bruskin, as a reporter for the "conspiring" Washington Post and Robb as an attorney standing to gain legal fees.

Reporter Bruskin said that when he first saw Clegg on August 5 he didn't at first notice any "particular swelling" on Clegg's face, but when the alleged beating was brought to his attention by Clegg, and Clegg pointed to various part of his cheek and face, Bruskin said: "It looked swollen to me when it was pointed out." Defense Counsel Ford several times thereafter referred to Bruskin as the "yes-and-no guy."

Police Chief Barrett, who had listened in to most of the afternoon's testimony, shook hands with the three police defendants at the end of the hearings.

He had testified in their behalf Wednesday.

Marquis Childs To Aid Planned Parenthood Drive

Marquis Childs, columnist and author whose articles appear in The Washington Post, has been named honorary chairman of the Montgomery County Planned Parenthood League drive for $3000 which opens February 11.

Childs and his wife live at 501 Dorset ave., Somerset, Md. Mrs. Childs has been a sponsor of the local league since the first child-spacing clinic was initiated in 1939.

Funds collected will be used to maintain clinics at the Health Centers in Rockville and Bethesda, and a percentage will be sent to the Planned Parenthood Federation for use in research. Other drive chairmen appointed by Mrs. Robert Huse, league president, were Mrs. W. Oliver Kincannon, Mrs. John B. Nason and William D. Blair.

Clark to Be Speaker At Boys' Club Luncheon

Attorney General Tom C. Clark will be the chief speaker at the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club fund-raising campaign luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel.

The campaign goal is $125,000 to maintain and expand activities of the club's six units and Camp Earnest W. Brown.

Police Sleuth to Quit Here

David S. Ennis, special investigator for the Metropolitan Police Department, has submitted his resignation to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, it was learned yesterday.

The police chief said that Ennis' resignation would not be accepted while there was any action pending in the Clegg case, in which Ennis is one of three defendants.

Ennis confirmed the resignation, saying that it would not be "official" at least for the remainder of this month. He said he had much unfinished work remaining and that not until it was completed would Major Barrett send the resignation to the District Commissioners for ratification.

Ennis, who came here in 1942 from Whitemarsh, Pa., where he was police chief to be a so-called supersleuth here, resigned three months later to go back to his Pennsylvania job. Then, eight months later he returned to the District Police Department.

The reason given for the 1942 resignation was that instead of being assigned to investigation, Ennis was placed in the Police Training School, ordinarily the first post of rookie policemen.

Ennis, for some time was in the Homicide Squad before his present assignment as investigator for the Sex Squad. He was one of six members of the Police Department commended for solving the murder of Pvt. Marvin L. Beauchamp on February 1, 1944. Two women and a man ware indicted for the murder.

Ennis said he has been offered a position in Pennsylvania and that the Clegg case did not enter into his decision to resign from the force here.

Refresher for Police

The Arlington Police Department will launch a series of refresher courses in two sessions, the first from January 19 through January 23, the second from February 9 through February 13.

Howison Postoffice To Be Discontinued

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 15—Howison postoffice, located near here in Spotsylvania County, will be discontinued January 31 and a contract station established there, Acting Postmaster Lem W. Houston said today. Bids for operating the contract station will be received until 10 a. m. January 26. All Howison mail will be handled at the main postoffice here from January 31 until the new Howison station is set up. E. D. Skinner, Howison postmaster since 1936, had made application to retire.

Bill Is Introduced To Outlaw Va. Reds

Assembly Resolution Hits Wallace, Brands Backers Foes of Democracy

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—A bill to outlaw communism and the Communist Party in Virginia was introduced in the House of Delegates today as the General Assembly met briefly for its second session of 1948.

Delegate Frank P. Moncure of Stafford and Delegate Baldwin G. Locher of Rockbridge County teamed up on the anti-Communist measure, which was among a handful of measures that went into the House and Senate. Both houses will meet tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The House also got a joint resolution aimed at Henry A. Wallace and branding his organization as one "made up and supported by Communists and by others who have lost or never had devotion to democratic ideals."

The resolution was offered by Delegate John B. Boatwright of Buckingham and came as a sort of companion piece to the attack on Wallace that United States Senator Harry F. Byrd delivered in his "guest appearance" speech before the Senate yesterday.

Point Is Clarified

Delegates Moncure and Locher did not mention communism by name in their bill, but Moncure clarified that point in a brief speech on the floor of the House.

He said:

"Mr. Locher and myself have today introduced a bill which has for its purpose the barring of communism from the State of Virginia, and to outlaw the Communist Party . . ."

The bill, as worded, makes it a felony for anyone to incite to change of government by intimidation, force or violence, or other illegal means, or who takes part in such an organization having such a change as its aim. Penalties of from 3 to 5 years and fines up to $1000 are provided for violators of the act.

Delegate Boatwright's resolution was more an expression of thanks and relief from the Democrats of Virginia that Wallace had seen fit to withdraw from the Democratic Party. The "Communist" accusation was leveled at some of Wallace's supporters.

Sessions Are Short

A number of other measures were introduced today in the Senate, which was in session only 27 minutes, and in the House where deliberations were a few minutes more extended.

Tomorrow's meeting will give both branches another leg up on the matter of organization, complete except for committee appointments. Senator John S. Battle, Senate Steering Committee chairman, and Speaker G. Alvin Massenburg of the House both indicated these would be ready for a Monday announcement.

Among bills that went into the Senate hopper was a measure by Senator Battle to increase maximum unemployment compensation benefits from the present $15 to $20 weekly in line with a recommendation made by Governor Tuck in his opening message to the General Assembly yesterday.

The bill also would revise downward the State Payroll tax formula to save employers an estimated six million dollars annually and probably will be one of the few—if not the only—tax reduction measures to see the light of this session.

The Battle bill, as recommended by the Governor, would reduce the minimum payroll tax from 1 per cent to three-tenths of 1 per cent.

It also would extend the coverage of the act to all employers with one or more employes with the provision that this extension would not become effective until the Federal Government adopted parallel legislation.

It would extend coverage, too, to all maritime employes, set up reciprocal arrangements with other States, to benefit both employers and employes; rewrite the present disqualification provisions so that an employe who quits without good cause could not obtain compensation for a minimum of five weeks, instead of one week, and provide for an automatic increase in the employers' tax in the event the UCC fund should decline to a "hazardous figure."

The last eventuality was not regarded as an immediate possibility in view of Governor Tuck's message statement that the fund stood at more than $77,000,000 on Oct. 31 and appeared sufficient to withstand a severe employment decline.

Greenbelt Group Sifts Evidence On Administration

A Greenbelt, Md., investigating committee last night began sifting evidence accumulated in an extensive probe of the town's administration.

The nine-member committee, which has held a series of public hearings on charges filed against two town officials, met in the first of a series of closed sessions slated to provide a full analysis of all testimony. Because several members will be away from the town in the next few weeks, the probe probably will not be completed until late next month, according to Town Solicitor John S. White.

The committee is weighing charges filed against Town Manager James T. Gobbel, accused of mismanaging town finances, and Police Chief George Panagoulis, charged with dereliction of duty. Its final report will be submitted to the town council, along with recommendations for action.

Boy, 7, Sends 85c to Halsey For Va. U. Fund

Charlottesville, Va., Va., Jan. 15.—Admiral (Bul) Halsey, chairman of the University of Virginia Development Fund here, has been handling contributions in the hundreds and thousands of dollars. But a donation of less than one dollar received his nomination for "best one yet."

The contribution came in a light blue envelope and the letter, which accompanied it was printed in pencil. Eighty-five cents in change fell out when he opened it. Here is what it said:

"Dear Admiral Halsey, I hear you want a lot of money to do a lot of things at the University. I got a dollar Xmas and I got me some bubble gum. And here is what I have left. Count it yourself. Wish I had more but this is all I have.

"I am 7 years old. I go to school. I live in Richmond. 6015 Howard Road."

Little Page, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Elliott of Richmond, heard about the drive from her father, who is an alumnus of the University Law School.

Naughton Succeeds Lowndes in Bank Post

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Tasker G. Lowndes, president of the Second National Bank since 1921, has resigned. Lowndes has been named chairman of the board of directors and has been succeeded by Joseph M. Naughton as president. Naughton has been vice president for five years.

President of the State Board of Education, Lowndes has been a director of the bank since 1909.

Dr. Allen Reelected

Winchester, Va., Jan. 15.—Dr. Lewis M. Allen has been reelected president of the Farmers and Merchants National Bank and Harold G. Brown, president of the Shenandoah Valley National Bank at annual stockholders meetings here. The Commercial and Savings Bank also elected directors, but organization of the board was postponed until Friday.

Plane Renting Service Wins $30,000 Suit

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Elaine P. and William L. Piper, jr., lost a $30,000 damage suit against the Henson Flying Service, which they charged rented a plane in bad working order.

William L. Piper, sr., died in the crash, November 24, 1946, and the suit charged he had hired a plane with one gas tank practically empty and not in good mechanical condition.

Judge Joseph D. Mish ruled for Henson after three pilots who had flown the plane the day of the crash testified it was in perfect condition.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Water System Plans Outlined

The town of Falls Church hopes to make its proposed new water supply system pay off at the end of 35 years—with a $2,706,130 surplus.

The figure was advanced in a bond issue prospectus prepared by the town and released yesterday.

Details of a suggested one-million-dollar bond issue to cover construction of the new supply main will be outlined to Falls Church residents tonight at 8 p. m. in the Oddfellow's Hall on W. Broad st.

Proposed System Outlined

Also outlined by Town Manager Roy F. Dunn will be plans for the new system. It will include a 24-inch main joining Arlington's system at Chain Bridge, then running to Chesterbrook.

From Chesterbrook, a 20-inch main will be carried to a new million-gallon reservoir on Mount Daniel, along Kirby rd. and Great Falls st.

A system of 12-inch mains will connect the reservoir with the existing tank on Prout Hill and with the regular Falls Church system.

In setting up its $2,706,130 surplus figure after 35 years, the town counted on an estimated $7,828,700 in revenue from sale of water and interest on sinking funds.

River Crossing Planned

Cost of water and operating expenses would touch $3,674,800 during the period, the town estimated. Retirement of the million-dollar bond issue, plus the expense of a separate Potomac crossing in 1955 would cost $1,447,769 for a total expenditure of $5,122,569.

Until it constructs its own Potomac crossing, the report noted, the town will be dependent on Arlington water and mains at the Chain Bridge source. A separate town crossing, to be paid for out of the system's income, would link Falls Church directly with the Dalecarlia Reservoir in Washington.

Aged Ruler of Yemen Is Reported to Be Dead

Cairo, Jan. 15 (AP).—Cairo newspapers received cables tonight reporting the death of Imam Yehia, aged ruler of the Kingdom of Yemen, but a Yemen representative to the Arab League here expressed belief that the Arab leader was still alive.

Egyptian newspapers said the cables they received were signed by Seif El Hak Ibrahim, a son of the 82-year-old ruler.

Intimidation: 1948 Style

Since June 29, when The Washington Post published a detailed criticism (with photostats) of the distorted crime reports of our Metropolitan Police Department, this newspaper has been subjected to a campaign of intimidation calculated to coerce it into silence. Police officers have badgered our editors as to the source of their evidence on crime reports. Superintendent Barrett and his friends have gone to the length of putting the police staff to work on an investigation of the private lives of employes of The Washington Post. This vindictiveness has been express in slander and vilification. Our expose resulted in the restoration of honesty to crime reporting, but that did not put a stop to Superintendent Barrett's vicious campaign. The low point was reached at the police trial board hearings into the allegations of police brutality in the case of Julius Willie Clegg. The lawyer for the police tried to make it appear that the city editor of The Washington Post, Mr. Ben W. Gilbert, is a Communist. Mr. Gilbert was specifically directed by the chief of the trial board not to answer the statement when it was framed as a question, though he was quite prepared to do so.

Mr. Gilbert is a valued employe of this newspaper in whom we have pride as well as confidence. He is known by newspapermen in the Capital as a man of high character and an experienced reporter of ability and integrity.

The facts back of the smear are these: Late in 1936, as a college boy of 18, Mr. Gilbert joined the Young Communist League. His decision was a response to an appeal for a popular union of liberal groups at a time when the menace of communism was not generally appreciated by 18-year-olders. Within a few months he discovered his error and resigned, and then became a vigorous foe of the Communist Party and all its works. Indeed, he has been assailed, in his adult professional life, for his opposition to communism. Aristide Briand, who once said there was something wrong with your heart if you weren't in the left-wing movement before you were 21 and something wrong with your head if you stayed in it after 30, would have recognized in Mr. Gilbert a kindred spirit.

It was said at the same hearing, as if it were something derogatory to Mr. Gilbert's reputation, that at a later period Mr. Gilbert changed his name. This is true. On the advice of his college instructors in journalism, Mr. Gilbert, looking forward to a job and a career, selected a legal name deemed by those instructors to be more suitable as a professional by-line than his family name. That, of course, is of no more significance than the fact that Samuel Clemens chose to be known as Mark Twain.

Certainly The Washington Post is as little influenced by the innuendo as by the smear at Mr. Gilbert's expense. And we shall continue to do what we conceive to be our duty in reporting the facts about the police and pleading for a congressional investigation of its operations. All we need say at this point is that it is obviously improper to use the police power in an effort to blackmail into silence the critics of the Police Department's administration.

Delayed Pilgrims

There are some concrete signs to justify the euphemism, "delayed pilgrims," employed by Representative William G. Stratton in speaking of the pitiable refugees still awaiting liberation in the displaced persons camps of Europe. "It is now possible," said President Truman the other day, "to hope for early action by Congress to authorize the admission of our country's fair share of the homeless." The hope is rooted in a growing recognition throughout the country that the DPs, if allowed to immigrate to the United States in reasonable numbers, will prove assets rather than liabilities.

"In planning a hospitable policy toward the homeless," the President observed, "it has been most reassuring to know that those admitted to our shores are welcomed and assisted by well-organized and skillfully conducted programs carried on by United Service for New Americans and other voluntary agencies and supported by the private generosity of our people." This means there need be no fear the new immigrants will be public charges. Moreover, there is work for them to do in this busy land.

The Stratton bill which would admit a total of 400,000 displaced persons over a four-year period now has the support of 150 national organizations representing virtually every facet of American life. Even groups such as the American Legion which until lately opposed immigration in any form or measure have come round at least to recognition that America must play her full share in the solution of a world problem. To the practical considerations which impel Congress to act promptly and generously in respect of the DPs, there must be added the sharp prick of conscience. We have too long lagged in the discharge of an obligation to the DPs imposed upon us by our common humanity.

Strategy In Greece

The prime attribute of a great power is the world knowledge that it cannot be intimidated. America is engaged in demonstrating this fact for the benefit of the man who, in our opinion, is the immediate menace to world peace, viz, Marshal Tito. Tito, who has been watching American opinion and acts like a hawk, so as to find out how far he dare let his Greek puppet go, has something to think about in the news of the American reopening of the North African air base in Libya. Libya is across the Mediterranean from Greece, and Tito now knows that, far from being susceptible to being pushed out of Greece, the United States is hardening its position there. Libya will make up for a deficiency in mountainous Greece consisting of a lack of any airfield capable of handling B-29s and, for the time being, even of a concrete runway at Salonika.

An equal strengthening of the American position in Greece is the increase in the Greek national guard. Undoubtedly the egregious Markos was counting on a collapse of government authority in Athens. But, though this is rotten enough, it is not as rotten as all that. And the fact is that since the establishment of the Markos "government" an improvement in the Greek capital is being sought by the Griswold mission. At any rate, Mr. Griswold seems to be bent upon insuring that the national guard becomes a real home guard instead of a praetorian guard for the ruling clique in Athens. No other construction is possible from the report of his argument with the War Minister, George Stratos. A national guard, together with progressive changes in Athens, will help to insure stability in the rear while the Greek army is being better equipped for battling it out with the will-o'-the-wisp guerillas.

The fact that Markos has not been able to establish a seat for his government in Greece does not mean that the danger is over. Marshal Tito will continue to watch the United States for a relaxation of the responsibilities that have been undertaken. Clearly he took advantage of American divisiveness and procrastination when he gave Markos the green light and started a fresh war of nerves. Since this is the case, the McVeagh-Griswold trouble must now be wound up, and either Griswold must be given ambassadorial rank or a man must be chosen who is more suited than is Mr. McVeagh for the role of benevolent intervention. In other respects Tito should not be allowed to suffer the slightest illusion about the American intention to keep Greece out of the Soviet orbit. It is our feeling that on an appropriate occasion Tito personally should be put on notice that he himself will be held accountable for the troublemaking in northern Greece. Yugoslavia, which is nothing but Tito's fief, is not responsible, though the country, and not the man that runs it, was indicted by the U. N. as an instrument of the Markos insurrection. A little finger pointing at the bandit leaders in the Balkans (and, for that matter, in the Near East) would be very salutary in putting a stop to their banditry.

Economic Report

The Employment Act of 1946 declared that it is "the continuing policy and responsibility of the Federal Government to use all practical means . . . to promote maximum employment, production and purchasing power." And it calls upon the President to make an economic report at the beginning of each regular session that among other things will outline a program for carrying out this policy and recommend legislation for that purpose. The President's legislative recommendations have already been set forth in considerable detail in his message on the state of the Union. Consequently, as was to be expected, the economic report offers nothing new in the way of positive legislative programs for control of inflation. Its chief value lies rather in the contribution that it makes to a better understanding of the problems confronting the Nation, and its exposure of the weak spots in the economic structure that necessitate the kind of remedial legislation the President has indorsed.

A review of 1947 employment and production conditions, as well as price and income trends, shows that, despite the existing high level of activity, inflation has undermined the structure of the economy to such an extent as to become a threat to sustained prosperity. Perhaps the most convincing evidence of the precariousness of the foundation on which our prosperity rests is shown by the decline in the real as distinguished from the monetary income of consumers since the beginning of 1946, brought about by the rise in prices. Through the use of past savings and increased resort to credit total consumer demand has, to be sure, been maintained at a very high level that has intensified inflationary pressures. Nevertheless, the report warns that the real purchasing power of consumers has been reduced to the point "where it will not be adequate to take the consumers' share of the national output at present prices when certain abnormal demands are reduced and when the rate of consumer saving cannot be further reduced." In other words, if the rise in living costs is not checked, consumer purchasing power will continue to shrink, leading inevitably to a condition of so-called over-production bringing in its wake price collapse and depression. Analyses of this sort have been skillfully employed to enforce presidential demands for prompt action to bring down prices by the methods outlined in his 10-point program.

According to the report the expansion of credit is "one of the most potentially dangerous sources of excessive demand." Indeed, in our opinion, credit expansion is at the present time potentially the most dangerous stimulator of inflation, because, with the Government no longer adding to the volume of money by deficit financing, new money with which to stoke inflation furnaces can only come from commercial bank loans which add to purchasing power by creating deposits. Under the circumstances, a program designed to impose effective restraint on credit expansion is plainly needed, as the report recognizes. Unfortunately the President has evaded the challenge presented by the threat of credit inflation by failing to recommend any plan for preventing excessive over-all credit expansion. Instead, he merely suggests that Congress give close study to the Eccles special reserve proposal and expresses the hope that the commercial banks will succeed in their voluntary efforts to curtail credit, and thus make general action unnecessary. Otherwise, the President is content to reiterate demands for restoring to the Federal Reserve System the power to regulate consumer credit and to emphasize the danger from the mounting volume of mortgage debt and over-rapid expansion of commercial loans.

Josephus Daniels

The political career of Josephus Daniels affords an interesting and rather melancholy example of what is likely to happen when an upright and conscientious man is confronted with the problems and the responsibilities of power in a time of crisis. Like several other members of the Wilson war Cabinet, and for that matter like President Wilson himself, Mr. Daniels was by religious conviction and by all past associations a pacifist.

This in fact was the burden of the loud and angry complaints that were made against his appointment as Secretary of the Navy. He was a newspaper editor of unusual talent and shrewdness, and of humorous and amiable personality, who had risen to a place of considerable power in the Democratic Party as a disciple of another ardent pacifist, William Jennings Bryan. Daniels had a considerable share in the backstage maneuvers which prevented the nomination of Speaker Champ Clark by the Baltimore convention of 1912. Like Bryan, Daniels represented the Populist wing of the party whose doctrines then appeared to have found a new and more dynamic formulation in Wilson's speeches on "The New Freedom." He shared all the Populist hatred of big business and Wall Street, all its distrust of the urban and proletarian democracy represented by the big Democratic machines of the Eastern cities.

Thus there was every reason why Daniels should have been at home in the Wilson Administration. He set out to apply what he felt was the policy and spirit of the Administration within the orbit of his own jurisdiction. That is, he set out to improve the condition of the "common man," insofar as he was represented by the naval enlisted man. Daniels made the welfare of the enlisted man his major concern. He instituted programs of education, made it possible for the more talented and ambitious enlisted men to obtain admission to the commissioned ranks. All this, and his insistence on the rule of promotion by merit rather than by seniority, won him the enmity of the official cliques, and rarely has a Cabinet officer been treated to a more savage campaign of ridicule and abuse. This, however, did him little harm among the public generally, to whom his reforms seemed then, as they must seem now to everyone, both sensible and belated. Thus in more tranquil times his administration might have been altogether constructive and successful, and have presented no great moral dilemmas.

As it was, however, Wilson, Bryan and Daniels soon felt themselves obliged to abandon their pacifist principles and to decide, in the name of the national honor, to undertake an intervention in Mexico which was utterly at odds with the principles of international law they were at the time piously expounding to the warring governments of Great Britain and imperial Germany. But as the pacifistic Wilson Administration adopted one policy after another which brought it nearer and nearer to intervention in the war in Europe, Bryan saw fit to resign. Daniels, however, remained, accepting as necessary courses as abhorrent to his principles as military conscription.

This, of course, does not argue any insincerity or self-deception on his part. It was merely that he found himself involved in situations for which his political education had left him unprepared and to which his principles suddenly seemed quite inapplicable. But when his responsibilities were ended and he had once more resumed his role as editor, he could resume them without difficulty. One of his last pronouncements on national affairs was in opposition to President Truman's program of universal military training.

Thus Josephus Daniels' generally fruitful and happy life was not without an element of tragedy. The tragedy was that he belonged psychologically to an agrarian America that no longer exists. Yet it was not by his choice, any more than by Bryan's, that his country had embarked on utterly uncharted historical seas.

Air Policy Report

IN THEIR searching and highly significant report the President's Air Policy Commission did not pass judgment on how the total defense budget is divided between Army, Navy and Air Forces. But anyone who reads that report carefully can tell that the commission felt a lot of money now being spent on defense is being wasted because it is going for "yesterday's war."

Neither the Army nor the Navy have faced up to present-day realities. Millions and millions of dollars are being spent in ways that can never serve the security of the United States. This is true in spite of the merger of the armed services six months ago which was meant to stop such wastes.

The facts are known, in part at least, to men in high position, some of them in uniform. Waste on yesterday's war—or even day before yesterday's war—is particularly obvious in the Navy. For example, shore installations are being maintained on the Pacific Coast which can have no possible relation to any future war.

In the old days when America was relatively isolated by the two oceans this kind of waste did not matter too much. The military establishment was hardly more than a museum piece. At the outbreak of a war we would brush it aside and build a new modern war machine. Behind the barrier of the oceans there was always time.

BUT AS THE Air Commission's report—called Survival in the Air Age—makes dramatically clear, we shall never again have that much time. In the age of jet bombers and guided missiles there is no second chance. An atomic Pearl Harbor means final and utter defeat and disaster.

The commission's report is the first over-all, impartial examination of the postwar military establishment and over-all strategy, if any. The commission was not authorized to pass on how the total defense budget should be spent. They came close to it, however, when they said:

"We view with great anxiety the pressures from many sides directed toward the maintenance of yesterday's establishment to fight tomorrow's war; of unwillingness to discard the old and take on the new; of a determination to advance the interest of a segment at the sacrifice of the body as a whole. All this is understandable. For it comes in large part from loyalty of each service to its traditions. But we can no longer afford the waste it involves. Hope rests only with the ability of the Secretary of Defense under the President to discharge effectively the authority vested in him with one objective in mind—the maximum in security for the minimum cost. It is imperative that this be done; for unless it is we will not have a military establishment capable of defending the country."

The Air Commission called on Secretary of Defense James Forrestal to show what had been done thus far to integrate the services and bring about essential economy. In tangible results Forrestal could show very little.

MEMBERS OF THE commission were fully aware of the tremendous task that was dumped in Forrestal's lap. In the past the Navy has been the only force maintained in being between the wars. It was kept in being to guard the sea approaches to the United States.

Vested interests have grown up around the Navy that are like barnacles which fasten on a ship too long in port. It is an institution hoary with tradition and hedged around by guardians of that tradition.

Forrestal's job is now to keep the Navy as a force in being and as a security weapon safeguarding American interests all over the world while at the same time creating a second force in being in the air to guard the air approaches to the Nation. To carry out the second half of this assignment means inevitably that the Navy must be pruned (1) because many of its functions are now those of yesterday's war and (2) because the money simply will not be available unless there is a drastic pruning.

The vested interests are not, of course, all inside the Army and the Navy. For many years after they had outgrown any conceivable usefulness for defense the Army continued to maintain posts that in their day had been useful in fighting the Indians. When it was proposed to abolish these posts, nearby towns rose up in indignation and brought congressional pressure to bear to stop the move. That happened repeatedly, and naturally Army officers who didn't want to see any change could ally themselves with these interests.

Those days are gone forever. If Congress and the Nation persist in living in that kind of a past, then the awakening will eventually be a rude one.

Nonrepresentative Report

Mr. J. A. Livingston should be commended for his penetrating and revealing analysis in The Washington Post of January 13 of the recent report of 53 economists which he termed "less than meets the eye." A cursory glance at newspaper accounts of the report would lead the reader to believe that 53 leading economists unanimously indorsed a series of recommendations which might well have served as a platform for the most conservative Republicans.

The serious aspect of all this is not that 53 economists issued such a report but that newspapers gave such prominence to it without pointing out (1) that its signers did not include any of the country's most prominent financial economists; (2) that even its signers were far from being unanimously behind all the recommendations, and (3) the identity and background of the signers.

The fact that a report by a group of nonrepresentative economists did receive such a buildup is but another indication of how newspapers can and do editorialize outside the editorial page. The Washington Post said in an editorial on January 12: "People move forward or backward on waves of public opinion, and that opinion is enormously influenced by the flow of information to the people." Thank goodness, we still have our Livingstons to help us see the light!

Protestant Manifesto

I wish to thank you and your reporter, Mr. Lee Grove, for the interesting news headed "Protestants Launch Drive to "Separate Church, State" which appeared in The Washington Post of January 12.

I have not seen a copy of the "manifesto," and one cannot tell with certainty from their titles the religious affiliations of all its five signers. However, it appears to me that every denomination which supports any type of parochial day school beneath the university level is conspicuous by its absence.

All of us, regardless of religious affiliation, must pay taxes, and a portion of what we pay is used to support the public schools. In the public schools which I attended there will never be any 'separation' of church and state: Lenten assemblies were held, Christmas carols were sung, etc. The Protestants in that portion of the country would be the first to object if these activities were omitted; they sponsor and encourage them. I see no basis for the objection of the "Protestants and other Americans" to such secular aid as bus transportation, free lunches, etc., for which tax money is used, especially in these days which are difficult for all schools.

I wonder whether the five signers are aware of the Catholic Church's stand against communism and other social menaces no thinking American wishes to see adopted in this country. They might better expend their energies in combat against the truly destructive.

SUZANNE T. COOPER,
Washington.

Korean Leadership

The United Nations Commission for Korea is about to arrive and as a Korean I feel it is my duty to set forth certain points which I consider to be of the utmost importance concerning the formation of a Korean government.

Throughout the Japanese occupation there was a definite lack of leadership and Japanese political education was strongly superimposed upon the will of the Korean nation. Thus, leaders of a strong viewpoint for the unity of Korea were forced to exile themselves. This created an economic and political and social void

Leadership must be not only intelligent, well planned and forceful, but completely unselfish, as well. After careful study, I find that the following points raise serious question about the present-day "leaders" in Korea:

(1) Their thirst for glory after many years of exile; (2) lack of background in the science of governmental politics; (3) debilitated leadership qualities as the result of loss of dignity and submission to much hardship; (4) diversified ideologies which point only toward complete disunity; (5) the fact that their principles already have been influenced by occupation powers.

For example, during the last so-called legislative body elections, the people had no choice other than to select from a lot consisting of politically and intellectually starved charlatans!

The only apparent worth-while solution seems to be for the United Nations body to consider carefully and select a capable leader through judgment of dominant Korean political personalities. Surely, from this many worth-while clews and key notes of leadership qualities can be gauged with the contemporary reactions of the Korean people as a sounding board. This seems to be the fairest system of judgment toward selecting true leadership that can be proposed when the future well-being of Korea is under consideration.

Teachers' Sick Leave

This time of year brings an additional touch of uneasiness into the hearts of teachers in the District. Winter colds and illness may take the teacher from the classroom and result not only in doctor bills and other expenses attendant upon illness but also the necessity of paying for a substitute teacher.

Frequently the teacher remains in the classroom when he should be home under medical care simply because he cannot afford to pay for each day's absence. Such conditions are a direct reflection of inadequate sick leave provisions.

Full pay for sick leave has long been recognized as an important factor in over-all efficiency by the Government and private industry. At the present time provisions for sick leave are common among school systems throughout the country. Here in the Nation's Capital we are far behind other school systems. New York City allows from 20 to 60 days per year with full pay, depending on length of service. Detroit, gives 1 day per month cumulative up to 12 days in any one year. Other cities have similar plans. In the District a teacher must pay from his own salary for each day he is forced to be absent because of illness.

Correction of this situation would do much to increase the morale and efficiency of the District teachers.

RAYMOND BROWN.
Washington.

Editor's Note: In the District, if a permanent teacher is ill he must provide for a per diem substitute at the prevailing rates from his own salary. A permanent teacher is allowed to provide a substitute for 60 school days and a temporary teacher may do so for 10 days.

"Telling The World"

If what is called the Mundt bill dealt only with the interchange of students, teachers and technical materials, and the assignment of specialists to other countries it would not be necessary to say much about it though it is proper to remark that the greatest single influence exerted abroad in favor of the United States has been the chain of schools and universities, especially in the Near East, all of them created by private contributions, and influential to a large degree precisely because they were known to be without Government support.

We are now breaking away from this honorable tradition in order, as The Washington Post said in its editorial of January 12, "Telling the World," to set up a "program of advertising America." The controversial part of this program relates chiefly to what is known as the "Voice of America."

It is a matter of "crucial importance" says The Washington Post, that the "more and more vicious" Russian propaganda shall be offset so that our motives may not be misconstrued. As for the cost of it, well, it must be voted in amount sufficient to provide an adequate program "both in a deficiency appropriation and in next year's budget." Please note, there is already need of a "deficiency appropriation."

The question now becomes: Is the "Voice of America" necessary? Must we take to the air in slightly modulated tones because the air is already filled with shrill cries from Russia? Is anybody really convinced or only irritated by these wordy debates? Did Mr. Stalin pause before making up his mind to listen to a history of the Wallace family? Is the Bulgarian peasant who still plows with a crooked stick going to be helped more by listening to emanations coming through the air from New York or by attending the American school at Sofia?

Most observers who have lived long abroad, where governments for many years have wasted their funds on propaganda, would agree that propaganda of the crude sort almost invariably fails of its object. Most European governments for years have subsidized a venal continental press. Has anybody been deceived? Few indeed. The result is that nobody has the slightest confidence in that kind of a press. It will be the same way with official radio "entertainment."

The plain fact is that no country in the history of the world has been less in need of having its motives set forth than the United States, and our first historical effort to explain our case through the air met with striking total failure. While attending the Paris Peace Conference some 28 years ago President Wilson, discontented with the attitude of the Italian delegation, decided to appeal over the heads of the official Italians to the Italian people. The failure of that effort needs no comment.

Why does Mr. Mundt bother to spend an unknown number of millions to have our case, whatever it is, stated in 30 foreign tongues, when there are over 10 million foreign-born persons now in this country who are filling the mails, without a penny of cost, with accounts of life over here that have the great advantage that they are read and believed. The proof of the efficacy of that kind of propaganda is evidenced every day at every American consulate in Europe, where an unbroken line of applicants for visas to come to America await the consul's decision.

In such a national budget as we now have, the cost of the "Voice of America" may seem small but there was a time, not very distant, when the entire State Department cost less. Perhaps it is of smaller importance to save this amount of money than to prevent the fastening of a quite useless appendage upon our already too complicated Government.

Penny Milk Fund

I am sure owners and employes of the milk companies in and around the District, since the price of this essential food to consumers has been increased 50 per cent in the past few years, will be interested in preserving the penny-milk fund for the District's school children. It is doubtful whether many of these children are receiving the minimum requirement of a quart of milk daily in view of the prices now in existence.

It would seem to me that, given the proper approach, an arrangement might be worked out with the milk suppliers to provide milk for the school children at prewar prices, thus assuring the continuance of this very worth-while program.

Migratory Laborers View Reception Centers as Vital

(This is the fifth in a series of articles on the migratory farm laborer.)

By Agnes E. Meyer

Migrant workers and farm employers are equally fearful of the results of transferring farm placement services from the Extension Service to the United States Employment Service.

My Texas Extension Service guides, Hickerson and Davenport, and I reached Brady in McCullough County a little before 6 p. m. I could not see the Employment Service people, as this was after office hours. We went to the Reception Center, where the migrants' trucks were just pulling in, one after the other. My day of rapid-fire interviews had made it clear that very few farmers know that their labor placement service was being transferred from the Extension Service to the U. S. E. S. as of January 1.

The migrants, however, with their curious prescience, are fully aware that some momentous change is impending, although they do not understand its nature, nor what it means to them. But they are apprehensive and their fear, as I talked with young and old, takes only one form: "Will the Reception Centers be closed?" they asked me with anxious, pleading eyes, revealing thereby that these crude stopping places and informal employment centers are of vital concern to them.

Center Well Situated

The center at Brady is one of the more primitive ones, but well situated near the cross-roads. It was the only shelter built with Extension Service money because it was needed less to serve the immediate territory, which is largely sheep, goat and cattle country, than to relieve congestion. Brady is a road bottleneck and gets overrun during the busy season by swarms of migrants traveling toward the cotton country to the north and west.

When we pulled out of Brady for Sweetwater and a well-earned night's rest, we were all dead tired, but these Extension Service men are enthusiasts about education, including the education of this migratory worker. So Hickerson amplified my quiet enjoyment of the sun's afterglow by telling me of another important phase of the Extension Service activities whose future is likewise threatened by the collapse of the program.

"Much of my own effort, as Mr. Hohn's assistant, went into the encouragement of the use of labor saving devices which the farmers had developed through their own ingenuity. As fertilizer equipment was short during the war, many concentrated on this problem to increase their yield. Many others invented tools to displace the drudgery type of farm labor, whereby the old and young could be made just as productive during the war as men in the prime of life.

"All of those home-made inventions were then brought together in labor-saving field days, held in 200 different counties. Many of the products were so valuable that blueprints were made and distributed. A post hole digger produced by one of the farmers was better than any commercial digger on the market. The idea was to teach the farmer how to survive in a technological era. Mechanization is nothing but the use of brains instead of brawn to improve management. The Extension Service idea is simply this—to encourage people to use their minds and help them believe in themselves so that they can grow to their full ability. It's an incentive system to make the best better, both in human and material resources.

"Mechanization must influence the training of the migrant worker as well or they won't fit into the future picture. We have had training schools in welding and other useful skills in every county so that if the farmers and the workers want to learn, they can. This program of the relationship of human conservation and education to production is so big that the Extension Service men stayed with Mr. Hohn even when they were offered bigger salaries elsewhere. You can't be associated with Dutch Hohn and not believe in his principles of truth, trust and fairness. That's the way he got cooperation from us and that's the way we got cooperation from the farmers and workers."

Great Increase Indicated

By 8:30 the next morning I was in the Sweetwater Employment Service office, a small one with only two employes, situated off the main hotel lobby. On January 1 two more workers will be added to the staff for the agricultural placement work. This sounds modest enough for one office, but the total increase of personnel in the U. S. E. S. for the farm placement job must be enormous. As one farmer put it to me, "In some of those big offices, they are adding enough people to get in the crops."

The Sweetwater (Nolan County) employment official, A. Foyt, has been in this service only two years. He was transferred to this branch a year ago. Before that he worked in an oil company. He places from 140 to 160 people in local industries per month. He is bright, friendly and very matter of fact. When I asked him whether he was contacting farmers, ranchers and county agents, he replied, "I am just letting them know by the papers that we are taking over."

He is not familiar with the farm labor problem and has no experience with migrants. So far he has received no instructions about the farm-labor program but he is not disturbed as heavy placement does not begin until April. Mr. Foyt thinks that cooperation with the county agent will not be necessary. He said something as true as it may be fatal to food production. "It is very hard for two groups as different as the Extension Service and the Employment Service people to work together. We'll have the budget," Mr. Foyt concluded optimistically, "and we'll be expected to do the job of farm placement."

Is Less Optimistic

The manager at the nearby Roscoe Reception Center was less optimistic about the outcome. "Our total need for migrants in Nolan County is 3000 and this year we hired 2050 right here in this camp. The farmers around here don't know there's a change coming but I'm sure they'd rather catch their workers blind than go to the employment office in Sweetwater. The Employment Service folks are good people," he added with a touch of magnanimity. "They'll go in with good intentions but when they tackle the migrant workers, they'll find out they've hubbed (local for 'bumped into') something. The migrants won't go to that office until jobs are terribly scarce. That will put the local Employment Service agents on the spot for they don't even know the farmers; they are not in touch with the problem; they can't speak the migrants' language; they have no feeling for these people. I wish them well but I can't see anything ahead but a mess."

The cattle lands of South Plains, between Sweetwater and Lamesa, have a mysterious beauty and haunting charm. Their infinite grey-green distances were opalescent under a pale austere sunlight that came and went. When I was flying home above the clouds in a Constellation plane a week later, the heavenly firmament looked like a cozy little place to me after the sublime spectacle of these endless and intimidating Texan panoramas.

Originally Built by FSA

Near Lamesa we visited one of the Farm Labor Camps originally built by the Farm Security Administration. It has been taken over by a fine group of Dawson County growers. The total population is 650 of whom 500 are migrants. According to Public Law 298 these camps will be sold to a public or a semipublic agency when the U.S.E.S. takes over. Their fate is uncertain but in this northern area, such camps are not as vital to production as in the Rio Grande Valley where the migrants have learned to look upon them as permanent homes. On the main migratory routes the Reception Centers, or one-night stands, are a more important factor in the lives of the migrants.

A sudden rise in the ground beyond Lamesa, and we were in the North Plains of Texas where cotton picking was going on at full tilt, the beginning of December. In the fields we saw mechanical pickers operating while across the road hundreds of Mexican men, women and children were laboriously picking the crop by hand. One youth of 25, who was stripping a 1500-acre field with a Deere cotton harvester, welcomed us with delight as soon as he recognized Hickerson. I could see the electrifying effect of the Extension Service educational job on this youngster. We all sat on our heels for a good half hour while I shared his excitement as he explained to Hickerson just how he could improve the machine he was using.

The next day at Big Spring, we picked up D. W. Lewter, the Howard County farm agent, and motored a few miles out of town to the local Reception Center. It is picturesquely perched on a slight rise of ground overlooking not only the town and miles of cotton fields but just beside and below it, row upon row of cotton sheds jammed with freshly-picked bales and overflowing in every direction with thousands of additional bales stacked in the yards, so big is the crop this year. "It makes the workers feel good to look at those sheds," said Mr. Lewter. "They can see about 100,000 bales right there under their eyes—the product of their own labor.

"We need about three to five thousand migrants every year in this county, according to the size of the crop. Before this camp was built, we had a terrible time getting and holding them, because we are on the high road to the heavier crops up north of us. If they did stop, the officials would run them off the courthouse grounds, the only place they could camp, because they made such a mess in the middle of the town."

This Big Spring Service Center is one of the finest. It is a solidly built brick structure with 10 good-sized rooms, sanitary toilets and showers, hot and cold running water, electric light, gas and screened doors and windows, plus a smaller separate house for the camp manager. The businessmen of Big Spring found out during the first season that their $10,000 investment had already paid big dividends.

Lost 10,000 Bales in 1944

"In 1944 we lost 5000 to 10,000 bales of good cotton around here," said Mr. Lewter, "because we simply could not get workers. Since then we haven't lost a bale. We place 90 per cent of all the workers right here, not only for our county but for six or seven adjacent counties. Last night we had 16 crews in here of about 20 each. About 100 slept inside. The rest had to use their trucks. But it holds them, crowded or not crowded. Early in the morning the farmer comes in for his crews. The whole placement problem is off my hands," said Mr. Lewter.

As one farmer was there bargaining with a crew leader, I asked him whether he was getting all the help he needed. "We not only get all the workers we need," he replied, "this camp saves us time and money, and the same for the workers."

"How will the employment service agency in town fit into this program?" I asked him.

"With this camp, we won't need it. We just flat wouldn't go there anyway. We'll rustle for ourselves first. We don't belong in a place like that. It makes you feel as if you were going on relief."

The old association of the U.S.E.S. with the WPA program has undoubtedly left it with a stigma in the eyes of many people.

"We county agents by ourselves could never have generated this cooperative program," Mr. Lewter said. "It took the leadership of the whole Extension Service, their education of the farmer that good treatment of the worker would pay, their education of the migrants to give a day's work for a day's pay."

"In August, and not before, the farmer can estimate how much labor he will want. Then we get the help of the Extension Service field men who are on the road constantly to send us just the number we need. It's their personal contact with the Latin American migrants that controls distribution of labor. I don't know how the Reception Centers will work without those contacts and controls. Some days we may get jammed up here and other days we may not have enough men to pick our own crops.

"It was the good feeling the Extension Service created between farmer and worker that made the cement for the whole orderly program. If there is good feeling between the farmer and the worker, placement takes care of itself.

"They made good feeling among the farmers as well. Only the big growers can afford good housing. The little farmers were worried about housing because the Extension Service proved that fixing up a nice place for the worker pays dividends. Now, the big farmer who can afford the housing has learned to help the small farmers around him by letting the migrants stay on in their housing. The big growers never did this before. As a result, we have a new spirit of community cooperation instead of the old cut-throat rivalry. You can't get a result like that by men who sit in an employment office and figure things out on paper.

"It's this educational part of the Extension Service program that will die," said Mr. Lewter, "and what that will do to production we don't know as yet. The Mexican has been kicked around so much by the Anglo that if he does learn to trust an American, you're a diamond in a coal bin to him. They did learn to trust the Extension Service men because Dutch Hohn insisted on telling them the truth about everything, about pay, the size of the crop, the farmers housing and so on. The whole success of the farm placement system was based on that, and on telling the farmer good treatment of the worker would pay. It was a straight business proposition with him.

"Good treatment," he would tell the farmers, "will get more work out of the men and bring your workers back next year." It was a wholly voluntary and very humane program. And it worked because it produced a maximum profit for all concerned. That's why the Texas Farm Bureau Federation passed a resolution at the last meeting in November at Amarillo saying: "We insist that the Farm Labor Placement Service remain in the hands of the Extension Service."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

From Cloister To Convention

THE PECULIAR, intermittent courtship between American politics and Justice William O. Douglas has entered a new and more decisive phase. The leaders of the Northern Democratic organizations have sent word to Justice Douglas that the party's 1948 Vice-Presidential nomination is his for the taking.

The message was carried, some time ago, straight from a leaders' meeting in New York to Douglas' chambers in the gloomy cloisters of the Supreme Court. The executive director of the Democratic National Committee, Gael Sullivan, was the messenger. Douglas did not welcome this political annunciation, and has given no subsequent sign of his intentions. But the Democratic leaders feel that if President Truman eventually asks Douglas point blank to be his running mate, the Justice will be forced to accept.

There is, of course, no sort of guaranty that the leaders' message to Douglas will thus be followed up by any request from the White House. As far as President Truman personally is concerned, the choice of his companion on the ticket is still officially open. This will no doubt be asserted by the President himself. Yet, whatever the President may say will not detract from the singular interest of the episode described above.

There are, first of all, the circumstances of the leaders' decision. The New York get-together was held under the informal chairmanship of Edward J. Flynn. It is reported to have been attended by delegates from the satrapies of Ed Kelly and Jake Arvey in Illinois, David Lawrence in Pennsylvania, Frank Hague in New Jersey and one or two more. In short, the same principalities and powers were assembled that took the lead in 1944 in rejecting both James F. Byrnes and Henry A. Wallace and in conferring the Vice Presidency on Harry S. Truman.

THE DEBATES of the satraps were, rather naturally, not formally recorded. Yet it is known that two major points were generally agreed upon.

Point 1 was that Truman would need a running mate linked to the New Deal, rather than a conservative, in order to win this year. Point 2 was that the nomination of such a running mate would arouse bitter opposition in the Southern wing of the Democratic Party, but that the North possessed the votes to impose a Northern choice on the convention. In both these points the practiced political eye will read much that is significant.

The Northern leaders' insistence upon a New Dealer again underlines the fundamental change that has come over these great political organizations in the last 16 years. In the days before Roosevelt, these organizations were the conservative element in the Democratic Party. They relied on petty favors to hold the mass of their voters in the precincts, and in Washington were glad enough to take a right-wing line.

Now, however, the mass vote of the big cities can only be attracted by progressive personalities and programs. The leaders of the Democratic organizations privately cherish the wholly conservative opinions which they have always held. But they must give the voters the programs and personalities they want because their power depends upon it.

Their attitude was admirably summed up by one of the hard-boiled henchmen of the Kelly-Arvey organization, at the conclave which chose the able Paul Douglas as the Democratic senatorial nominee in Illinois. Douglas was rejected for the Governorship nomination (which went to Adlai Stevenson) because he had fought the organization too hard in the past. The organization men could not bear the the thought of Douglas passing out the jobs in Springfield, but could just bring themselves to support him for the Senate. The hard-boiled henchman in question put the general view very simply:

"I hate the — — guts of the — — —, but I'm for him because maybe he can win."

AS THE foregoing remark suggests, the progressivism of the Northern satraps is in fact strictly confined to major candidates and party platforms. It is strikingly absent from their approach to the real business of Government.

Hence result such oddities as Edwin J. Flynn's support of Commissioner Edmond Hanrahan for the chairmanship of the Securities and Exchange Commission. There is here a certain amusing irony. Justice Douglas, whom Flynn wants for the Vice Presidency, was once the fighting leader of the SEC, while Hanrahan is favored for the SEC chairmanship by precisely the business interests whom Douglas once fought. This kind of thing is the source of the curious split personality of the Truman Administration.

Yet even progressivism in word and conservation in deed is enough to inflame the feelings of the Southern Democrats. The Southerners will shortly be aroused into a fury of indignation by a strong Truman message on anti-discrimination legislation. They are sore as bears already. Although Justice Douglas is personally popular with many of them, the Southerners will like no choice imposed by the North.

In this matter, as in so many others, President Truman's position recalls the plight of the Light Brigade. Wallace to the left of him, O'Daniel to the right of him, volley and thunder.

Planes, Coast Guard Fail To Find the Jo-Ann

Miami, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Army and Navy Reserve planes joined the Coast Guard today in a fruitless sea and air search for the missing 30-foot fishing boat, Jo-Ann.

Two crewmen, Eric Larson, 52, and Lawrence Farley, 30, are aboard the Jo-Ann, last seen Tuesday when a towline snapped in heavy weather 20 miles south of Miami. The craft was being brought here from Cuba by the houseboat Coconut.

U. S. Will Issue Order Curtailing Use of Tin Cans

The Commerce Department announced yesterday that it will issue about January 31 an order restricting the use of tin cans by brewers and other industries to permit this country to build up a "strategic stockpile" of tin.

H. B. McCoy, director of the department's Office of Materials Distribution, also said that shipments of tinplate to foreign countries in April, May and June will be reduced.

The double-barreled order presumably will result in the conservation of some steel since steel makes up a good part of tin cans.

The beer industry is expected to be hardest hit, although brewers will switch to bottles again. Since Government restrictions on the use of canned beer were lifted about a year ago, breweries have been using more tin cans than before the war.

Other industries probably will be less affected, although they are expected to be asked to discard small, and odd-size cans. Officials emphasized that final orders have not been drafted for all industries.

The department has been discussing the proposed order with representatives of the affected industries. McCoy said he hoped to finish the discussions the last week of this month and then issue the conservation order.

The department already has heard the views of brewers, pet food canners, coffee companies, evaporated milk canners, infant food canners, bottlecap manufacturers and various food, meat and fish canners.

The department originally suggested a 50 per cent cut in the output of canned beer but this may be reduced.

'Strange Waves' Reported in Atlantic Where Wind Is Calm

New York, Jan. 15 (U.P.).—A veteran captain came into port today with a mysterious tale of 40-foot waves in the North Atlantic at a time when there was virtually no wind to stir up such heavy seas.

Commodore Harry Manning, skipper of the liner America, said that in his 35 years as a seafaring man he had never encountered anything like the "dead seas" the America ran into off Nantucket.

"About midnight Tuesday, I found the barometer suddenly dropping as I entered strange and mysterious seas," he said.

"The weather suddenly became warmer. The wind decreased to only a few knots and I found myself in huge seas, sometimes 40 feet high. The seas were all around us and lashed the ship from all sides."

The Weather Bureau came up with a possible explanation.

Col. James W. Osmun of the Bureau said two storms moved together Tuesday—one northward from Cape Hatteras and the other coming south from Labrador. When two such storms meet, he said, there is sometimes an area of relative calm in the center.

The America may have entered such a "dead" area, he said. Although the wind died down, the two storms had rolled up heavy seas.

Whatever the cause, Manning said it was new in his experience. He said he doubted that an earthquake could have been responsible because that section of the North Atlantic is not in the earthquake area.

"They were lifeless seas—dead seas—huge and bewildering," the usually taciturn skipper said.

"I could not understand it—to see such seas with no wind. I had a most depressed feeling at the very experience. Waves usually curl and fall away. These had no spray."

Congress Told Earl K. Long Evaded Taxes

By The Associated Press

Representative Domengeaux (D., La.) told Congress yesterday that Earl K. Long, a candidate for the Louisiana gubernatorial nomination, had an "illegal" income "in excess of" $250,000 while he was Lieutenant Governor and Governor in 1938 and 1939.

He said in a statement he read to the House thatn the Internal Revenue Bureau has assessed a tax liability "including fraud penalty" of $100,000 against Long, and added::

"I charge that Earl K. Long has agreed to pay this tax liability, including fraud penalties, but has requested that final consummation be deferred until after the present gubernatorial election."

Long, en route to his home at Winnfield, La., could not be reached for comment. An attache at his State headquarters described the Domengeaux speech as "political propaganda."

The Democratic primary will be held January 20.

Domengeaux asked that the Internal Revenue Bureau "effect the collection of this fraud income tax claim now" and warned that if this is not done he will seek a Government investigation.

Long was elected Lieutenant Governor in 1936 and became Governor in April, 1939, when Governor Richard W. Leche resigned. Long was Governor until May, 1940.

[Long is a brother of the late Senator Huey P. Long—Editor's Note.]

Leche and other State officials, Domengeaux said, "were indicted and convicted on charges of defrauding taxpayers in the State of Louisiana."

Land Deals Limited

Rangoon, Jan. 15 (AP).—The Burma government has adopted legislation limiting dealings by foreigners in Burma real estate.

Foreigners other than British subjects domiciled in the United Kingdom, Burma, India or Pakistan are forbidden to buy or mortgage real estate or to lease property for more than one year.

Slayer Allowed to Phone Charge Against Pair

Walla Walla, Wash., Jan. 1 (AP).—An unprecedented state prison arrangement to enable condemned slayreer Jake Bird to level a direct long distance telephone accusation against two men in a Chicago jail was announced by officers today.

Harry Engstrom, acting chief of detectives in Evanston, Ill., disclosed that, following last night's prolonged "truth serum" test, permission was obtained to have the husky Negro talk successively to the two men held in the Chicago jail, accusing them of participation in the 1942 Galvin double slaying in Evanston.

Engstrom said after the "truth serum" questioning that he was convinced the Galvin case had been solved. Mrs. Lillian Galvin, 42, and her maid, Edna Sibilski, were killed in a robbery which netted $28,000 worth of jewelry and three fur coats.

The telephone arrangement came as the latest bizarre development in the case of the man who, officers said, had told them he had participated in or had knowledge that would clear up 44 slayings across the country.

The two men held in Chicago were reported to Lovell Boykins, 37, and his nephew, William M. Hockett, 23. Engstrom and Patrick Steele prosecuting attorney from Tacoma, said Bird had accused them a third man, now in a Michigan prison, of being the men who entered the Galvin home while he acted as a lookout. They have denied the accusation, and three days ago in Evanston, Police Chief Carl Ekman was quoted as saying "their alibis look good."

Engstrom said he would listen in on a party line while Bird talks to the two prisoners. He said he might do a little prompting of Bird if it seemed necessary. A wire recording will be made of the conversations.

Bird has been granted a reprieve to permit investigation.

2 Die in Wreck On Rock Island In Arkansas

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—A Rock Island passenger train crashed into a freight near here today, killing two persons, and a Louisville & Nashville streamliner hit a freight in Tennessee, injuring two passengers.

The two wrecks were the fifth and sixth Southern rail accidents in five days, but the Rock Island wreck was the first fatal one. Passenger Engineer W. L. Martin, 60, of Little Rock, and a Mississippi woman passenger about 45 years old were killed when the Rock Island Flier, the Californian, collided head-on with a freight as it pulled out of the Little Rock station. At least 11 persons were injured.

J. C. McDaniel, fireman on the passenger train, said he escaped death by jumping.

Nar Pulaski, Tenn., the L. & N.'s fast streamliner, the Hummingbird, plowed into the rear of a freight on its New Orleans to Cincinnati schedule. Two passengers were injured slightly.

UNWISE CREDIT SPEEDS INFLATION

The following is taken from a statement sent to all businesses having credit facilities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District on October 27, 1947, by Mr. Hugh Leach, president of tre Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

. . . The Continuance of strong inflationary pressures has confirmed the belief of the Board that this is no time for the relaxation of terms by banks, finance companies and installment sellers. . . .

. . . Inflationary forces continue to exert powerful upward pressures on the general price level. There could not be a worse time to encourage the public to go deeper and deeper into debt.

. . . Experience has shown that rapid and excessive expansion of this type of credit is followed by a sharp reversal, thus contributing greatly to economic instability.

As has been stated by the President, "It will be in the public interest for every merchant and financial agency extending installment credit to avoid undue relaxation of terms. It will be far better to reduce prices rather than to relax terms in seeking new customers. Self-restraint on the part of those who use credit as well as on the part of those who extend it will reduce the danger of an over-expansion of installment credit which would inevitably be followed by severe contraction, thereby contributing to unemployment and reduced production."

Credit, wisely used, is a good business tonic. With lifting on November 1, 1947 of Government Regulation W, which limited credit, experienced business men and economists pointed out the inflationary dangers of indiscriminate credit. We believe that the credit function, well used, is an aid to both buyer and seller. But credit should only be an aid, not an artificial stimulation to business. We believe merchandise should be sold on its own merits.

We are glad to extend credit to customers needing it. We do NOT thrust unwanted, easy credit on undecided customers with resultant credit losses which must later be reflected in higher selling cost of other merchandise.

We do not encourage imprudent credit policies to move unwanted merchandise at exorbitant cost. We recommend banks, credit unions an dsimilar financial institutions when credit is needed.

Briefly, to each of our customers we try to exemplify our objective "Finer Things For More People for Less." That objective includes the sensible use of credit. IT does NOT include injudicious credit as a high pressure method of selling undesirable merchandise at profiteering prices. Unwise credit and large credit losses are always INFLATIONAY. But, we always have DEFLATION at MARS, both as to prices and the proper use of credit.

Buy what you need. Use your credit. Do both wisely. Thus, intelligent Americans will be fighting inflation.

What Am I Saying! By Frank Morgan — A man is judged by the company he keeps; a girl by how late she keeps company.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutz

Pay Raise Outlook Appears Good At Senate Hearing

Pay raise hearings yesterday before the Senate Civil Service Committee got off to a flying start.

Five of the 13 committee members flatly committed themselves to increased salaries for the 460,000 postal employes. Several also indicated they favor pay raises for Government workers generally. Only two more Senators are needed to report a bill out of the 13-man committee. And they will be easy to get.

The five committee members who spoke in favor of postal raises were: Chairman Langer, and Senators Flanders (R., Vt.), Baldwin (R., Conn.), Ecton (R., Mont.), and Chavez (D., N. Mex.). Also, Senators Downey (D., Calif.), Cain (R., Wash.), Johnson (D., Colo.) and Magnuson (D., Wash.) either appeared before the committee or sent word to it that they were in favor of postal raises.

In addition, a score or more of House members—Republicans and Democrats alike—indorsed pay raises. Another big parade of House members who favor the bill is expected at today's hearing.

The AFL's National Association of Letter Carriers is given much credit for whipping up congressional enthusiasm for the pay bill. It has 700 members here from 44 States to attend a legislative conference. They have urged just about every member of Congress to support a flat $800 bill for all postal workers.

No Administration official appeared to testify for pay raises. In fact, none will since the President said he will oppose cost-of-living pay boosts at this time.

However, powerful testimony in support of pay raises was given by officials of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. All they had to do was to cite facts and figures—how Federal salary scales had lagged far behind the cost of living and salaries paid to industrial employes.

Ethel Hoover, chief of the BLS consumer price division, pointed out that the base minimum budget of a working girl in this city had doubled in the past 10 years, from $17.17 a week in December, 1937, to $34.13 in June of last year. She added that there had been some increase since June.

Harry Ober, a BLS economist, made a case, in effect, for an average increase of $600 for each Federal worker. He said the BLS cost of living index had shot up from 100 in 1940 to 166, but that the salary of the average Federal worker had gone up from 100 to 133 in that time.

Ober also revealed that the average Federal employe earned $2140 in 1939, and that his "real" earnings today, in terms of what the 1939 dollar could purchase, is only $1719, or more than $400 less.

The economist likewise brought out that the "spendable" income of the Federal worker had also declined sharply. He said the single employe took home an average of $2032 in 1940 compared with only $1396 today in terms of real dollars. And that the married employe with two children took home $2065 in 1940 but only $1569 today in real dollars. Ober said income taxes and larger retirement deductions accounted for a large part of the decline.

A score or more of rank-and-file postal workers took the witness stand to tell of their troubles to stretch their salaries to meet bare living costs. Most of them said that they had to work at side jobs to earn enough to keep up with living costs, or else cash in their war bonds and dip into savings.

The employes said they worked as cab drivers, bartenders, sold real estate, and delivered papers among other sideline jobs. This testimony left a deep impression on the committee.

The pay hearings are being conducted by a three-man subcommittee, Senators Langer, Flanders, and Chavez. Before it are five Senate bills all dealing with pay raises for postal employes that range from $600 to $1000 a year. The committee will go into general pay raises for Classification Act employes at a later date.

Some fear has been expressed that the Congress might vote an increase for the politically-influential postal employes and that's all. Several Congressmen yesterday indicated they had doubts about a general pay bill for all Federal workers. However, the leaders of postal organizations will indorse higher salaries for all Federal workers. They believe their spearheading the pay drive will eventually help all Federal employes.

DUNKED AND HURT—Members of Rescue Squad 1 lift Frederick T. Shue, 39, of Burke, Va., a pile driver, injured yesterday when he was struck by a falling beam on the new Highway Bridge project. Shue was knocked from a pier on which he was working in Georgetown channel. Fellow workmen pulled him from the water. Rescue squad took Shue to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for exposure and a possible fractured back

Truman Reaffirms His Approval Of Home Rule Plan for District

Backers Cheered After Omission From State of Union Message

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday gave renewed assurance that he favors home rule for Washington, even though he left the question out of his State of the Union message to Congress.

The President told his press conference at the White House that the question of home rule for Washington was not put into the message to Congress because it did not belong there.

He made clear that he is still for home rule in the District. But he added that he will not participate in the congressional effort to pass a home rule bill this session. He said he will have to wait until such a bill reaches his desk.

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), House sponsor of the home rule bill, said that disappointment over the President's failure to include a boost for home rule in the State of the Union message had never been "too severe" at the Capitol.

Members of Auchincloss' subcommittee had visited President Truman at the White House last month to discuss their plan for turning Washington affairs over to an elected city council and appointed manager.

The President then expressed strong interest in home rule, and told the group he had always favored local self-government for the District. Members came out of the conference with strong hope that the President would make an outright bid for support of the Auchinloss plan in his message.

They made their disappointment clear when he failed to mention District home rule, while including in the message a strong plea for immediate statehood for Alaska and Hawaii.

Comments Are Encouraging

Auchincloss, after hearing of the President's new comment, said he thought it would be worth while to get the President's views on home rule into the official record of the hearings on the bill. The hearings are to start February 2. But he added the President's views would probbaly be obtained through the Budget Bureau.

Representative Charles B. Deane (D., N. C.), a member of the Home Rule Committee, said he was glad to know of the President's comments at the press conference.

"The fact that the President is still interetsed in home rule for the District should encourage all of us who are also interested," said Deane.

Brownlow, Ex-Commissioner, Praises Home Rule Proposal

A former District Commissioner and expert on public administration said yesterday the people of the District of Columbia should rejoice in the Auchincloss plan for home rule here.

Louis Brownlow, 67, who has devoted 45 years to public affairs, told members of the Twentieth Century Club that the proposed charter is "at least an intelligent approach to the District problems."

While he said he would prefer to see a school board appointed rather than elected under the proposed new District govenrment, he declared the charter which would be granted to the District presents "the best possible scheme now known to us, a popularly elected council working through a manager."

When a member of the audience mentioned local "apathy," Brownlow said that "leaders will boil up from beneath when we get our election machinery." Apathy will disappear, as will some of the present leaders, he said.

The speaker, who retired in 1945 after 14 years as director of the Public Administration Clearing House in Chicago, noted that yesterday was the thirty-third anniversary of his taking the oath of office as a District Commissioner, and that he had not spoken publicly on District affairs since he left that position in 1920. He was first appointed in 1915 and served as chairman during the last three years of his service.

Brownlow served as city manager of Petersburg, Va., and of Knoxville, Tenn., and was elected president of the International City Managers' Association before he went to Chicago. He began his career as a newspaperman, covering city, State and later national affairs.

The prime purpose of the Auchincloss proposal, Brownlow maintained, is "to get the District of Columbia off the backs of the Congressmen." Some things will be wrong, he admitted, but he declared we can change such things by speaking with one voice.

Asked whether the home rule proposal would defer the achievement of national representation, Brownlow termed home rule "much more important," and said first things should come first. People who want to defeat home rule, he predicted, will say the two proposals should be submitted at the same time.

Presiding at the luncheon meeting, held at the YWCA, was Mrs. James T. Jardine, vice chairman of the civics education section of the Twentieth Century Club. Others present were Mrs. Brownlow and Mrs. Charles W. Kutz, wife of the engineer commissioner who served with Brownlow.

2 Hurt in GSI Strike Fracas; 3 Arrested

Fleming Has Parley With Schwellenbach On 11-Day Dispute

By Walter Pidham
Post Reporter

Violence flared up in the 11-day-old GSI cafeteria strike here early yesterday morning. Two persons were injured and three were arrested.

A few hours later, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach and Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming conferred on the strike. Fleming has charge of Federal buildings in which the 42 struck cafeterias are located.

Neither Schwellenbach nor Fleming disclosed details of the conference.

The outbreak of violence occurred at 5:45 a. m. in front of the Navy Department building on Constitution ave. at 18th st. nw. as workers hired by GSI to replace the strikers entered the building.

Injured were Augustus Dickens, 22, of 1522 Church st. nw., a picket, and James N. Ensley, also 22, of 1814 Corcoran st. ne., a cafeteria worker. Dickens required four stitches at Emergency Hospital for a laceration under the left eye. Ensley was treated for contusions and multiple lacerations at the Navy Department clinic.

Arrested and charged at No. 3 Precinct were three pickets:

Dickens, who was charged with assault upon a policeman during the brief free-for-all in which both District of Columbia and National Capital Parks police took part;

William J. Thompson, 26, of 1132 10th st. nw., assault with a dangerous weapon, by using his shoe-clad feet to stomp Ensley, the cafeteria worker who was injured; and Lilly Mae James, 32, of 925 M st. nw., simple assault.

The union, Local No. 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO), claimed the outbreak was provoked by National Capital Parks police. Union President Richard A. Bancroft charged park police "taunted the pickets and dared them to engage in a pitched battle."

Capital Park Police Pvts. Eugene A. Gross and Joseph W. Edmonds, however, gave this version of the fracas in a report to Parks Police Supt. Edward J. Kelly:

The two officers were patrolling Constitution ave. when they noticed "a disorderly crowd" at the Navy Department entrance. About 25 pickets, they said, were trying to keep workers from entering the building and "were assaulting them by manhandling."

Together with District Police Capt. George Waldrodt, Sergt. Howard E. Mowry and Corpl. Horace Childress, who arrived about that time, the Capital Parks police "rushed to the scene to restore order."

Corpl. Childress, the two Capital Parks policemen continued, in their report, was seized by Dickens and, in the scuffle, was thrown to the ground on his back. Pvt. Gross went to the District policeman's aid, grabbed Dickens and pulled him away from Childress.

Dickens then, the parks policemen charged, lunged back and Gross was struck from behind.

"As Dickens grabbed Pvt. Gross, it was necessary to use his baton to make the arrest," the report said. "In the meantime, Officer Edmonds went to the aid of Sergt. Mowry, who was being manhandled by a picket named Thompson."

Arraigned before Municipal Judge George D. Neilson, Thompson waived preliminary examination and was held to the grand jury under $1000 bond. Dickens also was held to the grand jury under $500 bond, and Lilly May James, who asked for a jury trial, was held under a $300 bond.

At noon the union staged mass picketing about the south Interior Department building, on C st. between 18th and 19th sts. A union spokesman estimated between 300 and 350 pickets formed an almost solid line about the building.

Meanwhile, J. C. Neihuss, GSI personnel director, said approximately 1250 workers were on the job in the struck cafeterias. Approximately 1500 were employed at the time of the strike.

Adoption Approved

Mother Loses Son, 3, to Navy Couple

A Washington mother yesterday lost her fight to prevent her three-year-old son from being adopted by another couple.

Adoption of the boy, John Russell Atkins, son of Mrs. Dorothy I. Jensen, 36, of 4600 3rd pl. sw., was approved by the Maryland Court of Appeals in Annapolis. The action, which affirmed an adoption decree passed in 1947 by Prince Georges County Court, made the lad the legal son of Navy Lieut. and Mrs. Jesse E. Gose.

The boy was put up for adoption by Mrs. Jensen's divorced second husband, Andrew J. Atkins, in 1946, following their separation in 1945. The Goses have cared for the boy since then.

Mrs. Jensen, a Red Cross employe, last night said "any possible further act that can be taken will be taken." Her attorney is Marion E. West.

The unanimous opinion, written by Judge Stephen Collins, pointed out that it was admitted by all parties concerned that the Goses "are ideal foster parents and that the infant has responded to the love and care which he is receiving."

Mrs. Jensen's desire to have the boy at her home was "natural and commendable," the Court said, but noted that she had had him for "only about one year" since his birth.

"The infant's future as John Russell Gose appears bright," said the court. "His future as John Russell Atkins, with the mother, invalid sister, and three stepbrothers and sisters appears, to say the least, highly problematical."

Thrice-married Mrs. Jensen has had six children, three by each of her first two marriages. She is presently married to a Navy enlisted man.

Low Bid Exceeds Estimates for 14th St. Span Job

A $3,546,570 bid, lowest of two submitted yesterday for building the east bridge superstructure for the new train-span 14th st. highway bridge, is "considerably above" latest District estimates, Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst revealed.

The low bid was submitted by Bethlehem Steel Co. of Baltimore, Md., he said. Whitehurst indicated it would receive "a good deal of thought" and study before a recommendation to accept or reject it is sent to the Commissioners.

Only other bidder was the American Bridge Co. of Ambridge, Pa., which submitted estimates totaling $3,720,002 for the superstructure work.

The bridge is the first of two spans that will eventually replace the present 14th st. bridge over the Potomac River.

Eli A. Smith Dies; Won Rickard Bet ith Husky Team

Chico, Calif., Jan. 15 (AP).—Eli A. Smith, who once won a $10,000 bet from Tex Rickard by mushing his team of huskies from Alaska to Washington, D. C., is dead.

The veteran Alaskan dog team driver and racer died in a rest home here Tuesday at the age of 92. He was a native of East Troy, Wisc.

His bet with Rickard, who later became the noted boxing promoter of a generation ago, was made in 1905. He left Nome on November 14, 1905 and reached Washington on November 20, 1907 after traveling 8000 miles.

Hearing Ends In Collapse Of Building

Additional evidence that the collapse of the Empire Building was caused by the weakening of a wall-bearing pier was given yesterday in the final public session of the special investigating board.

Chairman Stewart Beall said the board will study records and visit the scene of the disaster before preparing a report.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald has already announced that if any evidence of criminal negligence is presented, his office will take action.

Owner Is Silent

Yesterday, Nick Papanicolas, owner of the Empire Building, refused to testify after denying that he had been informed by the City Finance Co. of a crack in the pier. Other witnesses denied finding a crack while working on interior alterations.

Papanicolas also denied reports that he had attempted to coerce the building janitor, Charles Brown, to refrain from testifying on an alleged abutment removal.

Papanicolas' attorney, his brother, George, said that he had advised Nick not to answer questions on the grounds that "he might tend to incriminate himself."

Four persons were killed and 12 injured when the seven-story structure at Ninth st. and New York ave. nw. partially collapsed December 16.

Papanicolas' engineer, James M. Gongwer, said the failure of the pier between two openings on the street floor of the building caused the collapse. He said the pier was carved from an existing wall and was not erected as a supporting column. This was indicted by the soft type of bricks and mortar lime used, he explained.

Shipp Repeats Theory

Murray T. Shipp, president of the Pines Wrecking Corp. of Arlington which is now clearing the building debris, repeated his opinion that the collapse was due to weakness of materials in the critical pier.

Bernard F. Locraft, civil engineer, said the weight of a hanging ceiling installed during renovations in the City Finance Co. of supporting columns. He said it fice area was an additional load on was a "very heavy" ceiling of about 10 pounds per square foot and in some sections even heavier.

Board Chairman Beall, an engineer, estimated the added weight at about a ton.

Morris Cladny, employed by Papanicolas for show-window alterations and by the loan firm for interior renovations, said the suspended ceiling was installed without a permit after he had contracted "someone" in the District Inspections Department on the matter.

Michelson Left $150,000 Estate For Invalid Son

Charles Michelson, former director of publicity for the Democratic National Committee, who died last week at the age of 79, left an estate valued at $150,000.

A petition for probate of his will filed in District Court yesterday revealed that the bulk of his estate is made up of stocks and bonds.

The will provides for a trust fund to be set up with an annual income of $2000, to be paid to an invalid son, Benjamin Charles Michelson. In the event that the son recovers his health the will provides that the son inherit the entire estate.

If the son dies childless the estate will be divided among Michelson's nieces and nephews.

Student Wins Cup

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 15.—Miss Carolyn-Jean Sprower of Freeport, L. Y., has been awarded the silver cup given annually at Mary Washington College to the member of the Alumnae Daughters Club who attains the highest scholastic average. She is a senior and will graduate in June.

1797 Secretary Brings $11,000 at Maryland Auction

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—A secretary made in 1797 by John Shaw brought about $11,000 at an administrator's sale of some of the effects of the late Peter Hagner Magruder of Annapolis.

Spirited bidding marked the auction, at which an early English silver service brought $800 and a Francis Scott Key letter, dated 1814, was bid in at $85.

Magruder died about a year ago. He had served for 26 years as civilian secretary of the Naval Academy and was a past commodore of the Annapolis Yacht Club.

A spokesman for the auctioneer today said he could not disclose the names of the purchasers of the desk and Key letter, but added they would remain in Baltimore. The silver service was bid in by an antique dealer.

Hearing on Mason Set for Jan. 23

Senate District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) yesterday ordered an open hearing to be held at 10:30 a. m., January 23, on President Truman's nomination of Guy Mason for his third 3-year term as a District Commissioner.

A room for the hearing will be announced later. Committee aides said that all persons who want to be heard on the nomination should notify the Senate District Committee in advance.

Wyatt Named to Lead Cocks' Election Bid

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—Virginia's Fourth Congressional District Republican leaders met here today and elected E. A. Wyatt of Petersburg as campaign chairman to lead the race of T. Robert Cocks of Kenbridge for the vacancy created by the death of Representative Patrick Drewry.

Balloting will take place February 17, and voters will choose between Cocks—first GOP candidate in the district in many years—and three Democratic candidates. The latter are State Senator Morton G. Goode of Dinwiddie; Watkins M. Abbitt, Appomattox County Commonwealth's Attorney, and Robert W. Arnold, Sussex Commonwealth's Attorney.

At Gallinger

Improper Food Charge Is Denied

Charges that tuberculosis patients receive improper food at Gallinger Hospital were made yesterday by a department head but denied by the hospital superintendent.

Dr. Sol Katz, chief medical officer of the tuberculosis department, said the patients were so badly fed that their recovery was retarded. The hospital is paying only 65 cents a day to feed the tuberculosis patients, he declared.

Many patients return their trays virtually untouched because the food often is poorly prepared and served cold, he added.

Gallinger Superintendent Alvin Sweeney denied the charge and said "employes and patients are satisfied" with their fare. Tuberculosis patients receive extra amounts of eggs, bread and milk each day, he said. He estimated the hospital spends abouts 85 cents a day to feed TB patients, compared with the 65-cent-a-day rate for other patients.

He said he "didn't see how food could be cold" when it was served from a heated food cart direct to the patient.

"When meatless and eggless days were observed," he added, "the tuberculosis patients got meat and eggs just the same."

Both Commissioner Guy Mason and Health Officer George C. Ruhland denied they had ever received letters of complaint about the food, which Dr. Katz said he had sent repeatedly to Dr. Sweeney and Assistant Health Officer Daniel Seckinger. Mason and Ruhland promised a full investigation of the charges.

Dr. Sweeney admitted receiving food complaint letters from Dr. Katz and various patients but insisted that they "usually" were "investigated and adjustments made."

He said the number of complaints had dropped materially after July 1, 1946, when more money was appropriated for food at Gallinger.

Transport Parley Called

The Second Highway Transportation Congress will be held in Washington on May 6 and 7 at the Mayflower, Arthur C. Butler, director of the National Highway Users Conference which is sponsoring the Congress, said yesterday.

7 Gamblers Fined $5000 On 'Numbers'

A stern judicial warning was served in nearby Prince Georges County yesterday to any Washington gamblers "who think they can come out here and prey on the people."

To make his point emphatic, Hyattsville Police Court Judge Alan Bowie levied a fine of $1000 and a two-year, suspended sentence on Abe Plisco, alias William (Jewboy) Dietz, and assessed fines totaling $4000 on six other persons.

Dietz, 40, of 1730 Hobart st. nw., was described as the "brains" of the lottery business by State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie, who personally prosecuted the cases.

"This is a situation that has grown up and the time has come for it to be stopped," Judge Bowie declared.

"This applies not only to you people here today," he said to the seven guilty gamblers, "but to any other gamblers who think they can come out of Washington and prey on the people of Prince Georges County."

Dietz and the other six defendants before Judge Bowie yesterday were among 14 arrested in two swift raids in Suitland, Md., New Year's Eve. The raids, led by Maj. Ralph W. Brown, superintendent of Prince Georges police, netted $13,000 in cash and a large quantity of number slips and office equipment.

Dietz was seized in a bungalow at 4232 Maine ave., in Suitland, along with the others fined yesterday.

Four Fined $750 Each

The prosecution suggested there be "some distinction" made in sentencing Dietz, although he conceded the defendant had no previous convictions for major crimes. He charged, however, that Dietz has "an impressive police history and certainly is responsible for the whole operation."

Four of the other defendants were fined $750 each and given one-year suspended jail sentences. They were:

Percy M. May, 46, of 18 Woodland ave., Takoma Park; Edgar J. Behrle, 51, of 304 34th st. se.; Henrietta Elizabeth LeBau, 38, of 822 4th st. ne., and Clara Leola Osborne, 32, of 1135 W st. se.

Two others, Harry Portner, 35, of 1702 Lanier pl. nw., and George E. Bading, 35, of 1368 Euclid st. nw., were fined $500 each and given one-year suspended sentences.

In the second New Year's Eve raid—on the Suitland Riding Academy, 4436 Suitland rd., a short distance from the raided bungalow—police arrested seven others.

Book Inquiry Adjourns With Corning Away

School Head Attends Conference With Commission Instead

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning today is in the middle of the old difficulty a man has serving two masters.

Dr. Corning failed to show up yesterday for a meeting with the House District Subcommittee headed by Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) investigating complaints about some textbooks used in the schools.

As the meeting started, Representative Miller asked for Dr. Corning. First Assistant School Superintendent Garnet C. Wilkinson in charge of the District's Negro schools, stood up and explained that Dr. Corning was attending an emergency conference with the District Commissioners.

Miller and other subcommittee members said they felt Corning should be there—and Miller promptly adjourned the meeting until 10 a. m. today so that Corning could attend.

Mrs. Watkins Asked Meeting

The conference with the Commissioners grew out of a request from the District Board of Education's committee on GI education for a conference on obtaining more personnel for the GI program in the local schools, according to Corning.

District officials said the request for the conference was made by Mrs. Elise Z. Watkins, secretary of the Board of Education, to Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary of the Board of Commissioners, on January 8. The appointment was granted the same day, with the date set for yesterday. Corning said he was told by the GI committee chairman, Dr. Robert A. Maurer, that it was essential to have the superintendent present in the conference with the Commissioners.

Apologizes for Absence

Dr. Corning said he had not realized that his personal presence at the congressional meeting was essential, and had believed it would be satisfactory to have the schools represented by other officials. He said he owed Miller's committee an apology.

The brief meeting yesterday touched off notes of discord.

Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.), a member, protested having the committee's regular hearing room turned over to other use—income tax consultants—and crowding the subcommittee into a tiny room nearby.

"Until we get a room where people can come in and sit down and be comfortable, I shall not participate in any further meetings," said Smith. Committee aides said the regular meeting room will be used today.

Police Chase Nets Suspect in Lottery

A 48-year-old man whose pockets, police said, bulged with lottery slips and whose automobile trunk was packed with them was arrested here yesterday afternoon.

Identified as Joseph Anderson Stanfield, 48, of 411 Columbia rd. nw., he was charged with operating a lottery and possessing lottery slips.

Police said they chased Stanfield's sleek, black 1947 limousine through downtown streets for 10 minutes at "a high speed" before he was finally stopped at 4th and W sts. nw.

"Okay, you got me. Here's the stuff," police quoted Stanfield as saying as he emerged from the car.

The arrest was made by Detective Sergt. Howard E. Ogle and Detective Mark Gray of the Police Vice Squad. Stanfield was released under $1500 bond for appearance this morning in Municipal Court.

FSA Aid to 30,000

More than 30,000 District residents received a total of $4,271,221 in Federal Security Agency aid during the fiscal year ended June 30, Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing reported yesterday.

In a preliminary statement based on the forthcoming annual FSA report, Ewing said 32,291 District residents received health, education, welfare, vocational rehabilitation and social security assistance during the year.

He estimated District employers paid $2,401,000 in benefits to 12,861 persons under the unemployment insurance program.

Byrd to Present Flag

The Virginia State flag he carried over the South Pole will be presented by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd to the Virginia Society at a banquet January 29 at the Shoreham.

The banquet has been arranged in honor of Byrd, who will be presented the society's gold medal of achievement.

Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) will make the presentation to the Antarctic explorer—the first Virginian selected by the society for what is planned as an annual award.

Firms File Returns

Income tax returns have already been received from most of approximately 60 unincorporated businesses required to file income tax returns by yesterday's deadline, A. F. Brooks, assistant administrator of the District Income Tax Division, revealed last night.

Under a law passed by Congress last year, unincorporated businesses with gross incomes exceeding $10,000 a year must file income returns. Yesterday's deadline was for those which operate on a fiscal year basis. Brooke estimated the firms would pay the District approximately $16,000 in taxes.

7 Scientists Honored

Seven civilian scientists of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics received the Medal for Merit yesterday from the United States Air Force for their "brilliant accomplishments."

The medals were given the scientists by Gen. Carl Spaatz, USAF Chief of Staff.

The scientists are Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, NACA chairman; Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, former chairman of NACA and now of the National Bureau of Standards; Dr. George W. Lewis, NACA research consultant; John F. Victory, executive secretary, NACA; Dr. Henry J. E. Reid, director of the NACA laboratory at Langley Field, Va.; Smith J. DeFrance, director of the laboratory at Moffett Field, Calif.; Edward R. Sharp, director of the Cleveland laboratory.

Trees Wanted

The D. C. Recreation Board yesterday launched a drive to "eliminate the barren, shadeless character" of many of the city's playgrounds through a tree-planting program.

Civic groups and District residents are asked to help by contributing funds for the purpose to the Recreation Board before March 1, when the spring planting program will begin. About $25 will pay for one tree, planting and all.

Dog Show Entries Due

Entries for the second national specialty show of the Potomac Boxer Club close tomorrow at midnight. The show will be held at Fort Myer on the afternoon and evening of January 20, and judges will be John Phelps Wagner, of Milwaukee, Bob Rogers, of Lamont, Ill., and Francis P. Bigler, of Hazleton, Pa. Entry blanks may be obtained at any pet shop or from Mrs. Jouett Shouse, RE 2277.

Tel Aviv Mayor to Call

Israel Rokach, Mayor of the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv in Palestine, will be formally introduced to the District Commissioners today at 10 a. m. by Senator Alben Fred Kogod, president of the W. Barkley (D., Ky.), District officials revealed yesterday. Fred Kogod, president of the Jewish Community. Center,. and. Frank Boucher of the Variety Club will accompany the mayor and senator, they said.

Medical Parley Begins

A three-day conference on Army medical problems, called by Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Surgeon General, got under way last night at the Army Medical Center.

Dr. Frank H. Lahey, director of the Lahey Clinic of Boston and an authority on thyroid, spoke on "Thyroid Disease and Some of the Antithyroid Agents."

Gets Anniversary Job

Capt. James S. Douglas, jr., 913 Cameron st., Alexandria, yesterday was named executive secretary of Alexandria's bicentennial commission.

Douglas and the 20-man commission appointed last fall have the task of arranging a program to celebrate Alexandria's 200th birthday next year. City Council appropriated $10,000 for the celebration in the 1948 budget.

Falls Church Building

A total of $186,500 worth of building permits were issued by the town of Falls Church, Va. during the month of December, 1947. Building inspector N. G. Daavid said the sum represented the estimated value of 10 permits authorized during the month.

Polio Collection Stolen

A cardboard figure of a youthful polio victim was looted yesterday of about $10 in contributions for medical aid to real-life sufferers from the malady.

The money was in a receptacle around the neck of a cardboard showing a 14-year-old boy on crutches, wearing braces on both legs. The collection station was at 10th and E sts. nw.

Loss of the receptacle was noticed about 5:15 p.m. by an employe of Irving's Riding and Military Store on the corner, who notified Emmanuel Horwitz, store manager. Horwitz, who reported the theft to police, said that he would attach a bucket to the figure today in such a manner that it could not be removed.

Glass Expert to Talk

"New Developments in Glass" will be discussed by C. J. Phillips of the research laboratory of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. at the dinner meeting of the Baltimore-Washington section of the American Ceramics Society tomorrow night at 7 o'clock at the Lafayette Hotel, 16th and I sts. nw.

Phillips, a recognized authority on glass, is the author of a book, "Glass, the Miracle Maker," and numerous articles on the subject.

Cab Driver Fined $100

A Hyattsville (Md.) cab driver was fined $100 yesterday in Takoma Park Police Court on a charge of reckless driving.

Police identified the man as Robert A. Paul, 22, of Coolspring rd. Paul was reported to have forced a District police car off the road on January 1 during a Washington chase. He was arrested by Montgomery County police after crossing the District Line.

Boy Cut in Collision

FrederickW. Newbrech, 12, of 3115 Fayette rd., Kensington, Md., was treated and released at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, Md., for injuries received yesterday when the car in which he was riding collided with a Capital Transit bus at Howard and Connecticut aves., Kensington. The hospital reported 12 stitches were taken in lacerations on his face and head.

Isaac Sacks Dies in Fall From Window

A fall from a second-story window at his home, 718 Rittenhouse st. nw., yesterday proved fatal to Isaac Sacks, 90, retired Georgetown tailor.

He was found lying on a sidewalk beneath the open window at about 4 a. m. by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Verla Sacks, police said. He died 6½ hours later at Emergency Hospital.

An autopsy indicated death was due to multiple skull fractures, pneumonia and toxemia, Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, reported.

Mr. Sacks had been ill with pneumonia for several weeks and his daughter-in-law had been making periodic trips into his room during the night to see if he needed assistance.

Born in Riga, Latvia, he came to Washington 70 years ago. He had a tailor shop in the 3200 block of M st. nw. for 35 years until his retirement because of failing eyesight 20 years ago.

He leaves four sons, William, Benjamin, Max and Lewis Sacks; two daughters, Mrs. Anna Goldenberg, all of Washington, and Mrs. Rita Needles of Arlington, Va.; one sister, Mrs. Leah Goldberg, and nine grandchildren. Funeral services were not completed last night.

Prince Georges Grants 5 of 9 Liquor Permits

Five of nine applications for liquor permits were approved by the Prince Georges County Board of Liquor Commissioners at Upper Marlboro yesterday.

Successful applicants included W. M. Richardson, granted a Class A license for off sale of beer, wine and liquor at the Old Toll House on Marlboro Pike at Melwood; Fred J. and Jessie Schneider and R. P. Millner, Class D license for on sale of beer at the Curfew Inn, Muirkirk; Bernard M. Underwood, jr., Class B license for on sale of beer, wine and liquor at the Railroad Inn, Bowie; Alton C. Nicholson, Class A license for off sale of beer, wine and liquor at the R. and N. Liquors, Ritchie, and Joseph H. Bomstein, Class A license for off sale of beer, wine and liquor at the Maryland Delicatessen, Colmar Manor.

The liquor board also rejected two applications after nearby residents objected on the ground that their respective neighborhoods already had too many taverns, and continued action on four others.

Daniels Paid Capital Last Visit Dec. 18

Josephus Daniels, senior statesman and publisher who died at Raleigh, N. C., yesterday at the age of 85, was a visitor to the Washington political scene almost to the time of his death.

His most recent appearance here was also December 18 when he paid a social call on President Truman and addressed a dinner of the Women's National Democratic Club.

Mr. Daniels, an Ambassador to Mexico and a Secretary of the Navy during his long career, had interests other than political in Washington. One of his four sons, Dr. Worth B. Daniels, pracaices medicine here and lives at 1516 28th st. nw.

During the war years, another son, Jonathan W. Daniels, was active in Washington as assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense in 1942 and administrative assistant to President Roosevelt in 1943. He also served as White House secretary in charge of press relations.

Mr. Daniels' retirement as Ambassador to Mexico in 1941 did not prevent him from taking an active role in espousing or fighting legislation before Congress.

Opposed UMT

He appeared several times before a Senate committee to urge unification of the armed forces. He made known, too, that he was bitterly opposed to universal military training. He called it "talk of war."

The short, stout Raleigh, N. C., publisher-editor, with the twinkly eyes and kindly humor, had found time to intersperse an exciting journalistic career with activities as lecturer, author, religious leader, Secretary of the Navy during World War I and diplomat.

Shortly after his eightieth birthday, he revealed his philosophy of life in a college commencement address.

"The proof of the worth of education, of Christianity, and of civilization," he said, "is seen in doing the everyday tasks with a song on the lips, performing the hard tasks while you play the fife."

It was at a time when the Nation was beginning to feel the first effects of rationing in the Second World War.

Rationing? What of It?

"What if we are having rationing and priorities and will have to do without some of our gadgets for a while?" he asked. "We'll appreciate them all the more when we get them unrestricted again."

He resumed direction of all the operations of his newspaper, The News and Observer, when three of his sons, who had been running it during his absence in Mexico, became active in national defense a few months after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

"I thought it would be quite a chore, in my 80th year, to do three men's work," he commented. "The boys had me fooled. I do not have any trouble at all doing the work they were doing."

Pride in Work as Diplomat

He took unconcealed pride in the improvement shown in United States-Mexican relations during his years at Mexico City and was an ardent supporter of Franklin D. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy.

Daniels had an innate ability to make friends and to hold them. He also made enemies, who feared his pointed pen.

He was subjected to bitter criticism while he was Secretary of the Navy. Shortly after he took the post in 1912 he banished intoxicants from naval vessels, and later he established schools aboard ships for enlisted men.

Ridicule was widespread when he signed an order abolishing "port" and "starboard" as terms for "left" and "right" aboard Navy ships.

The test of his steel came, however, when the United States entered World War I. The Navy was expanded to a personnel of 533,000; ships were rushed to completion; two million American soldiers were transported across the sea under naval escort, and more than four billion dollars were spent without hint of extravagance, graft or incompetence.

When Franklin D. Roosevelt, who served under Daniels as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, became President in 1933 and named his old "boss," then past 70, as Ambassador to Mexico, the appointment met with student objection there. The Mexican dissidents held him accountable for American warships firing on Vera Cruz in 1916.

Public Attitude Changed

The objections soon subsided, however, and the Daniels personality soon made him recognized as a helpful friend of the republic to which he was accredited.

Daniels became a newspaper publisher in 1876 when, as an amateur, he issued a weekly paper at Wilson. He graduated to professional work when he became editor of the Wilson Advance at the age of 18. In 1885 he moved to Raleigh and bought a controlling interest in the State Chronicle. Previously he had published small papers in Rocky Mount and Kinston, abandoning the latter venture to study law at the University of North Carolina—not with the intent of practicing law but to broaden himself for his newspaper career.

In 1887 he was appointed State printer, an office which helped him financially to become a successful publisher. He held this post—the only State office of his life—for six years, giving it up in 1893 to go to Washington as chief clerk of the Interior Department in the second Cleveland Administration.

After two years in Washington, he returned to Raleigh to remain 18 years before becoming Secretary of the Navy. He bought the News and Observer, a rival paper, in 1894 and combined it with the State Chronicle. With Daniels as editor, the paper grew to wide political influence in the State and Nation.

Daniels was born May 18, 1862, in Washington, N. C., the son of Josephus and Mary Cleaves Daniels. His father, a shipbuilder, died when his son was a year old and Mrs. Daniels, left in only modest circumstances, moved to Wilson where young Josephus received such early training as the period afforded in that section. Later he managed to complete a course at the Wilson Collegiate Institute.

Daniels' tenure as ambassador was marked in April, 1934, by the signing of a pact for the settlement of all claims by American citizens against the Mexican government. Some of these went back to 1867, but most of them were based upon incidents in the 1910-1920 revolutionary decade.

Settled for $5,448,000

A lump sum was agreed upon as wiping out virtually all these claims and two years later a special commission fixed $5,448,000 as the amount Mexico should pay. This amount was less than 3 per cent of the total asked by Americans. The Senate, however, approved the pact and yearly payments of $522,240, representing principal and interest, started on January 1, 1935. Daniels, on leave of absence at the time, delivered the 1937 installment to the United States Treasury in person.

The ambassador was under fire of American Catholics after he made a speech in July, 1934, in which he called attention to remarks by Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles anent the education of children. Calles, in his speech, had flayed clerical elements in Mexico and American Catholics, arguing that Daniels, in quoting favorably from one part of the address, had given at least moral support to the Mexican program for "socialistic education," demanded he be recalled as "misrepresenting the United States." Daniels explained to the State Department that he had avoided mention of controversial subjects.

There was an attack upon the Embassy on June 23, 1935, when a dynamite bomb was hurled into the grounds from a passing automobile. Several windows were broken by the explosion. The Mexican government apologized promptly, even though the Ambassador had filed no complaint. One explanation said the bomb was thrown by persons hostile to the administration of President Cardenas.

Able Campaigner

Daniels was a great campaigner, politically and professionally. His newspaper was always driving for reforms in the State government, improved systems of taxation, and against graft and corruption. He was a personal and political dry.

He campaigned for about every Democratic presidential candidate to be put in the running after he reached maturity and for 20 years was Democratic National Committeeman from North Carolina.

During his first stay in Washington he met William Jennings Bryan, then a young Congressman from Nebraska. Daniels was strong for Bryan in the "free silver" campaign of 1896, having thrilled to the brilliant "Cross of Gold" speech in Chicago. He stood by Bryan in the three times the Commoner ran unsuccesfully for the presidency, and they were fast personal friends. Daniels headed the Bryan memorial association.

Daniels also was an early Wilson man. He organized the State for the New Jersey Governor and aided otherwise in the three-cornered campaign of 1912. Wilson named him Secretary of the Navy, and Daniels remained a stanch supporter and advocate of Wilson until the end. One of his books was a biography of the war-time President.

Supported Cox, Davis, Smith

James M. Cox and John W. Davis received his support after their nominations, and the North Carolinian supported Alfred E. Smith, though his State deserted the 1928 Democratic standard bearer and gave its electoral votes to Herbert Hoover.

Daniels was one of the first to rally to the banner of Franklin D. Roosevelt, whom he looked upon as a sort of personal protege. He campaigned for the "New Deal" from coast to coast, his influence being felt particularly in the Midwest.

Roosevelt held Daniels in high esteem and after success at the polls offered the North Carolinian his choice of several high government appointments. Daniels took the Mexico post.

Aside from the political aspects of his speeches and writing, Daniels was in demand as a public speaker and he wrote several books of a historical nature. Besides his life of Wilson, he wrote a biography of Worth Bagley, who was Mrs. Daniel's brother and was the first American naval officer killed in the Spanish-American War.

Daniels' capabilities were recognized by seven institutions of higher learning. He held the degree of doctor of letters from Washington and Lee University and honorary doctorates of law from the University of North Carolina, Davidson College, Wake Forest College, Ohio Wesleyan University, the University of Maryland and Philadelphia Military Academy.

In May, 1888, he married Miss Addie Worth Bagley. Four sons, three of whom grew up to become connected with the News and Observer, were born to the union.

One became a doctor here. Jonathan Daniels, after wartime service in Washington, returned to Raleigh as executive editor of the News and Observer. The other sons are Frank Daniels, general manager of the paper, and Josephus Daniels, jr., the paper's business manager.

Walter Reed's Widow, at 92, Keeps Interest in Flowers

FLOWERS—HER FAVORITE SUBJECT—Mrs. Walter Reed admires flowers sent on her ninety-second birthday anniversary

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 15 (Spl). Mrs. Walter Reed, widow of the conqueror of yellow fever, puffed out the candles of her ninety-second birthday cake at the Blue Ridge Summit home of her daughter near here yesterday.

Gift flowers decorated her room, answering her love of natnre and gardening and bringing again her favorite quotation— ". . . One is nearer God's heart in a garden, than any place else on earth."

A semi-invalid for two years, she was active in gardening, in short story writing, painting and brass handicraft until she was 85. Yesterday she sang for her birthday guests.

Born in Murfreesboro, N. C., the former Miss Amelia Lawrence, she was married to the famed Army surgeon April 25, 1876. At the risk of his own life, he gave to medical science the knowledge that yellow fever, which felled many United States troops in Cuba, was carried by the mosquito. Walter Reed Hospital in Washington is named for him. He died 46 years ago.

In addition to the daughter, Blossom Reed, Mrs. Reed has a 70-year-old son, Maj. Gen. Walter L. Reed of 2810 36th pl. nw., and two grandchildren, Mrs. Landon Carter of Singapore, wife of an English surgeon, and Mrs. Charles H. Royce of Fort Benning, Ga.

Woman Reaches 100 in Winchester

Winchester, Va., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Elizabeth Sloat, veteran Winchester resident, celebrated her 100th birthday today at the Maplewood Nursing Home.

A native of Baltimore, Mrs. Sloat came here shortly after the Civil War. In 1871 she married Walter D. Sloat, who died in 1913. Two sons, Harry K. and Ernest Sloat, live in Washington.

Mrs. Sloat is well in spite of her advanced age. She took daily walks on the Home grounds last summer, and is looking forward to the coming of spring again. She gets about unassisted, and visits residents of the home daily.

Washington, Pa., Jan. 15 (AP).—Burton Carnot Colt, 60-year-old president of the Tri-State Engineering Co., died yesterday following a heart attack suffered last week.

Leaders Laud Daniels as Fighter, Man

Presidents, Cabinet members and others in public life joined yesterday in paying tribute to Josephus Daniels after his death at Raleigh, N. C.

President Truman and President Aleman of Mexico expressed their grief at the passing of the elder statesman and publisher. These were some of the other tributes:

Attorney General Tom C. Clark—"All Americans are grieved at the passing of Josephus Daniels. As a stalwart supporter of their freedom, they knew him not only as a distinguished public official, but also as a great newspaper publisher with a fearless zeal for freedom of the press and speech."

Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren, formerly of Washington, N. C.—"Mr. Daniels was the first citizen of North Carolina. As a crusading editor of strong conviction who never surrendered, he saw many of his battles culminate on the statute books of State and Nation."

Rafael de la Colina, Charge de Affaires of the Mexican Embassy here—"The people of my country who learned to love him just as loyally and devotedly as he loved Mexico will forever enshrine his memory. President Miguel Aleman and his Secretary of Foreign Affairs have instructed me to convey to the family of this illustrious son of North Carolina their deepest sympathy on their bereavement."

(The embassy announced Luis Fernandez Macgregor, counselor of the embassy, will represent Mexico at Mr. Daniels' funeral rites.)

The Democratic National Committee—"The death of Josephus Daniels is a great loss tothe Nation and tothe Democratic Party. . . . Few men in public life had an equal facility in the making of friends and holding their friendships over a period of years. Josephus Daniels will be sorely missed."

Gov. Gregg Cherry of North Carolina—"In a life so active he often encountered those with whom he disagreed, but opponents usually admitted that Josephus Daniels was always on the side of religion, morality and good government."

Senator Connally (D., Tex.)—"Josephus Daniels was a great public character . . . He was a man of rare personal probity and integrity . . . His death is a distinct loss to the Nation and to the world."

Secretary of the Army Royall of Goldsboro, N. C., said the death "is a serious loss to the Nation as well as a very personal tragedy to me." He said Mr. Daniels was "one of the truly great men in the life of our State and our country."

Jacob W. Mack

Cincinnati, Jan. 15 (AP).—Jacob W. Mack, 72, nationally known in Jewish circles, died today after a heart attack.

He was a former chairman of the board of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and a past president of the International Association of Garment Manufacturers.

One of his brothers was the late United States District Judge Julian W. Mack of New York.

Gala Fete Slated For Veteran, 102

Bristol, Va.-Tenn., Jan. 15 (AP). Gen. Julius F. Howell is used to big birthday parties by now, but the one being planned to celebrate his 102d birthday here Saturday promises to outdo anything the Confederate veteran has experienced.

Governors Tuck of Virginia and McCord of Tennessee have assured the celebration committee they will be on hand.

So have America's one-time courier on the staffs of Gen. Roger W. Pryor of Virginia and Gen. John Bratton of North Carolina, both cavalry commanders.

He was captured three days before Appomattox and spent three months as a prisoner at Point Lookout, Md. He was discharged as a corporal at Fort Monroe, Va.

His title of general stems from his two terms as national commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans in 1939 and 1940.

The Washington Post
GEN. JULIUS HOWELL
Bristol's centenarian-plus sweetheart, Screen Actress Mary Pickford, and Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet of Marietta, Ga., 82-year-old widow of Gen. James Longstreet. Her husband was second in the Confederate command to Gen. Robert E. Lee.

The governors of all 13 original Confederate States have been invited.

The observance is being arranged by the alumni association of Bristol's Virginia Intermont College. General Howell served as president of Virginia Intermont in 1901. It was then known as Southwest Virginia Institute. Before that he was professor of history at the University of Arkansas.

HERE'S WHY
THIS WINTER
The heating oil supply situation is critical. Unless you and all other users of heating oil burn 15% less than normal during January, February and March, your home may be cold! Today the industry's production is the greatest in history—BUT—still not enough to meet the record demand. To save your 15%, take these steps now: Set thermostat at 68°... turn down to 60° at night or when away... keep radiators off in all unused rooms... use fireplace whenever possible — keep flues closed when not in use.

FORD Bonus* Built TRUCKS

Built Stronger to Last Longer!
More Than 139 Models!
NEW All Through!

Bonus* Built—THE AMAZING RESULT OF AN ENGINEERING PRINCIPLE THAT ASSURES WIDER USE, LONGER LIFE . . . and ONLY Ford Trucks Have It!

EVERY single one of the great new Ford Trucks for '48 is Bonus Built . . . designed and built with extra strength in every vital part. But that's only part of this vital truck engineering principle . . .

This extra strength provides WORK RESERVES that pay off in two important ways:

● FIRST, these WORK RESERVES give Ford Trucks a greater range of use by permitting them to handle loads beyond the normal call of duty. Ford Trucks are not limited to doing one single, specific job!

● SECOND, those same WORK RESERVES permit Ford Trucks to relax on the job . . . to do their jobs easier, with less strain and less wear. Thus, Ford Trucks last longer because they work easier!

Yes, Ford Trucks are Bonus Built . . . built stronger to last longer! That's why there are more Ford Trucks in use today than any other make!

*BONUS: "Something given in addition to what is usual or strictly due."... Webster's Dictionary.

A Familiar Tale Is Ably Retold

By Richard L. Coe

DOES YOUR HEART bleed for the poor racketeers who've turned to the nerve-wracking business of running posh night clubs? Are you thrilled by the goings-on in the inner sancta of elegant boites where the wealthy spend their pleasure-filled evenings, gawking and guzzling?

Such is the setting of the Warner's new film with tough Burt Lancaster, tough Lizabeth Scott and tough Kirk Douglas. The picture's called "I Walk Alone," and underneath its glossy sheen it's tough and hard. Like an egg.

As one whose knowledge of night clubs stems from the movies, I must confess that I seldom darken the doors of such places because the evidently inexhaustible lore presented by the movies strikes me as being morbidly depressing. The movies have been carrying on some sort of subtle propaganda against night clubs for some time now and their success in keeping this old party out of them has been immense.

Night clubs in the movies always are run by the most disreputable riff-raff, murderers who've switched their misdeeds onto other persons whose guilt is only a gram less than their own. Their attendants are smooth, suave types beneath whose white shirt fronts beat cruel hearts, or else they're moronic numbskulls of virile brawn whose hearts are pure but whose reflexes are criminal.

Night Club Hospitality

And there's always a girl, a beautiful tarnished thing who's been singing around such spots since she first evaded the truant officer. She may have been naughty, or even sinister, but when she comes across someone good and clean, she knows it and will sacrifice all her tight-fitting garments for a kitchen apron priced at $19.95 in the January white sales.

And among the clientele of such exclusive holes you'll find the selfish society woman, bred in the finishing schools, toying with the idea of marrying the brains of the organization. When she doesn't like one of his customers she demands he be thrown out; this leads to a dreadful scene at the bar because the unkempt wretch is always either the best friend or the worst enemy of the boss. (This singular insistence on treating friends and enemies alike while they enjoy his hospitality is a sure sign of the movie night club proprietor.)

Back of all these relationships always lies some bloody battle of prohibition days, a double-cross which has been nurtured in the soul of the wounded while his body has been incarcerated in one of those prisons to which Burt Lancaster seems eternally consigned by the flicks.

Yes, There's a Fight

Yes, all this sentimental hardness is what's been keeping this character away from the night spots; it's just impossible to relax when you know all this is swirling around you.

Hal Wallis, who produced such theses for Warners for some years, now has moved over to Paramount, where he's up to his old theme in suitable settings and with such hardened types as Lancaster and Miss Scott. Having discovered that Lancaster was so fine in "The Killers," the movies are now unable to do anything else with him. True, his forehead does slope a trifle suspiciously, but surely some new character of less criminal tendencies can be found for him. Miss Scott, who looks like a cat without whiskers, either has advanced somewhat in the art of acting or else has become accustomed to her usual role.

Others at work in this able retelling of a familiar fable include Wendell Corey, playing one of those weak pawns of thugdom, and Kirk Douglas, whose charm is frequently discussed although its essence is elusive. There are several bonebreaking scuffles that liven up the soundtrack, which otherwise boasts such exchanges as "You're hurting me" and "You love it" and the all too-truthful observation, "All the new songs sound alike." How true, how true.

"I WALK ALONE," Paramount release produced by Hal Wallis. Screen play by Charles Schnee, adapted by Robert Smith and John Bright from a play, "Beggars Are Coming to Town," by Theodore Reeves. Directed by Byron Haskin. Song, "Don't Call It Love" by Ned Washington and Allie Wrubel. At the Warner.

Maryland Selects Fuel-Saving Group

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—Governor Lane and Judge Emory H. Niles, new State fuel coordinator, today named 100 Marylanders to assist them with the fuel conservation program.

The initial meeting of the group, known as the Maryland Citizens Advisory Committee, has been called for Saturday at 11 a. m. in Baltimore.

The number of college students this year is estimated at nearly 2,250,000, 60 per cent more than in 1940 and four times as many as in 1920.

Tuck's Reorganization Message Due Wednesday

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—Governor Tuck's message on one of the "top secrets" of the current legislative session probably will be presented to a joint session of the General Assembly on Wednesday, January 21, at 1 p. m.

The Governor's office announced today that the chief executive's message on reorganization of the State government would be delivered on Wednesday instead of the following day as tentatively planned, if such a change is agreeable to both houses of the Legislature.

The report of the commission studying reorganization of the State government headed by former Senator Thomas G. Burch of Martinsville was completed and transmitted to the Governor on December 30.

Raft Is Par With Screen Play

'Intrigue' Isn't Up to 'Terry' But Dragon Lady's Authentic

By Leo Brady

Somebody has already noted that "Intrigue," now at the Capitol, bears a strong resemblance to "Terry and the Pirates," but this comparison gives you an idea only of the film's setting and of the kind of melodrama it sets out to be. In the final result, the dialogue is considerably below Milton Caniff's standard (or his successor's) and the acting is of the kind never encountered in the ink figures of the comic strip.

"Intrigue" stars George Raft, and the plot, in skeletal form, is a good adventure affair. Flying Tiger is unjustly dismissed from service, turns black market racketeer, meets true love, loses best friend, reforms. And the harrowing that Mr. Raft goes through before regeneration sets in is up to par: leering villains, audible cracks on the jaw, fights on moving vehicles and so forth. But the screen play provided by Barry Trivers and George Slavin is slavishly imitative and trivial in the extreme.

All of this takes place in and around Shanghai against some pretty snappy California-Oriental decor, and attempts to blow up its importance by inserting a pseudo-March-of-Time sequence pointing up the horror caused by the greed of black marketing and inflation. But the only really appealing scenes are those in an International Settlement School where Helena Carter (the equivalent of Spray O'Hara) and some small Americans of Chinese descent soften Raft's heart. Either this is the best dialogue of the picture or the kids and Miss Carter speak the language better than their coHeagues.

Raft's acting has been pummeled so often that you need only know he is down to his usual standard. He hasn't changed since that two-act he used to share 50-50 with a half-dollar.

The histrionic lulu of "Intrigue" is June Havoc, who plays a villainess remarkably like the Old Dragon Lady herself. June talks as though she has cubes for teeth and sports an expression that could be induced only by bound feet. In her gowning, she attempts to accomplish fully clothed what her sister achieved by more strenuous means, but it doesn't distract from her acting.

Helena Carter and Tom Tully—as a sloppy reporter with infinite integrity—are the most likable persons around.

On the Capitol stage, the Jim Wong acrobats perform amazing feats with boundless energy; Jean Carroll, a femme Bob Hope, proves to be a comedienne with a sense of humor—even about some of her own material; the Crackerjacks, a Southern quartet, feature a boogie guitar and their own recordings, and Pancho and Diane sweep neatly through a series of dances. Kay DeWitt sings prettily when the Capitol Orchestra does a Good News medley, and Milt Slosser conducts his weekly organ sing.

"INTRIGUE," United Artists release produced by Sam Bischoff. Screen play by Barry Trivers and George Slavin. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. At the Capitol.

Capital Transit Zone Petition Is Heard

A petition by Capital Transit Co. to increase the area of the ICC's commercial zoning of Washington was heard by W. T. Croft and Sheldon Silverman, examiners, yesterday.

The company seeks to increase the zone defined by the ICC in 1937, and exempt from its regulation on the grounds of being an area of purely local operation, to simplify procedure in extending its lines to outlying territory in the future.

A recommended report, to which the company can file exceptions, will be prepared by the examiners for the ICC.

Mighty Armed Beaten by 25-1 Shot

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE FACT IS that Washington would be something of a bush-town in sports from December 1 until mid-April every year were it not for those basketball stalwarts, the Caps, who are a power in the Nation's top professional league.

POVICH

Somehow, the Caps never have been given their due in their home town despite the fact that in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities of the circuit they're rated as hot articles. But there's an encouraging trend. The other night the Caps drew a full house of 6,751 customers at Uline's Arena against Philadelphia, and a week before they played to 3,928 against New York.

Washington seems to be getting hep to the fact that the Caps are the best show in town. Bob Feerick, Bones McKinney and Fred Scolari aren't household words as yet, but they are making inroads and to the worshipful couple of thousand who would sooner miss a day's meals than stay away from the Caps' games on Wednesday and Saturday nights, these fellows are wunnerful.

Scolari is my personal favorite. He doesn't even look as if he belongs. He's short, chubby, choir-faced and the contradiction of everything that a pro basketballer is supposed to be physically, but he's quick, smart and skilled.

Right now, the Caps aren't out in front, in contrast to the runaway race they made of it last season when they lost only 11 games during the regular 60-game season, but even in last place in the Western division, they're not far out of it. Just 2½ games behind the Division-leading Chicago Stags, whom they've beaten twice in four games this year.

In fact, the Caps can blame the clubs in the Eastern Division for the high place of the Chicago team at this point. Not a club in the Eastern group of New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Providence, has been able to win a game from the Stags thus far, Publicist Joe Holman points out. The Chicago club has been fattening off the Eastern group.

For the first time in two years, the Caps are having it a bit rough in league play. They spread-eagled the league so far last season lowly Stags in the playoff series last season and were promptly they were over-confident, cocky, fat and saucy when they met the slapped down in three straight games. It cost the Washington players $1600 per man in playoff spoils.

THESE BASKETBALL guys are shooting for big money, incidentally. The Caps got $1200 per man simply by getting into the playoff last year, and if they had won it, as the Philadelphia Warriors did in the decisive battles with Chicago, they'd have collected $2200 per man. That's more than each of the Boston Red Sox was paid off as their share of the 1946 World Series, when they pay-off per man on the Red Sox was $2140.

If you're asking how a basketball series with its limited seating capacity in contrast to the big stadiums of the World Series teams can give the athletes a better pay-off, you must understand the workings. The arena owners, who own the basketball teams, post $80,000 as prize money for the winners even before the season begins and that sum goes into the play-off pot. It's big business.

Pro basketball can pay Joe Fulks, of the Philadelphia Warriors, $14,500 a year, Bob Feerick's contract with the Capitols calls for $9,500. The team have a payroll of only nine men. The franchise-operators keep all receipts of home games, get nothing for their road games. It's a smart operation in contrast to baseball which permits bad teams to feed off road-game receipts. It compels the local operator to put a good team in the race.

THE CAPS GOT off to a ragged start at the outset of the season, in contrast to their 17-game winning streak a year ago. They dropped seven of their first 11 games, but have bounced back impressivey with nine wine in their last 13 battles. Much of their success dates from their acquisition of a new Washington favorite, Sonny Hertzberg.

The other day the New York Knicks signed Sid Tanenbaum, the former N. Y. U. All-American at a big salary, but Hertzberg is rated a better performer than Tanenbaum, and the Caps' fans vow it. Coach Red Auerbach has been using him as a spot player and Hertzberg has been on the sensational side.

On Saturday night, the Caps play the New York Knicks at Uline's. The Knicks are leading the Eastern Division. It ought to be a beaut, with Tanenbaum and Hertzberk meeting head to head. I hope I've talked you into it.

NUPTIALS SUNDAY—Myron Gerber former Naval Academy football player, and his fiancee, Elizabeth Newald, pack traveling bags at Gerber's home, 3923 North Fifth st., Arlington, Va., for a honeymoon trip to Florida after wedding ceremonies next Sunday. Gerber and Miss Newald, whose home is in Orlando, Fla., met while they were students at W-L High, Arlington. Gerber will enroll in Florida U.

NEXT STOP WASHINGTON—Johnny Lujack, Notre Dame's All-America quarterback, is one of the most sought-after college plyaers of the 1947 football season. Above, he shows young admirers how he holds a football at a banquet at Portsmouth, Ohio, where he was guest speaker. Lujack was named male athlete-of-the-year in the annual Associated Press poll. Lujack will attend the Touchdown Club banquet here Saturday night

6-Year-Old Rampart Hangs On to Score Upset

By Fred Hayden
Associated Press Sports Writer

Gulfstream Park, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Armed, America's ace thoroughbred, stunned a closing day crowd of 15,385 here today when he bowed by a short head to Mrs. Helene K. Haggerty's lightly regarded Rampart in the $27,400 Gulfstream Park Handicap.

Warren Wright's champion went postward at the prohibitive odds of 15 cents to one dollar but the disadvantage of carrying 130 pounds to the winner's 108 and racing in the softest footing on the inside througout the mile and a quarter grind proved slightly too much for the 1947 horse of the year.

Rampart, with Mike Basile up, paid $53.70 for two and was timed in the excellent time of 2:02 flat while earning the $20,000 major portion of the seaside track's richest event.

Incline, owned by Joseph Tucci of Washington, was third in the field of six, three lengths off the front pair. Wide Wing, Respingo and Eb completed the group as named.

Armed Wins Only $4000

Second money for Armed was only $4000. It made his total earnings $767,700 and left him $48,360 short of first-place Stymie on the world money-winning ladder.

The racing strip had dried out to almost fast condition but along the inner rail, where Armed did his running, the going still was a bit slow and "dead." Jockey Doug Dodson came in for some criticism from those who thought his seven year old mount might have won if kept off the rail. Still others were inclined to believe that the glamor gelding is beginning to feel his age slightly.

However, Rampart, a coal black six year old mare whicn earlier in the successful meeting had set a mile and a sixteenth track record while accounting for the Biscayne Bay Handicap, today came within three-fifths of a second of the mile and a quarter track mark set by Armed under 129 pounds in the Gulfstream Park 'cap last march.

Bad Day For Wrights

It was a bad day all around for the fabulous Calumet Farm establishment, which started three favorites on the getaway program without one making the grade. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were present, as was the proud Philadeldphia owner of Rampart.

Jockey Basile, who said afterward that Rampart went easily virtually all the way and made him feel there was no cause to worry about the result, took the elderly mare to the front just after a good break.

Skins' Fans Will See 7 League Teams Play

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

New York, Jan. 5.—Without too much travel, Washington Redskin fans will be able to see the Skins play seven of the nine other National Football League teams next season.

But the Skins will not participate in the annual College-All-Star game in Chicago so long as President George Preston Marshall of the Washington club has his say-so.

Marshall made his position clear in regard tto the All-Star game the minute he arrived from California for the annual meeting of National League owners at the Hotel Commodore.

Star game, its promotion by Sports

Asked by Chicago reporter sabout his recent blast at the All-Editor Arch Ward of the Chicago Tribune and Marshall's contention that Ward is a leading figure in the rival All-America Conference, the Redskin boss erupted:

"The Redskins are boycotting the All-Star game. I will have nothing to do henceforth with anything promoted by Arch Ward, and no player under contract to me will be allowed to particiipate."

Bell Will Live Up to It

The National League's reaction to Marshall's boycott was a matter of conjecture.

Commissioner Bert Bell stated that as far as he knew, the 10-year contract, drawn up in 1942, still had four years to go and that the National League would live up to it.

A first draft of the 1948 NFL schedule was made, revised, reconsidered and left hanging in the balance.

But on this draft the Redskins, besides their regular home-and-home series with other Eastern division clubs—Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, New York and Boston—were down for Griffith Stadium meetings with the Detroit Lions and Los Angeles Rams.

Detroit's showing in Washington would be its first since 1946, when the Redskins took a 17-16 decision. It would be the first D. C. appearance of the Rams since they transferred to the West Coast.

Cardinals Not Scheduled

Also available to Washington enthusiasts would be, the annual Variety Club charity game in Baltimore, this time with the Chicago Bears. On the road, the early schedule called for games with the Bears and Green Bay. Only the Chicago Cardinals do not appear on the card, either at home or away.

Even under ordinary circumstances, the 10 pro football clubs have a difficult time working out a schedule to everybody's mutual satisfaction. This year, however, the major baseball leagues,

Hoyas Drop 48-35 Tilt To La Salle

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Undefeated LaSalle of Philadelphia was somewhat unimpressive last night at the Armory, largely because of an early lead, the Explorers won their twelfth in a row, beating Georgetown, 48-35, before 1000.

Georgetown, fighting as hard as it has in any game this season, cut the LaSalle edge to 34-26 after 10 minutes of the second half.

But speedy McCann dropped three more baskets to keep the Explorers' lead comfortable.

LaSalle Leads Early

The Hoyas picked a bad night to miss early shots and quickly found themselves on the short end of a 14-2 count.

Larry Foust, 6-foot-9 Explorers' center, played less than 10 minutes but made three baskets in the visitors' first scoring surge.

It took Georgetown seven minutes before Ken Brown notched the first field goal. He came back with another and Danny Kraus notched a field goal and a foul to bring the Hoyas within 5 points.

That's when the slick Philadelphians started clicking again. Little Bob McCann, 5-foot-8 dynamo, with two quick baskets and a foul, spearheaded the attack that gave the LaSalle a commanding 30-13 halftime advantage.

In the preliminary game, the undefeated Georgetown Frosh made it 10 in a row by handing Fort Belvoir a 46-39 setback. High-scoring John Mazziotta led the attack with 16 points.

Across the Nation

Yanks Will Be Fined for Signing Boy

CINCINNATI, Jan. 15 (AP).—Harry Nicholas of Valley Stream, N. Y., under contract with the New York Yankees, has been declared a free agent by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler because he allegedly was signed in violation of the high school rule, it was learned today.

Under baseball rules, the Yankees will be fined $500 for signing the youngster while he was attending high school.

It was understood Nicholas, a right-handed pitcher, was signed on July 31, 1947. He is scheduled to graduate in February.

Return of the Native

Lincolnton, N. C., Jan. 15 (AP). Former Gig Leaguer Johnny Allen, is coming back to his native North Carolina to roost as manager of the Lincolnton club of the Western Carolina League, A Class D Circuit.

Buck Mauney, Lincolnton owner, said Allen, former fireball pitcher for the New York Yankees and Giants, St. Louis Browns, Cleveland Indians and Brooklyn Dodgers, would move here within 30 days from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he has been engaged in business.

Reds Sign Three

Cincinnati, Jan. 15 (AP).—Virgil Stallcup, shortstop, and Hank Sauer, slugging outfielder, were signed for the 1948 season today by the Cincinnati Reds.

Stallcup, who batted .338 for Jersey City in the International League last year, is expected to play short, with Eddie Miller moving over to third base.

Sauer, voted the outstanding player of the International League the past season, botted .336, hit 50 home runs and drove in 141 baserunners for Syracuse in the International loop.

Ruth Improving

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Babe Ruth was reported by Mrs. Ruth today as feeling fine after passin a "very good night" at the Neurological Institute where he has been undergoing a physical checkup.

The former home run champion, will be 53 years old February 7. He plans to go to Florida next week.

Lujack Overwhelmed By Top Athlete Honor

By Jerry Liska
Associated Press Sports Writer

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 15 (AP).—All-American Quarterback Johnny Lujack of Notre Dame, on the threshhold of a lucrative professional football career, described as "really teriffic" his selection today as 1947's male athlete-of-the-year in the Associated Press poll.

"I can't believe this honor was given to a small-town boy from Pennsylvania," declared the 22-year-old gridiron wizard from Connelsville, Pa., who almost doubled the number of first-place votes accorded his nearest rival, tennis star Jack Kramer, in the AP's 1947 year-end poll of sports writers.

Lujack, succeeding another footballer, Army's Glenn Davis, in the annual role of athletic distinction, won 15 first-place votes in the widely distributed balloting, and on a point basis—with five for first, three for second and one for third, rolled up 116 tallies against 78 for Kramer.

Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankee outfielder and 1941 winner of the award, also received eight first-place votes, but finished third on a total-point basis with 49.

Lujack, one of the hottest prospects ever coveted by professional football, disclosed he had a "special" conference scheduled next Wednesday with the Chicago Bears of the National Football League.

Both the Bears and the Chicago entry of the rival All-America Football Conference hold draft rights to Lujack, who said he has talked, "but not too long," to each club.

"Think of being voted ahead of such famous athletes as Kramer, DiMaggio, Jackie Robinson (fourth with 37 points), and Ted Williams (fifth with 26)," Lujack mused with obvious awe, "it's just too overwhelming."

Lujack shied away from financial facts and figures on his pro venture which reportedly may pay him more than the heralded $100,000 Georgia's Charley Trippi received for a four-year contract with the Chicago Cardinals.

In fact, the quiet-spoken 180-pounder, named on the Associated Press All-America for two straight seasons, said he resented some rumors on how he will commercialize his grid talents. Declared Johnny:

"There's a report I will sign for $101,000, just to top Trippi's salary. That certainly sounds selfish and it certainly is wrong. And then I was supposed to have refused a $75,000 offer to make a movie, holding out for $100,000—just another untrue rumor."

Harrison's 65 Paces Field At Richmond

Richmond, Calif., Jan. 15 (AP). Tower E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark., knocked par for a liip today when he clipped seven strokes from par for a course record of 65 and first-day leadership in the $10,000 Richmond open golf tournament.

Worsham Has 73

Lew Worsham, National Open champion of Washington, D. C., carded 38, 35—73, seven strokes of the leader's pace.

Otto Greiner of Baltimore (Md.) had a 75.

Terrific length and accuracy with his irons brought the slow-talking Southerner the lead. He went out in two-under-par 35 and shot a five-under-par 30 on the back nine. Par for the sprawling 6415-yard layout is 37-35—72.

Despite his great round, Harrison failed to take much of an advantage over the field. He was only one stroke ahead of a pair of comparative unknowns, little Eric Monti of Los Angeles and veteran Jim Milward of Northernaire, Wis., each of whom checked in with 66's.

Scott Wins Skating Again

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 15 (AP).—Barbara Ann Scott, 18-year-old world figure skating champion from Ottawa, Canada, successfully defended her European title here tonight.

The Canadian ice queen, who first won the title at Davos last February, was officially announced as the winner at 9:40 p. m. (3:40 p. m., EST), although the point totals were not disclosed immediately.

Miss Scott, garbed in a flashing sequin-trimmed emerald green costume, performed her free skating events before an audience which packed the winter stadium.

Cancel Rest of Matches

Sho'men Mourn Mitchell Who Dies After Mat Injury

Washington College of Chestertown, Md., called off its six remaining wrestling matches following the death early yesterday of William Calvin "Buddy" Mitchell, its 165-pound matman.

Mitchell died as the result of spinal injuries sustained Tuesday in a match against Ralph "Whitey" Hubert of Catholic University.

Announcement of Washington College's cancellation of matches against Towson Teachers, Western Maryland, Loyola of Baltimore, Gallaudet and Johns Hopkins came from Coach George L. Ekaitis.

Ekaitis said, "It's too much to ask of our wrestlers to go into the ring with fresh thoughts of Billy on their minds. Its unfortunate that death came to Billy in a sport that has such a low fatality rate."

Washington College also cancelled a basketball game slated for tomorrow against Towson Teachers.

Mitchell, an 18-year-old freshman, suffered a separation in his spinal column. He was removed to Providence Hospital here where he died after 30 hours in an oxygen tent.

A native of Salisbury, Md., young Mitchell was president of his graduating class at Wiconico, (Md.) High in 1947, and won varsity letters in football and basketball there. He played center on Washington College's football team. This was his first wrestling venture.

The body will be returned to Salisbury today or tomorrow. Funeral arrangements haven't been completed.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Edwin Mitchell of Salisbury, his brother, Horace Edwin, jr., of Philadelphia, his sister, Mrs. Rachel Miliarn of Mansfield, Pa., and his grandfather, William C. Mitchell of Salisbury.

Lions, Rockets Play Tonight

Washington's hockey Lions will attempt to break a seven-game losing streak when they take on the Philadelphia Rockets on the Uline Arena ice at 8:30 tonight.

The locals have won two of three previous games with the Rockets and both triumphs were scored at Uline's.

Kenny Schultz, Lion center who suffered a sprained wrist in the Providence game last Friday, is expected to see action tonight. Defenseman Walt Babey, however, is still nursing a broken thumb.

Philadelphia will be paced by Phil Hergesheimer who led the American Hockey League in scoring last season.

St. John's Downs Longwood, 35-21

Using their first stringers only in the first and fourth quarters, the St. John's Cadets defeated Longwood (Md.) Prep, 35-21, yesterday at Longwood.

Jack George of St. John's garnered six points in the first quarter and added 13 in the fourth to take scoring laurels with 19. Johnny Jairas tallied 18 of Longwood's 21. The win was the fifth in six games for St. John's, while the loss was the third straight for Longwood.

De Paul Defeats St. John's, 69-66

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—De Paul's hard-driving Demons overcame a 19-point deficit with six minutes remaining to gain a 59-59 tie at the end of regulation time, then battled through two overtime periods to nip St. John's, 69-66, tonight in one of the most nerve-tingling basketball games played at Madison Square Garden.

Please Don't Ask Us for This Guy's Number

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

WHEN WE ANSWER a sports department phone we never know what we're going to get. For instance, on local fight nights, wives call up to find out what time the bouts were over and husbands phone for results, if you know what I mean.

Haight

Around Kentucky Derby time or before a big fight or a World Series, we can count on a certain number of inquiries relative to the sports show at hand. But as a rule it is catch-as-catch-can.

We get our share of ribbers, too. Fellows who try to catch us with the wrong answers. Then there's the inevitable drunk who phones because he's lonesome or wants to start or settle an argument. These last-named conversations are always interesting because, sooner or later, he says, "Now wait until I put my griend here on. Tell him the same thing you told me."

OF COURSE WE have friends who call for a quick result on which they are hoping to make a fast buck and sometimes there's the finance company man with his "get it on the line or else."

Yesterday, I was sitting in front of my typewriter trying to figure which of my relatives I would libel in this morning's paper when the phone buzzed.

"Haight," came a rather slow, methodical voice, "If you were going to play a horse in a certain race would you play the one with the highest weight?"

I said to myself, "Here's some guy handing me the rib," so I answered, "I'm pretty heavy fellow so I guess lean toward high weight."

"O. K.," he replied. "Now what horses won the most races last year? Was it Armed or Stymie or—what was the name of that other one?"

"You mean Assault?" I broke in.

"That right, Assault," he continued, "which one do you like best."

WHEN I REPLIED, "Armed," he wanted to know if there were any characteristics of these horses that could be recognized—their color, sex, stable colors, jockeys, etc.

After that, he was off on another tack, asking, "Who won the Derby last year?" I had the answer in Jet Pilot and then he wanted the Preakness, Belmont, Pimlico Special—ever winter except the Charles Town Inaugural Handicap, which I couldn't remember but I'm sure wasn't Royal Business.

Finally, I said, "I know when I'm being ribbed. Now that we are through with the preliminaries, suppose we have the main bout. Tell me who you are and what you want?"

"I'm serious," he said with a pleading voice. "I don't know you, Walter, but I feel as though I do through reading your stuff. When I wanted some help, I phoned you."

"Well, at least let me in on what you're driving at," I replied.

"IT'S THIS WAY," he said. "We are having an alumni meeting and we're going to have movies of big races and we're going to bet on them. I wanted to get some advance information so I phoned. If you were in my place what would you do?"

I came back with, "I'd find the fellow who was going to show the movies, give him a couple of sawbucks and ask him to run them off backwards for me."

"Oh, I couldn't do that," he said. "No one is supposed to know the results beforehand except the fellow with the movie machine."

"What are you doing Saturday night, friend?" I asked.

"Why do you ask?" he countered.

"Well," I said, "I was going to say, you could come out to my house. I've got some phonograph records of my broadcasts from Charles Town and I was thinking you and I could sit around and play the races."

Eastern-Anacostia Clash Features Interhigh Card Today

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks: At Hialeah Winston Churchill summarized his impressions of Hialeah with a single word: "Extraordinary!" He visited the track in the winter of 1946 during the racing season. However, many of the upwards of a million and a half visitors come in the fall, summer and spring when there is no racing and Hialeah becomes a free, public park. Hialeah was opened in 1925 and as completely rebuilt in 1931 after the legalization of mutuel betting in Florida. There is much interest in the flamingos who populate the infield lake. There are about 600 of these beautiful, but weird looking, birds in the present flock, the world's largest in captivity. Hialeah has supplied flamingos to zoos in many cities, including Washington, D. C. They parade on Flamingo Day, February 28 this year, and are herded out of the lake and onto the turf course. More than half of the flock was hatched and raised there, the first instance on record of flamingos propagating in captivity. The mother lays one egg a year. The young birds are fluffy and white, with short legs and straight bills. That's enough about flamingos. What you want is winners.—BILL.

2 Twin Bills Again Set At Armory

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Eastern's Ramblers and Anacostia's Indians, victors in their first interhigh league games last week, clash at 8 o'clock in the feature game of two league double-headers today at the National Guard Armory.

In the second game of tonight's double-header, Western's Red Raiders face Calvin Coolidge's Colts. The Central Vikings-McKinley Tech Trainers' 3:30 game begins the afternoon twin bill, with Roosevelt's Rough Riders playing Wilson's Green Tigers in the second contest.

Fourteen other games are on today's bill, the best of which finds George Washington's Presidents of Alexandria entertaining Washington-Lee5s Little Generals of Arlington at 8 p. m. This game will go far toward deciding the Northern Virginia Class A Conference title, since GW and W-L are the only two teams still unbeaten.

The Eastern-Anacostia game may bring out the largest crowd ever to see an interhigh basketball game in Washington. These two schools are the closest of the public highs to the Armory, and both are first-rate contenders for the championship. Last week, with no important game on the slate, the night interhigh doubleheader attracted 3121 fans, largest crowd ever to see basketball at the Amory.

The game provides big Wally Warner with a chance to further his bid to win the scoring championship. The 6-foot, 3-inch pivot shot star racked up 18 points while Anacostia whipped Tech, 52-39, last week. Other Anacostia starters will be Dave Migdol, Perry Lear, Johnny Schuerger and Lennie Koontz.

Starting for Eastern which bumped Coolidge, 39-22, last week, will be Sal DeGiorgi, Frank Utley, Sonny Wesley, Spike Barouth and Joe Graves.

Today's Schedule

South Carolina, Terps Meet at College Park

Maryland, after a tough 51-47 loss to Navy at Annapolis, swings back into court action tonight at College Park in a Southern Conference test against South Carolina.

The visitors, beaten earlier by George Washington, 60-49, will have a decided height advantage over the Terrapins. Forward Al Adams, leading scorer, is 6-foot-5½ and Freshman Center Jim Slaughter goes 6-foot-9.

Only other local team playing tonight is Galludet which travels to Western Maryland.

Two Southern Conference games are on the local agenda for Saturday night. Maryland will entertain Virginia Military Institute at College Park and will be seeking its second straight over the Keydets. The Terps scored a 53-46 decision over VMI at Lexington but know the freshmen-dominated visitors figure to be improved.

Three first-year men on the starting five are Center Bob Bell, Forward Ed Lutes and Guard Fred Anson.

South Carolina meets George Washington in a return match at the National Guard Armory. The Colonials, off their thrilling 48-47 victory over Duke at Durham, are expected to score their eleventh Conference triumph in 12 starts.

Dog Racing May Be Legalized in Anne Arundel

High Scoring N. C. State Sets Pace in Nation

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Most persons accord Rhode Island State the title of the Nation's highest scoring college basketball team, but the Rams, temporarily at least, have yielded their popular crown to North Carolina State.

A compilation by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau through games of January 10, showed today that North Carolina State has swished 1116 points through the hoop in 15 games for an average of 74.4. Rhode Island State is ranked ninth with 413 in six games for an average of 68.8.

In its last game against Maine, the Rhodies surprised collegiate cage circles by "freezing" the ball for 11 straight minutes before winning, 48-42. They were back in "form" last night with a 104-80 victory over Brooklyn College, but this score is not yet included in the statistics.

Trailing N. C. State is Bowling Green of Ohio with an average of 73.1. Western Kentucky is third with 71.6, Holy Cross, NCAA champion, fourth with 70.2 and famed Kentucky fifth with 70.1.

Defensively, the Oklahoma Aggies, of the Missouri Valley Conference, rank No. 1. The Aggies have yielded an average of only 33.6 per game. Alabama is second with 36.7, North Carolina third with 37.4, Kentucky fourth with 38.6 and Penn State fifth with 39.8.

Denver, of the Mountain States Conference, has committed the most personal fouls with 283 in 12 games for an average of 23.6.

Md. County To Decide Next Week

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Dog racing may be legalized in Anne Arundel County when the board of county commissioners meets next week.

The board met in executive session today to discuss the proposal, Chairman Weems Duvall said, but put off action until the regular meeting Tuesday.

Reports that such a move was under consideration have circulated here for some time, but this was the first indication the commissioners are ready for a decision.

Benjamin Michaelson, attorney to the board, disclosed a resolution embodying detailed regulations for operation of a track with legalized betting has been prepared. It is designed to make a "sound business proposition" of the sport if authorized by the commissioners, he said.

A series of local measures adopted by the Maryland General Assembly in its last four regular sessions provides a legal basis for county approval of dog racing, Michaelson added.

Legislature killed an attempt to legalize the sport with pari-mutuel betting throughout the State in its regular session last year.

Several groups reportedly have approached the commissioners to declare interest in dog racing if it were established in Anne Arundel County. None was identified today.

A three-man commission appointed by the board would supervise the sport, although actual operations and investments would be in the hands of a private individual or organization. A 100-day season in the summer is contemplated, with racing at night. Sundays would be excluded.

Janeiro, Roach Fight Tonight

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Boxing's exhaustive search for new faces brings Lavern Roach, a rugged former Marine from Plainview, Tex., into Madison Square Garden for the first time tomorrow night in a 10-rounder against well-etsablished Tony Janiro, a crowd-pleasing youngster from Youngstown, Ohio.

Janiro, a boyish veteran of 67 fights, is favored, but there is considerable support for the Texan, who was named rookie of the year in 1947 on a series of convincing victories. Janiro, at about 153 pounds, will give away 4 or 5 pounds to Roach.

Lavern has won 22 of 23, losing only to Artie Towne on a decision. Since that defeat he has won 17 straight, 11 of them in 1947, when he knocked out Danny Rosati, Indian Gomez and Sal Riche and decisioned Billy Arnold and Herbie Kronowitz.

Skins Fans Will See 7 League Teams Play

through a quirk in their schedules, have further complicated things.

The football season starts its 12-game per team schedule on September 26, continues on October 3 and ends on December 12. Ten games must be played on the first two dates. Baseball has lengthened its season this year through October 3, with the World Series falling out on October 10.

Through a rule in the constitution, no baseball club contending for the pennant can allow the football clubs to play in their parks. Eight of the 10 football clubs play in baseball parks. Only Los Angeles and Green Bay do not.

All this means that the NFL schedule must be worked out to avoid conflict with any potential contenders in the National and American Leagues.

The plan of the 12-game schedule for each club, introduced last year, calls for home-and-home series within the league's two divisions and four intersectional games—a total of six home dates and six on the road.

Only official results of conferences and meeting of the coaches' rules committee, were.

1. The sale of the Detroit Lions for an undisclosed amount by Fred Mandel, jr., to a group calling itself the Detroit Football Company and headed by D. Lyle Fife.

2. Acceptance of plans for a $150,000 National Football League shrine at Latrobe, Pa., where the game was first played. The owners' vote on the project will be taken later.

3. Failure of the rules committee to send the owners a recommendation for either the elimination of the try for extra point, or the addition of a "sudden death" period to avoid tie games.

FORESEEING a greater demand for bicolor lespedeza plants this year, I. T. Quinn, Executive Director, Virginia's Game and Inland Fisheries, announced that the Commission has ordered a half million plants for Spring delivery.

Lespedeza, planted on the edges of fields provides food for quail, ring-necked pheasants, ruffled grouse and other birds as well as for rabbits and other small animals. It also provides cover for wildlife.

Seed is difficult to obtain, however, Director Quinn said the majority of users prefer the plants. Plants when set out early in the spring, bear a seed crop in the fall, whereas it takes two years to bring a seed crop when planted from seed.

A considerable proportion of the available supply will be used in the new five-year wildlife habitat improvement projects set up in each demonstration area in each county.

Sportsmen's organizations who plan to undertake wildlife habitat improvement projects should apply directly to the Virginia Game Commission.

It is important that applications should be filed early so that this allocation can be made.

Md. Bank Ups Capital, Plans Second Branch

By S. Oliver Goodman

A 66 per cent increase in capital of Citizens Bank of Riverdale, in nearby Prince Georges County, Md., has been approved by stockholders, President Alfred H. Smith reported yesterday.

An additional 10,000 shares of $10-par capital stock will be issued. Stockholders of record December 31, 1947, will receive a stock dividend of 3000 shares on the basis of one new share for each five old shares held. The remaining 7000 shares will be sold at $20 a share.

The new issue will increase the bank's capital to $250,000 from $150,000 and the surplus account to $225,000 from $185,000. Total resources as of last yearend were reported at $5,570,055.

President Smith said that the fast-growing institution, which was established in 1928, will open a second branch office about March 1 at the corner of Queens Chapel rd. and Eastern ave. extended, in the area known as Avondale. Main office is in Riverdale and the first branch is in Bladensburg.

New directors added to the board this week are Harry A. Boswell, jr., Hyattsville real estate man, and Frank M. Ewing, jr., president of Frank M. Ewing Lumber Co., Inc., in Brentwood. All other directors and officers were reelected. John F. Ryon, former note teller, was promoted to assistant cashier.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: H. J. Heinz 2d, president of H. J. Heinz Co. of Pittsburgh, has been elected chairman of the United States Associates of International Chamber of Commerce. Heinz, 39, succeeds Philip D. Reed, chairman of General Electric Co. . . . Peter G. Evans of Washington, member of Excess Profits Tax Council, addressed members of the National Association of Cost Accountants yesterday in Syracuse, N. Y. . . . John C. Connors, Washington district manager, and H. W. Cook and R. K. Norton, assistant managers here, attended a southeastern regional meeting of the Ford Motor Co. this week in Philadelphia . . . James A. Fahey, for 25 years connected with U. S. Steel Corp., was appointed corporation's office manager in Baltimore.

ELECTIONS: Bernard F. Locraft, civil engineer, was elected to the board and Ralph A. Judd was named a vice president of the Enterprise Building Association. George I. Borger was reelected president and all other officers and directors were reelected . . . Samuel M. Thrift was reelected president of the Home Building Association and other officers also were renamed.

WE PAY BETTER: Washingtonians average better than the Fifth Federal Reserve District in payments on department store charge accounts. Such collections averaged 49 per cent here in November on accounts due on November 1, against average collections of 47 per cent in the district. Richmond made the poorest showing in November with only 33 per cent collections. The monthly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond also showed that November store sales here were 2 per cent higher than in 1946 and dollar volume for the first 11 months was also 2 per cent improved.

'FIRE' SURVEY: Lack of skill is responsible in only 1 of 10 cases where workers are fired. "Character traits" account for the nine other sackings, according to a survey by Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. The booklet for Socony workers is entitled "So You Want a Better Job." Leading deficient character traits were listed as carelessness, noncooperation and laziness.

PURELY LOCAL: E. R. Finkenstaedt, associated with the investment firm of Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath, has been elected a director of the Fidelity Storage Co. of Washington . . . George A. Baker was reelected president of the District Building & Loan Association. The latter's assets have passed the five-million mark, shareholders were told . . . Directors of Federal Storage Co., Washington, have declared a dividend of $1 a share, payable January 27 to stock of record January 15. E. K. Morris was reelected president and all other officers and directors were renamed.

QUOTABLE QUOTES: "Admittedly in this period extraordinary profits are possible by taking a gambler's risk. However, the long-range program for business should not have in mind reaching for extraordinary profits, but rather for a sound and fair return upon capital invested. It is, therefore, a first order of safe business to continue to earn the good will of your customers by pricing your merchandise fairly."—Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of National Association of Credit Men.

ODD LOTS: Newly unveiled is a coin machine which puts on a half-hour television program for a half-dollar . . . Ten-gallon hats for street wear are "creeping into the East," Stetson reports . . . Norfolk & Western Railway's net income for 1947 is estimated $5.57 a share, against $3.89 a share in 1946 on the basis of present capitalization . . . Plans for merging all fire insurance companies affiliated with the Home Insurance Co. into a single intergrated enterprise have been approved "in principle" by Home directors . . . Trade in "world" sugar futures resumed yesterday on New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange after a six-year suspension . . . Automotive News estimated this week's production at 30,794 passenger cars and 25,680 trucks against 82,989 cars and 24,990 trucks last week.

Lumber Prices Cut 10% By Minnesota Company

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 15 (AP).—Fred K. Weyerhaeuser, president of the Weyerhaeuser Sales Co., said in a statement that effective today the company was reducing prices on several kinds of lumber used in home building.

Weyerhaeuser said the reductions were made with a view "to do our part in reducing the cost of building and in checking the inflationary trends now threatening our national welfare."

He said the price cuts would average 10 per cent at the mills on coast Douglas fir, Western hemlock and coast red cedar lumber shipped from Weyerhaeuser affiliated mills to the retail lumber trade.

The reductions, he added, will be maintained for the next 60 days "and longer if we believe conditions warrant."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

PARENTAL AFFECTION, adoptive and otherwise, is busting out all over the niteries. Bill Thompson, maestro of the Neptune Room, and his wife celebrated the nineteenth year of their marriage by adopting a 5-day old baby, naming him Bill, jr. A couple of months have rolled by and Pops Bill is now as expert on adjusting three-cornered pants as on extracting harmonies from the electric organ . . . Lois Soare, the attractive publicitress of the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels, didn't send Christmas presents this year because all of her spare cash goes toward the maintenance of a Belgian orphan and two French families . . . Orchestra Leader Morgan Baer, when recently in the Old New Orleans, was very happy over the 4-year-old Belgian refugee boy whom he's adopted and brought to this country. The little feller is living with Morgan's mother in Baltimore, looks forward to his new daddy's weekend visits . . . current big ambition of Stan Jones, the dashing singer - pianist - accordionist-celesteist of Al Shea's Atom Band in the Dubonnet Room, is to become the pater of a little daughter. He has a 50-50 chance to make it, too,—any minute now.

Ciro's, a downtown landmark since 1922, will be moved to a new location, as yet unnamed, within a couple of months. "Mayor" Ciro is planning a big party for his old customers in his new place.

COMING AND GOING. Olivia Davis, owner of Merry-Land, and her husband, Maj. Earl Clarke, will start for Florida on January 18. Daytona Beach, Miami and Havana are included in their holidaying plans . . . Michel, owner of Michel's, is back from Manhattan where he proudly listened to the violin soloing of his son, Stanley Weiner, at a concert by the New York Civic Orchestra.

A SLAVIC VISION is the Balalaika's new "Caravan Revue." There's Yourloff dancing matchlessly to Tschaikowsky music, Dena Larena and her Russ drinking song, Serge Tait's dazzling balalaika solos, "Grunka" who falls in love with a regiment of Cossacks, Michel Michon singing "We Live Only Once," Vera who goes Mongolian with long gold claws on every finger . . . Genial and plump George Osmolski, after an absence of years, has returned to Balalaika as head waiter. His predecessor, George Djugashvili, is vacationing, may open a spot of his own.

VISITING NOTABLES. A dozen-odd friends jumped up to greet Senator George D. Aiken of Vermont when he entered Olmsted's. For a few minutes the restaurant looked like a reception . . . Columnist Ed Sullivan visited the Miami edition of Olmsted's, gave its food a resounding boost in print . . . O. A. De Lima, the colorful owner of the Roger Smith Hotel chain, recently dropped into his own Cafe Caprice to bend an ear to the piano playing of Rodolfo Cornejo.

DAISY FRESH AND GAY is refurbished Mayfair. The new gold ceiling, the waitresses' fancy costumes, Sammy Seymour's sparkly tunes, the refreshed urban murals, the all-electric kitchen—they're all pretty marvelous. But what the customers thought was most marvelous of all were those penny cocktails at the reopening. All the bartenders are still suffering from combat fatigue . . . Patrons should take advantage of Mayfair's invitation to inspect their new kitchen. It's a culinary palace.

There was a storm of applause in the theater at Walter Reed Hospital when Ray Anthony and his band, now at Club Kavakos, played for the vets. The Anthony show was exactly what the doctor ordered, agreed the wounded soldiers.

NEWS FROM TIM. Away back in the pre-Pearl Harbor days, young Tim Pasma was a Post ad man, wrote songs for his own astonishment. Then he went overseas, composed "Soldier, Let Me Read Your Letter" which was recorded by the late Glenn Miller, sold to the tune of a couple of hundred thousand platters . . . Now Tim bobs up again—to recommend Miller's, the Rockville restaurant operated by his pal, Roy Miller. Miller's seems to be a countryside Shangri La—complete with open fireplace, soft chairs, good food and Vic Nini's ingratiating piano tricks.

Ad Removal From Paper Is Protested

Action of the Fairfax County supervisors in removing county advertising from the Providence Journal last summer was protested last night by a county civic group.

The Federation of Fairfax County Citizens Association, meeting in Falls Church High School, unanimously voted to "protest vigorously the action of the board of supervisors and recommend that the motion be rescinded."

The protest was approved by 19 members of the federation representing 11 of the 21 member bodies. A quorum was gained by admitting the Lincolnia School and Civic League to mebership.

The county board voted advertising withheld from the Providence Journal last August because the newspaper had "unfairly criticized" action taken by the board.

Federation members charged last night that the act was an attempt to abridge freedom of the press. They said they were protesting on moral, not on legal grounds. The supervisors pointed out when they took their action that the county had already placed its advertising in the required number of newspapers.

The federation, which meets only four times a year, had considered this matter at its September meeting but reached no decision.

Farley Talk Seen as Rap At Wallace

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—James A. Farley, former National Democratic Party leader and now chairman of the board for Coca-Cola Export Corp., praised the late Virginia Senator Carter Glass and took a pot shot at Henry Wallace tonight, speaking at the annual meeting of the Lynchburg Chamber of Commerce.

In Senator Glass' home town, Farley recalled him as a man who "blazed with independence," but who believed in party government. An advocate of sound finance and economical government, Glass had qualities which are urgently needed today, he continued.

Former Vice President Wallace came in the picture with Farley's declaration that everyone should belong to a political party—some party. "When our party is wrong we should say so and we should try to make it right," Farley said.

"Sometime that way is hard . . . but in the long run, a party is controlled by the best blood within it. In the long run, it finds its way."

Obviously referring to Wallace, who has declared his intention to run for President outside the Democratic Party fold, Farley said:

"We have already heard of the rise of a new party. So far, it seems to be a one-man party. It is significant that the founder of this new party has in one lifetime already been for a few years in each of the old parties. In neither party has he found hapiness. We may only hope that now he has a party of his own, he can be happy in it and loyal to it."

Farley also indorsed the Marshall Plan but warned: "We should draw into its management some of the best strains that America's free enterprise system has created. We must look for management and direction to those who have successfully managed and directed great productive enterprises in the United States."

Coop Is Ordered To Answer Lewis On Reinstatement

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—Southern State Cooperatives, Inc., was ordered today to file an answer in Richmond Chancery Court, before February 16, to a petition brought by Fulton Lewis, jr., radio commentator, in which the court is asked to compel the cooperative to reinstate him as a member.

A petition for a writ of mandamus also was ordered filed today by Judge Brockenbrough Lamb.

Lewis is asking the court to order the coop to recognize him as a member "with the rights and privileges of a member and stockholder." The commentator, who runs a farm in Maryland, was expelled at the annual stockholders' meeting in Richmond recently for conduct allegedly detrimental to the group's best interests.

Garden Pilgrimage Will Begin April 24

Baltimore, Jan 15 (AP).—The eleventh annual Maryland house and garden pilgrimage, sponsored by the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland, will be run April 24 through May 3, tour headquarters announced here today.

Colonial homes and gardens will be open in the following counties during the tour: St. Marys, Charles, Montgomery, Howard, Anne Arundel, Harford, Baltimore, Talbot, Kent, Prince Georges, Queen Annes, Frederick and Cecil.

Virginia House Gets Waynesboro City Bill

Richmond, Jan. 15 (AP).—A bill to make Waynesboro a first-class city and set up a corporation court there was introduced today in the House of Delegates.

Patrons were Delegates Felix E. Edmond of Waynesboro and George M. Cochran of Staunton. Edmond said a census already had established the population of Waynesboro as slightly less than 12,000.

Cavalry Cut Stirs Memories of Old Timers

Fort Meade, Md., Jan. 15 (AP). Memories of Army old-timers were stirred when the famous 43d Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron (mechanized) was cut down to zero strength today through transfer of its personnel to other units.

Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright commanded the squadron from 1936 to 1938 and was succeeded by Gen. George S. Patton, jr.

Md. Pastor Sues Wife For Divorce

The Rev. Claude A. Brubaker, pastor of Mount Zion Baptist Church, Bethesda, Md., yesterday sued his wife for divorce.

The suit was filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court by the clergyman who is widely-known for his radio sermons from "The Little Church in the Wildwood."

Mr. Brubaker, former moderator of the Upper Seneca Association, which comprised 11 churches in Montgomery and Frederick counties, said in the suit he had been "an affectionate and faithful husband" since their marriage in Norfolk in 1923.

He said he and his wife have separated, she living at 3908 W st. nw., and he at 2350 Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda.

The couple have one child, Lewis E. Brubaker, 21 years old.

The minister has been at Mount Zion Baptist Church, 2350 Old Georgetown rd., for 14 years. Known at one time as "the traveling parson" he has preached at four churches in widely separated points, Travilah and Germantown in Montgomery County and Berwyn and University Park in Prince Georges County.

Winchester Plans Early Discussion Of Sewerage Law

Winchester, Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.). A sewerage ordinance covering all dwellings within 2 miles of the corporate limits here will be discussed soon by a committee from the county board of supervisors and the city council.

The proposed sanitation ordinance was read before council for the first time this week and members requested additional information and a public hearing on the bill. The ordinance calls for installation of septic tanks approved by the city in all new houses. Existing dwellings without approved sanitation would be given 90 days to comply.

The city sanitary committee contends that many houses within the 2-mile area are without proper sanitation and as a result the city's water supply is in "serious danger of contamination."

Upperville Horseman Named Bank Official

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.)—W. G. Fletcher, Upperville horseman, today was elected vice president of the Peoples National Bank here. He is a former president of the Upperville Colt and Horse Show Association and of the Piedmont Hunt.

Officers reelected at the annual meeting were Bruce McIntosh, president; O. I. Thomas and T. Frank Osburn, vice presidents; Arthur S. Jenkins, cashier; J. L. McIntosh and William F. Peach, assistant cashiers, and E. N. Bradfield, trust officer.

Young Md. Farmers To Draw for Cattle

Young Maryland farmers will have a "selection day" at the University of Maryland, College Park, tomorrow. The Future Farmers of America and 4-H Clubbers will meet to draw lots for first choice of 11 pedigreed calves being sold them by the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club. A similar jamboree will be sponsored by the Maryland Association at Timonium on January 24.

V. M. I. Foundation Gets $2000 in Gifts

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 15.—Gifts totalling $2000 for the V. M. I. Foundation have been donated by the Woodbridge Clay Products Co. through its chairman, S. M. Rust of Leesburg. B. Powell Harrison, jr., Loudoun County chairman for the drive, said the gifts were presented in memory of Rust's brother, E. Marshall Rust, class of 1902, and Walter S. Smith, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith of Pittsburgh, class of 1946.

McGARR VILLAGE—First Sergt. Howard S. McGarr at the controls

Fort Myer Sergeant Solves House Problem in Miniature

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

Fort Myer First Sergeant Howard S. McGarr has a pint-sized solution to the housing problem.

Not content with his own post quarters at 78-A Sheridan ave., the 42-year-old sergeant built an entire miniature village on his sun porch.

It's all there, filling a space roughly 10 by 18 feet—factories, homes, postoffice and a tiny church.

McGarr, looking like a 1947 Gulliver, kneeled yesterday in the middle of his handiwork, smoothing a papier-mache mountain back in place. "Began it in 1938 in Rochester, Pa.," he said. "I've been adding to it from time to time."

A 14-year Army man, McGarr's display this year has more than just a village. Two passenger and three freight trains crawl through a mountain tunnel, wait at sidings.

For a seasonal touch, the sergeant uses cotton to simulate snow. Gravel acts as track ballast, and the tips of spruce branches serve as trees.

All of the villages 21 buildings McGarr built himself, using cheese boxes for most of them. Buildings are individually lit, and tiny figures circulate in the snow about them.

To add to the realism of his Lilliputia, the sergeant covered the walls and windows of his sun-porch with blue paper and pasted silver stars over it.

But the village will be dismantled in a month. Says the normally-intrepid builder: "My wife is raising Cain about it. She wants the porch for furniture."

Bank Head Declares Rakes Couldn't Have Kited Checks

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—Clarence L. Robey, president of the Purcellville Bank, testified in Federal District Court here today that the type of account kept by Hugh N. Rakes in the Purcellville National Bank, "Precluded any suggestion of check-kiting."

Robey based his statement on figures purporting to show that Rakes, on trial for misappropriation of funds from a Fredericksburg bank, dealt too much in cash to have been simultaneously keeping worthless checks in progress from one bank to another. The banker said Rakes deposited $1,055,000 in his bank between March, 1942, and April, 1944, and that more than 70 per cent of those deposits were made in cash.

He said that only slightly more than 2 per cent of the deposits were composed of checks given on the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg which subsequently collapsed while holding approximately $750,000 worth of obligations guaranteed by Rakes.

"The kind of deposits made in our bank precludes any suggestion of check-kiting. There can be no suggestion of that," Robey said.

A previous witness, John F. Gouldman, jr., president of the Fredericksburg bank, dealt at length on the matter of the "obligations" held on Rakes.

District Attorney George R. Humrickhouse brought out that Gouldman considered the Federal Deposit Insurance Co., which took over liquidation of the bank, had negotiated a favorable deal when it sold the Rakes-guaranteed obligations to the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. for a net gain of $225,000.

Under questioning by Defense Attorey R. H. McNeill, Gouldman indicated he believed William Reeves Gardner, then vice president of the Fredericksburg bank, forged Rakes' name as wel las his (Gouldman's) initials on notes he later discovered were highly irregular.

"I want to say," Gouldman testified, "that I'm not qualified to speak as a handwriting expert, but in my opinion Gardner signed all of them."

Va. College Girls Trust Their Charm Attracts Male Sex

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 15.—"Personal charm" is the indefinable something which makes the feminine sex "lovable" according to students at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia here.

A poll in the school paper also discovered that 68 per cent of the girls in the college look for personality first in men. Looks, bankroll and intellect, in that order, were the other things which make men appealing, the poll revealed.

Sleeping tops the list of favorite activities at the college, with bull sessions and bridge as second and third choices. About 64 per cent of the students said they prefer marriage to a career, and 74 per cent approve marriage while still in college.

A rousing 100 per cent voted in favor of "associations with the opposite sex," but only 75 per cent seemed to think love is here to stay. Of the remaining quarter, 10 per cent aren't sure, and 15 per cent claim that love is just a passing fancy.

Rent Boost In Frederick Is Denied

Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods yesterday turned down a request by the Frederick County, Md., Rent Advisory Board for a 15 per cent rent hike in the area.

The Frederick board based its request for the boost on contentions that the rent level was "abnormally low" at the time ceilings were set.

Increased operating costs, including wage rates and service labor, were also cited by the board in its request. Information regarding these increases was submitted to Woods.

In handing out his decision Woods said that the allegation of low ceilings lacked substantiating evidence, and added that the second contention was not accompanied by material to compare current operating costs with those on the maximum rent date.

The expediter told the Frederick board that his denial of their petition did not prevent the board from submitting new recommendations "which are appropriately sustained."

Lane to Seek U. S. Authority On Bay Bridge

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Governor Lane disclosed today he hoped to have a bill introduced in Congress within 10 days to clear the legal path for the Chesapeake Bay crossing.

The Governor said he had submitted several suggestions to Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, to refine a proposed bill the general had sent him.

General Fleming's bill, Lane said, was a revision of the act of 1938 under which the State built the Havre de Grace and Morgan-town Bridges. The same act authorized construction of a bay bridge and a tunnel under the Patapsco River.

The new bill would also permit the State to pool revenues from the bridges already built as well as that from the other two proposed projects until the cost of all structures had been paid.

The revision makes possible the construction of a cross-bay tunnel or bridge, or partial bridge and tunnel.

Lane said among his suggestions was one to set forth plainly in the bill that the authority to pool the revenues would not end until all structures have been paid off.

He suggested that the authority to collect tolls until the structures are paid for also be made plain and that bonds could be refunded if the State found it desirable.

"These revisions will put the State in a better position to float the bonds when we are ready to go ahead," he said.

The Governor said that while the Patapsco tunnel was desirable, "we have not yet decided to build that."

He is asking Senator Tydings (D., Md.) to determine how the original measure was introduced and said they would decide whether it was to be brought to both houses at the same time or in a single house.

Of the bridge-tunnel question on the Chesapeake, the Governor said he expected to have a report on it soon. Studies of probable costs are going forward at present.

N. Y. Authority On Juveniles Gets Md. Post

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—Dr. Herbert D. Williams, superintendent of the New York Training School for Boys at Warwick and nationally-known authority on juveniles, today was appointed chief of the new Maryland division of training schools.

Dr. Williams will be in charge of coordinating a program for the four State training schools and three private schools for delinquent children, said J. Milton Patterson, director of the State Department of Public Welfare.

Dr. Williams helped compile the Hebron report on juvenile delinquency in 1943. He has been superintendent at Warwick since 1935.

In 1940, he was loaned for three months to the United States Committee for the Care of Refugee Children, organizing reception centers for 2000 children from England.

Blood Bank Guard Against Dangerous Transfusion Urged

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—Drs. L. M. Hellman and G. R. Vosburgh of Johns Hopkins Hospital have an article in the current American Medical Association Journal urging that blood banks be universally typed so women will be protected from dangerous transfusions.

A woman with Rh negative blood has an 85 per cent chance of accidentally getting an Rh positive transfusion, creating antibodies in her blood stream, said Dr. Vosburgh.

"The next time she has a transfusion, even if it's years later, she will have a quite severe (and sometimes fatal) reaction.

"It is the same with childbirth. A woman with Rh negative blood, getting such a transfusion of Rh positive blood, stands a little better than 50 per cent chance of seeing her baby survive."

Officers Hear Groves

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Leslie Groves, atomic energy expert, visited the Naval Academy post graduate school today and urged full knowledge as well as a basic foundation in science for army and navy officers.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

It's Leap Year, Too

Catching a Beau's in the Bag (or Box) In One of Spring's New Gray Bonnets

By Peggy Preston
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 15.—You girls have only yourselves to blame if you don't catch a beau this season. What with Leap year and the new hats, wedding bells ought to be a cinch.

MISS PRESTON

It's in the bag—or hat box. When he takes you out on Easter Sunday you'll remind him of his mother in a new "gray bonnet with the blue ribbons on it." Or maybe you'll wear a prim, chaste sailor, perched right on your brow with yards of veiling tied under your chin . . . just the right frame for fluttering eyelashes and sidelong glances.

Of course the boys will probably say they've been "framed." But you can blame it on the designers who have created the first truly pretty collection of hats that we've seen in many a year. By and large they've stopped trying to be exotic and bizarre, as they did during the war; dropped the ugly, heavy crowns of last winter which harked back to the First World War period. Instead they have looked to grandma's day and beyond for inspiration, and with just the right modern slant are offering hats that are light, airy and, most important, becoming.

Hats follow few rules, a real concession to smart American women who want to wear all styles and types, rather than follow a set pattern. They are both large and small, off the face and on the brow. Some dip strongly to one side of the head, but the trend appears to be away from this particular mode.

However, practically all of them sit well down on the head and a short hairstyle is essential if you want to look well in them.

Bonnets Lead the Parade

BONNETS are the leading favorites. Next come sailors, worn on the hairline, not back on the head. Nearly all have a forward slant, a trick achieved either by a jutting brim or trimmings.

But again, there is every type of hat to choose from, so you'll be able to find the one for you, whether it be a turban, small skull cap or cartwheel straw.

Lily Dache's collection is the most new and interesting. Her hats are restrained, quiet, ladylike and made of exquisite pastel flowers, straw and veiling. She is one of the few designers who still likes to perch a cluster of flowers over one ear, but she softens the effect by wrapping the head in yards of tulle, sometimes flower sprinkled.

Her "butterfly silhouette" will be selected by many women. It is a wide, flaring upbrimmed hat that sits on the brow and wings out at either side.

As a fetching accessory with her hats, Dache recommends a band of velvet ribbon around the throat with a tiny corsage pinned at one side.

Poke Bonnets and Petticoats

HIGHLIGHTS from the hat collections: Sally Victor has a darling little poke bonnet of blue linen, lined with a white eyelet ruffle that peeks out from under the brim—a real petticoat hat. She has a "carriage" hat also, a big cartwheel, landen with flowers, a reminder of the Gay '90's.

Walter Florell likes hats with medium sized brims, swathed with veiling—the kind the girls wore with their dusters when they took their first automobile ride.

Peg Fischer does some pretty hats that sit back on the head, but have forward jutting brims. Florence Reichman has a "Rocking Chair Bonnet" that is lined with flowers and ties under the chin. It'll do wonders for that double chin.

Straw sailors are outstanding in the Laddie Northridge group. He introduces a novel note by placing gold hands on his hats as ornaments. These hands, Northridge points out proudly, "are artificially sculptured in light-weight plastic and dipped in 24 karat gold."

Braagaard has some wonderful turbans, draped in chiffon and Anita Andra, Mago Hayes and Mme. Pauline all do interesting things with the new wheat colored straws, often creating lacy effects.

THIS year's Easter Parade will be crowded with sailors. The natural straw number pictured here is a Laddie Northridge creation. It's faced with black velvet and decked with bold black and white ribbon and dusty pink roses. Northridge hats are available in Washington at Julius Garfinckel & Co.

COMES Spring, and the beret, a standby in any season, will be laden with jewels, beads, veiling and tassels. This Braagaard original is draped with green imported French net covered with tiny white beads. A cluster of larger beads holds net tassels

WITH the old-fashioned poke bonnets back in fashion this Spring, best bet to keep your beau is to remind him of his mother. A Laddie Northridge creation, this black straw head-hugger is topped with pink roses and porcelain blue moire ribbon.

Congress' Distaff Talents

Mrs. Flanders to Speak On Her Hobby, Old Songs

By Marie McNair

THERE'S talent vast and varied among the wives of the 80th Congress. Some made names for themselves before they came to Washington as writers, actresses, singers and dancers, but have since given it all up with the pressure of official duties.

Mrs. Ralph E. Flanders, wife of the Senator from Vermont, works at an avocation that is different.

For a number of years her interests have centered on American folk songs and ballads, particularly those that come from the New England hills. Author, lecturer and collector of ballads, Mrs. Flanders took up her unusual study more than 20 years ago. In 1930 she was appointed head of the folk ballad section of the Committee on Vermont Tradition and Ideals. Later she became archivist of the Vermont Traditional Music and served as representative of her State to the International Commission on Folk Arts.

"Looking Out of Jimmy" is the quaint title of a book of verse which Mrs. Flanders wrote for children and later a companion book, "Fifteen Songs From Looking Out of Jimmy," with music by Heinrich Gebhard for both.

In addition Helen Hartness Flanders authored "A Garland of Green Mountain Songs" with piano settings by Helen Norfleet; "Country Songs From Vermont," and she had a hand in arranging the 4000 ballads collected throughout the New England States, now a valued possession of Middlebury College.

The homely tunes and words which spring from the hearts of simple New England folk cannot rightly be called ballads, Mrs. Flanders believes. To illustrate the meaning of real "folk," she will lecture at the Library of Congress on Tuesday evening, January 27, and she will have a trio of New Englanders there to sing the old songs which have come down to them since the first settlers landed on that stern and rock-bound coast.

TOWN TOPICS:

The Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor was pinned on the tunic of Gen. Omar Bradley, successor to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower as Army Chief of Staff, at a ceremony yesterday afternoon at the French Embassy. The Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, made the presentation in the presence of Mrs. Bradley and a small group of friends.

DATE-BOOK DATA:

The Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais have issued invitations for a reception Friday, January 23, from 5:30 to 7:30 in celebration of the birthday of Her Royal Highness, the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg.

Mrs. David Kincheloe has invitations out for a luncheon on January 21 in honor of Mrs. Oscar Bland.

Senora de Thomen, wife of the Dominican Ambassador, will be hostess at luncheon Wednesday, January 21, at the embassy, when she will have a special program in addition to a menu typical of her native land.

Cost of Entertaining Notes—

Top Billing on Guest List Goes to U. N. Delegates; The Reasons Are 'Spirited'

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SENATORS, high military brass and such official swells no longer rate top billing with many of the Capital's more knowing hostesses. The list they're clasping in their little hot hands is made up of United Nations delegates, the lads who moil in Flushing Meadows and, as small solace, have been accorded diplomatic privileges. The list starts off, of course, with Ambassador Warren Austin, works down through Byron Price, to ever so much lesser Government minions.

All are nice, but their sudden popularity isn't because of their beaux yeux, but rather because they can buy Scotch at $1.50 a bottle, and what woman, struggling to meet grocer and liquor bills, wouldn't prefer a bottle of Scotch to a dozen roses?

Children to Rescue

LAST WEEK both General Eisenhower and Bing Crosby took time out to write letters to the second and third grade classes in Mount Rainier's Elementary School. The young pupils were so signally honored because completely on their own they have adopted a French village. It is a tiny spot called Bohars, 5 miles from the port of Brest.

BING CROSBY

To rout occupying Germans it was practically wiped out by United States bombs. The kids, learning returning villagers were literally starving, decided to do something about it.

Anxious for first-hand information, they wrote over a hundred letters to United States, Alaska and Hawaiian newspapers in an effort to contact soldiers who'd been there. They found four who supplied detailed information. The State Department took a hand in the proceedings, broadcasting two programs overseas and now parents are pitching in to help the kids who have raised $169.15. The last week in January has been set aside by the Mount Rainier community as "Bohars" week and on the 31st, at 2 p. m., a parade is being planned which will march through the streets picking up contributions for their "charge." Locally the kids' project is called the "Little Marshall Plan," and the "Caboose" of the Friendship Train.

Note to Homeless

A NUMBER of Washington's well-to-do "homeless" are very much on the alert since California's Senator Downey lashed out against Reclamation Commissioner Michael Straus. Mr. Straus is the lucky guy who occupies Government - owned Linnean House, the only private residence in Rock Creek Park. And, should Mr. Straus leave his Department of the Interior job, this real estate plum might be available. It is described as a 10-room-plus house and some months ago, when the Park Service advertised it for rent, Mr. Straus nabbed the prize by paying $2200 a year—so house hunters keep your eyes open!

STRAUS

RED TICKET. It is now high fashion, politically and socially, to be a reactionary. The latest and, we think, practical, philanthropy supporting a few of the constantly increasing refugees from the tumbril, is an association which will purchase a one-way ticket to Moscow for any accredited American Red! If a visa is obtained, there is probably no returning. And it is hoped the recipient will give up his or her American citizenship. However, the wife of a leading American diplomat who spent several years in Moscow is plugging for round-trip tickets. One year among the Red-Fascists, she believes, and even the most scarlet Red will be in a dither to return—and become a potent propagandist for the American way.

Mrs. Truman Entertains at Luncheon

Mrs. Harry Truman entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the White House for 43 ladies. The long table in the State dining room was centered with a mixed bouquet of spring flowers—jonquils, iris, acacia, stevia, white pompons, pink carnations and Baker fern.

Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, sat on Mrs. Truman's right, and Mrs. Robert A. Lovett, wife of the Undersecretary of State, on her left. Other guests were Mrs. Arthur S. Barrows, Mrs. Willard L. Thorp, Mrs. John E. Peurifoy, Mrs. Peyton Ford, Mrs. William E. Warne, Mrs. Gordon Gray, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, Mrs. Louis E. Denfeld, Mrs. Omar N. Bradley, Mrs. William W. Smith, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Angus Dun, Mrs. John R. Steelman and Mrs. Matthew J. Connelly.

Also, Mrs. Charles G. Ross, Mrs. Clark M. Clifford, Mrs. Robert McG. Scotten, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Leland Harrison, Mrs. James H. Foskett, Mrs. Raymond M. Foley, Mrs. Cyrus S. Mrs. Calkins Speaks of Far East In Postwar Problems of Day

The work of the Young Women's Christian Association in the Far East and the new postwar problems and responsibilities facing the organization were described yesterday by Mrs. J. Birdsall Calkins of Arlington, president of the YWCAs of the United States and vice president of the World YWCA.

Just returned from a visit to Hawaii, the Philippines and China, where she attended the meeting last October of the World's YWCA Council in Hangchow, Mrs. Calkins was guest of honor and speaker at a luncheon given in Barker Hall by the World Fellowship Committee of the YWCA.

Pointing out that this was the first meeting of the council since 1938, Mrs. Calkins declared:

"It is very significant that we met in the Orient. Heretofore, the main influences in the YWCA have been European and American, but this means there's a new third dimension — the voice of the Orient. This is very significant for us as a world organization."

Meet in China

Mrs. Calkins explained that China had been asking for a long time to have the meeting held there, but not until last year was such a plan feasible. More than a hundred delegates attended the conference.

In China, Mrs. Calkins revealed, the "Y" is helping out with the illiteracy problem. The Shanghai association, for instance, maintains six night schools for industrial girls and has developed its own textbooks, Mrs. Calkins declared. About 2000 factory girls are learning to read and write in these schools.

Special Guests Attend

An international atmosphere pervaded the luncheon hall yesterday with emphasis on the Far East. Flags of the United Nations were massed at one end of the large room and special guests included Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; Mrs. Narciso Ramos, wife of the Philippine Minister; Mrs. James H. Kelley, wife of the Minister-delegate to Syria; Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, wife of a former High Commissioner to the Philippines; Mrs. Nelson Johnson, wife of the former United States Ambassador to China, and Mrs. Howard Nichols, president of the Washington YWCA. Mrs. Ralph B. Kennard, chairman of the World Fellowship Committee, presided, and Mme. Tan, wife of the Chinese Minister, introduced the speaker.

Chas. Dewey, Jrs. Will Visit Here

Former Representative and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey will have with them for a visit their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, jr., who will arrive today from their home in Far Hills, N. J.

The senior Mr. and Mrs. Dewey will entertain at dinner this evening for the visitors and will give a luncheon for them tomorrow.

Mrs. Peter Dewey will be hostess at dinner tomorrow night for her brother-in-law and sister taking them later to The Dancing Class.

Mrs. Whelchel Ends Visit Here

Mrs. B. Frank Whelchel of Gainesville, Ga., has returned to her home after several days visit in Washington, when she stopped at the Mayflower. Mrs. Whelchel who, with her husband, the former Congressman from Georgia, lived here for 10 years, has many friends in town who have been giving her a whirl of entertainment during her stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Whelchel will sail for Europe on May 14 on the Queen Elizabeth, and after two months in England and France will return on the Mauretania.

Miss Cecelia Bell Given Bridal Parties

MRS. CECILIA BELL, bride-elect of Lawrence E. Williams, jr., is being showered with gifts these days. Yesterday Mrs. Charles Wesley Schott and Mrs. Lawrence B. O'Camb entertained at a shower in her honor at Mrs. Schott's home on Woodley place.

Today Mrs. Ralph Stearley will be hostess at a shower.

Diplomats Entertain at Receptions, Luncheon

ON the occasion of the official inauguration of the United States-Argentine Cultural Institute, the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Ivanissevich entertained over 100 guests yesterday afternoon. Members of diplomatic society were well represented in the gathering.

A short lecture was given by Father Ryan in the ballroom, on Argentine history, and a cocktail party followed

THE military were feted at an embassy reception yesterday afternoon by the Czechoslovak Military and Air Attache and Mme. Josef Schejbal. Guests numbering 280, included officers from the Army, Navy and Air Force, as well as various military and naval attaches in Washington.

SENORA DE VALLARINO, wife of the former Panama Ambassador, was the guest in whose honor Senora De Boyd, wife of the First Secretary of the Panama Embassy, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham.

Others in the group included Mrs. Peter Ansberry, Mrs. Edward S. Conger, Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, Mrs. James O'Donnell Moran, Senora De Rivero, wife of the Second Secretary of the Cuban Embassy.

Cousins Notify Woman They're Planning Visit Just When Three Weekend Guests Are Booked; When She Asks Shift in Plans, Kin Get Miffed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In a letter posted last August 1, my cousin wrote me that she and her husband would visit us some time between August 3 and August 23, the period of his vacation. She said she would let me know the exact date later.

As it happens, I was expecting three friends from a distance to arrive the day following her first letter. By prearrangement they were coming to stay a few days.

In the next mail I had a second letter from my cousin, saying she and her husband would be here two days hence; that is, the day following the arrival of my friends.

As I hadn't the space or sleeping accommodations for five persons in addition to our family, and as my friends' visit had been scheduled for some time—and I wanted them to enjoy it—I sent my cousin a telegram saying "Don't come this weekend; a letter will follow."

Frigidly Ignore
Her Warm Letter

THEN I dashed off a letter by registered mail, explaining the circumstances in full, but emphasizing that I wanted them to be sure and come the following weekend. I assured them that I had long looked forward to their coming and counted on it, and was sorry things had turned out this way at this time.

Now I know my cousins are sore about the whole thing, because we've never heard one word from them since. We were always good friends before this happened; and I wish you would tell me whether or not I should write them again. Am I in the wrong?

My husband says not to write them again unless and until we hear from them. He says if they choose to get sore about the mix-up last August, then their friendship was a worthless thing. What do you think? Please advise me what to do. E. K.

Woman Justified,
But Undiplomatic

DEAR E. K.: Since adequate accommodations and foresighted concern to make guests comfortable are the basic ingredients of memorable hospitality, and since on August 3 you had three guests en route and no room for more, your hasty decision to beg delay of the cousins was fully justified by considerations of courtesy and common sense.

Thus it might seem that if your cousins got sore as boils in consequence, they were merely damning themselves as insensitive boors. However, in fairness to them, one must say that you did fail in diplomacy towards them at the moment it mattered most—did clumsily cut to the quick: unintentionally, of course—by your tactlessly worded wire.

Those blunt, enigmatic opening words "Don't come now" (in effect) would be felt as a stinging slap in the face by almost any recipient in similar circumstances, who didn't yet know the whole story, was for the most part out of touch with the sender and had just proposed himself for a presumably welcome visit.

Pouting Explained,
But Not Condoned

THUS with your cousins. And by the time your fully explanatory, almost guilt-toned letter of apology and "do come" entreaty arrived, they were too sunk in moody, mystified dudgeon to snap out of it and recoup the glad spirit in which they had planned the sojourn. So they scrapped the idea and lapsed into rude, stony silence, ventilating their mortification in terms of indignation — as many people do after leading with their chin into hurt feelings.

This is not to justify their pouting, but rather to give insight into how they reacted and why. However, "To understand all is to forgive all," with reasonable minds; so perhaps this interpretation of their injured attitude may at least restore good feeling on your part towards them even if reciprocal friendship is never resumed.

Now back to the telegram: It should have combined cordiality with terse explanation for asking delay if you sincerely wanted them. As for instance: "Hold everything. House full of Albany guests this weekend. Come next Friday for long visit. Dying to see you. Please wire acceptance to end our suspense. Love," etc. In conclusion, I agree with your husband that the next move in correspondence, if any, is up to them. M. H.

Give Baby His Freedom In Creeping

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

If the baby's body is to grow healthy and strong it should have opportunities to exercise its natural abilities. Most mothers subscribe to that without putting it into those words. They know that when the baby is able to sit up, they are eager to give him that privilege. When the child can creep he wants to practice his skill on the floor where he has scope to stretch himself. When a child is able to walk, he cannot be satisfied walking on a soft mattress, or even on the circumscribed square of his playpen, good as that is. He wants down on the floor so he can walk from room to room as he sees the grownups about him walk.

Some of this seems so elementary and obvious that it is hardly worth talking about. But a parent gets into patterns of behavior which she finds hard to shake. She is busy and it is easier to keep the child penned up all the time, than to give him periods of freedom to creep and walk. It is less annoying to keep a child in his high chair in the kitchen than allow him to sit in front of a cupboard or a drawer and mess in the articles he finds there.

Yet freedom to move about, to handle, to run, to creep are essential to the child's whole development. One authority, Smiley Blanton, has stated that lack of the opportunity to creep is responsible for speech difficulties. We know that children who want to creep and are not allowed on the floor to do so may practice bed-shaking as a sort of confined, compromise activity.

In Bridal Procession

Friedman-Block

Miss Florence Carolyn Block, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Block, sr., of Washington, formerly of Newark, N. J., became the bride of Morris David Friedman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Friedman of Newark, January 4. Rabbi Edward Klein of New York City officiated at the ceremony at Irvington, N. J.

The bride wore white faille with a sweetheart neckline. Her veil of illusion was caught to a tiara of net and ostrich plumes. She carried a white Bible with a marker of orchids.

Miss June O. Sonnabend of Newark served as maid of honor for her cousin. She wore an aqua gown and carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Irving Friedman served his brother as best man.

After a motor trip to California and Mexico the couple will reside in Newark, N. J.

Voogd-Hellweg

Miss Gertrude Hellweg and Jack Voogd, USN, of Seattle, Wash., were married in a double-ring ceremony preceded by a nuptial mass December 6 at Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Bernard Tomadry, wore white brocade with a scalloped neckline, fitted bodice, full skirt and train and a veil of illusion held in place by a Dutch cap of lace to which sprays of orange blossoms were fastened. She carried white rose buds.

Miss Betty Wellman, wearing yellow marquisette with a coronet of yellow rose buds matching her bouquet, was maid of honor. Miss Cecelia Miller and Mrs. Bernard Tomardy, wearing ice blue satin with pink rose buds, were bridesmaids.

W. E. Murphy was best man and W. C. Richmond and H. T. Melnyck were ushers.

Mr. Voogd has been assigned to the Naval Medical Research Institute, Bethesda, Md. Mrs. Voogd is a secretary to Representative Frank L. Sunstrom of New Jersey.

Parisean-Minehart

Miss Merna M. Minehart and Rene D. Parisean were married January 1 at Congress Heights Methodist Church. The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Ray H. LeClere of Central City, Iowa, was given in marriage by her mother and was attended by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Russell.

The bridegroom spent three years in the Army, and was overseas for one year. The bride has been employed by the Civil Service Commission for five years.

The couple will reside in Washington.

Has Anyone Told You . . .

It's easy to cover a cake with luscious, creamy frosting in double quick time, without fear of failure, with a new product now available in many local stores. You just add 2 tablespoons of hot tap water to the contents of one package of this instant frosting and spread it on. It comes in vanilla, chocolate and strawberry flavors, all of which offer opportunities for dozens of toothsome variations by adding preserves, jam, fruit flavors, or coffee.

To keep walls clean above the kitchen sink or bathroom bowl or where the towels hang, use one of the clear plastic wall guards. These can be fastened on with thumb tacks and make an unobtrusive, easy-to-care-for protector for fresh wallpaper.

A good way to rid your house of unpleasant odors is with a liquid that can be sprayed into the air or wiped on surfaces with a cloth. It abolishes kitchen odors, freshens up the garbage can, deodorizes pets, takes the musty odors out of closets and basements. It can even be sprayed on upholstery and used on overcoats to neutralize underarm perspiration odors.

Your Questions on Homemaking

How can I remove dried laundry starch from black imitation suede shoes? T. J. W.

If, as seems indicated, these shoes are made of a suede fabric, proceed as follows: First brush away as much of the starch as possible with a stiff, dry brush. Next, wet the spots thoroughly and let remain for a few minutes to soften the starch. Then scrub with a brush and clear water. Stuff inside of shoes with tissue paper and allow them to dry, brushing occasionally as they do so to keep the nap upstanding. If the spots still look lighter than the surrounding area, an application of black suede dressing will help restore the color.

Having a handy wire rack among your kitchen equipment means a lot when you indulge in a "baking spree." Cakes, pies, and breads cool without getting soggy on the bottom when they're placed on a rack like this as soon as they come from the oven

Will you tell me how to remove yellow stains from the bath tub? I.

Stains from the bath tub can be removed by rubbing with household cleansing powder or cleansing powder moistened with kerosene or carbon tetrachloride. For stubborn stains, make a poultice of cleansing powder and kerosene and allow to remain on the stain over night. Also, stains can be taken out by soaking with weak laundry bleach. Moisten a cloth with the weak bleach solution and place over the spot, allowing to stand until cloth is dry. If stain is not all removed, repeat. Or, fill the tub with water, add several cups of household bleach and allow to remain over night.

I have a beautiful little piece of pottery that is made of composition and is not moisture proof. What treatment would you advise? I want to use it for ivy. B. A.

Since you plan to use only cold water in the vase perhaps pouring melted paraffin into it and allowing it to harden will be enough to waterproof it. While the paraffin is still hot and liquid, tip and turn the vase to coat all of the interior surfaces. Pour out excess paraffin. Be sure the vase is dry before putting the paraffin into it. This coat may need to be renewed from time to time. If you wish a more permanent finish apply spar varnish to the dry inside of the vase.

What is the best way to clean my son's cowboy suit made of imitation leather. (The reverse side is cotton flannel; the outside a leather-like material). J. C. M.

Cleaning cowboy suits by home methods is sometimes very difficult because there are usually several kinds of material in them and the dyes are not always fast. However, if your son's suit is not too complicated by fringes, appliqued felt pieces or metal decorations, you might clean it at home by washing with a soap jelly in the form of a stiff lather. Make the jelly by dissolving a cup of mild soap flakes in two cups of boiling water. Allow to cool and whip with an egg beater until you have a stiff lather. Now, stretch the cowboy suit onto a flat table. It would be wise to put a heavy pad directly under the leather so that the soil doesn't soak through. Brush and scrub until clean. Work over a small area at a time and continue scrubbing until clean.

It is not clear to me whether the back of the trousers is cotton flannel or whether the trousers are lined with cotton flannel. If only the fronts of the trousers are leather-like material (i.e., chaps style), the flannel in the back of the trousers can be washed by following the above procedure. When clean and well rinsed, hang where they will dry quickly. If there are any metal or felt pieces which can be removed, it would be wise to do this before starting the washing. Also, if there are cotton fringes, test them for fastness by applying water to a small area before starting the sponging. If you find them not fast to water or any other part of the suit not color fast, it would be wise to have the entire garment dry cleaned.

How do you make a pound cake? Some tell me to use 8 eggs, and some say 10, then some say 12 eggs. Please tell me the amount of everything. Also what temperature should it be baked at and how long? I have an electric mixer. Wouldn't this be the best way to mix it? I. D.

Recipes for pound cakes vary considerably as to the number of eggs called for. Of course, since there are more small eggs to a pound than large ones, the only way you could be absolutely sure you were getting a pound would be to weigh them! Such exactness doesn't seem to be necessary, however. Pound cake carefully made by the following recipe usually turns out well, regardless of the size of the eggs:

- 1 pound cake flour (4½ cups)
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 2 teaspoons nutmeg
- 1 pound butter (2 cups), scant
- 1 pound sugar (2¼ cups)
- ¼ cup lemon juice or 2 tablespoons brandy
- 1 pound eggs (use 10), separated

Mix flour, baking powder, and nutmeg, and sift three times. Cream butter until soft and smooth. Add sugar gradually, creaming until very fluffy. Add lemon juice and well-beaten egg yolks, beating very thoroughly. Fold in well the stiffly beaten egg whites, then the flour. Turn into greased, paper-lined, loaf pans and bake in slow oven (300 to 325° F.) for 1¼ to 1½ hours. This recipe makes two loaves. An electric mixer will be excellent for mixing it.

Eggs, Fruits Star on Week's Market Memo

By Lucia Brown

FAREWELL to eggless Thursday and back to omelets, souffles and sunny-side-ups!

Prospects for egg-eating are getting better all the time, what with the demise of eggless Thursday yesterday and the steady drop in egg prices. The seasonal rise in supply has lowered prices about 20 cents on the dozen in recent weeks. Grade A's are 65 to 69 cents a dozen in most stores now . . . whereas, in December, the price was skipping around in the upper 80s.

Apples and citrus fruits continue to star on fresh fruit and vegetable stands. Both Eastern and Western apples are cheaper than in many months . . . Stayman Winesaps, Delicious, Jonathans and many others. The British are largely responsible for this, we hear. Ordinarily, millions of boxes of American apples are imported to the British Isles. This year, because of the shortage of dollars and tight living conditions, the English have cut down drastically on their apple imports, sending an extra flood of rosy, juicy fruit to United States markets.

Cheap now and always a treat for the youngsters are tangerines . . . one of the most satisfactory fruits for eating "out of hand."

Good, medium sized carrots . . . coming in from Texas now . . . are slightly cheaper than they have been. New peas are arriving from Arizona and Texas . . . of improved quality, but rather expensive. Cauliflower on sale now is very white and attractive . . . good for use raw in salads, as well as cooked. More spinach and kale in cellophane bags is seen. A firm in Baltimore receives these greens from the South in carload lots . . . rinses and picks them over . . . packs them in cellophane for better keeping, simpler handling.

EASY FIXING: Used any of those canned mixed vegetables in cooking lately? One brand brings you eight fresh-prepared vegetables, all in one can . . . a wonderful short cut in making mixed vegetable salad and quick vegetable hash . . . and delicious browned in a pan with roast meat.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

There's a Bronco in Texas, and That's No Hohokus

There seems to be no end to the strange names chosen for American settlements.

Mrs. Leroy Hafer of 3411 Varnum st., Brentwood, Md., recently returned from an auto trip which took her through Slippery Rock, Pa. She says,

"And it certainly was; we got there in the midst of their snowstorm."

Mrs. Helen Hamann of 129 Maple ave., Takoma Park, Md., contributes Pigo Eye, N. J. V. B. Williford of 1246 Meigs pl. ne. wonders whether we've ever heard of Slapout, Ala.

Mrs. Walter R. Bauguess of 236 Hamilton st. nw. says that one county in North Carolina boasts: Dog Creek, Horse Creek, Peake Creek, Grassy Creek, Roans Creek and Nathans Creek. (No Battle Creek?)

Mrs. Marion B. O'Kelley of 611 Lake Shore dr., Leesburg, Fla., says she never heard of a Chittling Switch in Virginia, but a section of Leesburg does bear that name.

And Rita Shovlin of 560 Lebaum st. se. corrects our recent Pennsylvania candidate from Post Carbon to Port Carbon. (On this paper, we're a bit Post conscious).

Al Heimer keeps Pennsylvania in the running with the news that a small section of that State contains: Bethlehem, Nazareth, Egypt, Emmaus and Lebanon.

E. V. Payne of 2715 S. Uhle st., Arlington, Va., confides that in New Mexico you'll find Loving, Pep, Hope and Moses.

The same State will also yield up a Pitch Fork, a House, a Weed, and a Witt (he probably writes two columns, because it takes a half-wit to write one).

And by the way—there's a Bronco in Texas.

Dawn and North Star are both in Ohio, according to Madeline Hicks of 3010 Wisconsin ave. nw., and I might add that if Madeline stays on the same route (U. S. 127) she'll soon be in Rome.

Dolly Settle of 1510 Webster st. nw. says yes, she knows about Amissville, Va., which was recently mentioned here "because it's right near my home town, Flint Hill—but does anybody know where THAT is?"

And David W. Harker of 1215 17th st. nw. recalls my special favorite among strange names—Hohokus, N. J.

I love that one, because it reminds me of the unsung newspaper editor who sent a reporter out to find a story to fit this headline which he had concocted:

Hocus-Pocus in Hohokus

PERSONAL NOTES

Duncan Wall, jr., 116 W. Woodbine st., Chevy Chase, Md.: I put your question about "the neediest charity in Maryland" to Reporter Dorothea Andrews. (She's my authority on Maryland.) Andy says the best idea would probably be to send your contribution to the Community Chest, through which most of the recognized agencies work.

ON BEING ONE

Mrs. S. T. Cabell of 48 Channing st. nw. demonstrates that I'm not the only one who can write verses to the District Line's first birthday:

A joyous day is Jan thirteen,
The weather should be fine;
For on that day, one year ago
Was born the District Line.

SEE STRONG FOR STOMPIN' SONG

"Thanks for running my plea about those two phonograph records," writes Linda Ann Harty of 900 Ellsworth dr., Silver Spring, Md.

"The response was wonderful, and I'd especially like to thank the first to come to my rescue—Tommy Phillips of WBCC.

"He told me where I could buy 'Dark Eyes' and explained why 'Stompin' at the Savoy' is not available."

Call Jerry Strong at WINX, Linda Ann. He says he knows where you can get the other record, too.

ILL WIND

The winter's icy breath
Can bring a man to death;
And likewise to the brink
Of dying for a drink.

Jerry Bohn.

BY THE WAY

Bill Thompson of 2120 16th st. nw. is obviously a devotee of detective mysteries.

He wonders whether the Private Eye Hospital on U st. is the place where Philip Marlowe recuperates from his numerous beatings.

Mary Worth's Government Girl Contest Rules

Details of the Mary Worth Government Girl Contest follow:

1. The Mary Worth Government Girl Contest is designed to select a model Government girl upon whom the artist of the Mary Worth strip will base the drawing of the heroine of his Government girl episode.
2. All girls employed by the United States Government in the metropolitan Washington area are eligible.
3. Entries shall consist of photographs only, one photograph from each entrant, the photograph to be not more than one year old at the time of entry.
4. Any kind of black and white picture (no color shots or tints) may be entered, including snapshots, but be sure to get one that does you justice and is big enough for the judges to see what you look like.
5. Pictures must be entered unmounted. No frames, no glass.
6. The Washington Post will make reasonable efforts to return photographs but accepts no responsibility for their return.
7. Each photograph must be accompanied by a slip of paper pasted to the bottom of the photograph, carrying the following information, typed or printed: Name, local address, age, home address, type of work, Government office in which employed, plus signature. (For convenience, The Washington Post will print a form every day which can be used as an entry blank.)
8. Winner will be used as a model for the comic strip and will receive $300 in cash, plus Bermuda trip (given by World-Wide Travel Service Corp., Colonial Airlines and Hotel Bermudiana). Runner-up gets $50 in cash. Next 10 get $5 each.
9. Decision of the judges will be final. There will be no correspondence of any kind in regard to individual entries.
10. Entries postmarked later than January 28 will not be considered.
11. By entering the contest, the entrant binds herself to accept these rules and conditions as here stated.
12. Entries should be mailed to Contest Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Check On Communism Suggested

By Drew Pearson

In earlier columns I cited some of the dangerous and more pessimistic trends in both the United States and the USSR which might lead to war with Russia. Today I want to deal with some of the more optimistic trends.

Pearson

Most people don't realize it, but in Italy exists the largest Communist Party outside of Soviet Russia. Italian Communists in the Italian Parliament control about one third of the votes, while in the French Chamber of Deputies the proportion is similar.

Thus it is easily understandable why the French and Italian governments, though vigorously anti-Communist, cannot ignore local Communist leaders. In fact, they have to cooperate with Communist mayors.

In traveling through northern Italy, Americans aboard the Friendship Train had to meet and deal with several Communist mayors. Many Italian cities are Communist governed, and most of the Communist mayors—though some reluctantly—came down to the train.

As far as I could see—and other American newspapermen who live permanently in Italy confirm this—many of these Communist mayors are only skin deep. They are either theoretical Communists or else Communists by reason of political expediency. And if popular sentiment shifted, they might shift also.

Why Italy Is Communist

In fact, a large part of the Communist population of northern Italy goes to church, gets along well with the parish priest, and obviously have become Communists for two reasons: (1) Because they are hungry; (2) Because they labor under the impression that they will get material reward. As one Communist farmer expressed it:

"The Communists are going to divide up the land. I now have 10 hectares, and under the Communists I should get 10 more, making a total of 20 hectares. That'll make me a pretty good farm."

Obviously this farmer hadn't the slightest conception of what communism was; for no good Communist ever talked like that.

"In other words, if someone did a better selling job on some other "ism" and at the same time produced greater material reward, there would be a pell-mell desertion from the bandwagon of Italian communism. And the same is true in France, and would be true also in Poland, Czechoslovakia and other countries on the edge of the iron curtain—were it not for one very potent reason.

On the Edge of the Curtain

In Czechoslovakia many people are itching to break away from Russia. In Poland a large segment of the population, including the army, regularly marches to the Catholic church. But these countries are under the shadow, if not the arm of the Red Army. The potent element of force enters in. People there are not free agents.

It is true that the Polish "secret state" which long fought underground against Hitler, now has been revived against Russia. And in Yugoslavia General Mihailovich's Chetnik lieutenants are again organizing in Bosnia and southern Serbia.

However, the big advantage in France and Italy is that those two countries have not yet felt the heel of the Red Army. Their people are still free agents when it comes to politics.

Hungry people, of course, will grasp at anything, and that is why communism has won such a surprising number of converts in France and Italy. It is also why they can be won back again when they are not hungry.

That, of course, is where the Marshall Plan and interim aid to Europe come in.

However, food and money alone will not win Europe back. The people of Europe will always take our food, but they will think we are bribing them unless we also take the trouble to sell them on some of the things this country stands for—peace, friendship and American ideals generally.

What most of us here at home don't realize is that the Russians have put over an amazing job of propaganda. While we, the greatest advertising nation in the world, have been both asleep at the switch and hamstrung by the nickel-nursing policy of certain Congressmen, Russia has been constantly hammering away against the United States of America until a lot of people abroad—even the non-Communists—believe this propaganda.

How Russia Depicts USA

Many have been led to believe, for instance, that the United States has no social security, no old-age pensions, no unemployment insurance, is completely controlled by Wall Street, keeps labor in virtual enslavement, and is helping Europe only as a bribe to keep it from going Communist.

In order to win back our lost ground in Europe, the United States has to do more than merely cram food down people's throats. It also has to engage in friendly missionary and propaganda work. Equally, if not more important, it has to give Europe new hope, new ideals, new goals to work for.

Last resort

With nothing much to do . . .
Because my heart is heavy then . . . And I am feeling blue . . .
I miss the good companionship . . . Of all the friends I know . . . And life is just as lazy as . . . The idle winds that blow . . . And so I start to read a book . . . Or use the telephone . . . To see if someone else in town . . . Is lonely and alone . . . Or else I write a letter and . . . I make myself pretend . . . That while my hand is writing I . . . Am talking to a friend . . . But if my efforts fully fail . . . I hurry off to bed . . . And hope for dreams of happiness . . . To keep me comforted.
